PRAYER USED AT THE ANNUAL MEETINGS OF THE SOCIETY AND AT THE OPENING OF MEETINGS OF THE GENERAL COMMITTEE

ALMIGHTY and most merciful FATHER, we give Thee humble thanks for the light of Thy Gospel. Make us more grateful for this Thy mercy, and more zealous for the salvation of all mankind.

Visit in mercy the Church of Christ; enrich it more abundantly with the grace of Thy Holy Spirit; and bless its endeavours to make known Thy Truth. Unite, as one man, all who are truly labouring for Thee. Disappoint the designs of Satan. Let all Christian Societies live in harmony and love; give them wisdom in all their plans; perfect Thy strength in their weakness; and direct their labours to Thy glory.

The harvest truly is great, but the Labourers are few! O Thou Lord of the Harvest send forth Labourers into Thy Harvest! Fill with Thy Spirit those whom Thou hast sent forth; and enable them faithfully and boldly to preach, among Jews and Gentiles, the unsearchable riches of Christ. Keep them from the snares of the world, the flesh, and the devil; deliver them from all evil; and make them wise to win souls.

Upon all the native converts whom Thou hast gathered to Thyself through Thy labouring servants throughout the world pour out Thy Holy Spirit, that as Thou hast begotten them again unto a lively hope, so they may ever be followers of Thee as dear children. Deliver them from all remaining darkness and ignorance; destroy and abolish in their hearts all that remains of Satan's kingdom; grant that their faith and hope and love may grow exceedingly; make them to be ready to every good work, and more especially to exert themselves for the salvation of those around them; that so, by their zeal and faithful testimony, by their holiness and fruitfulness, they may glorify Thy Name before their countrymen, and bring in unto Thee from the midst of them such as shall be saved.

Have compassion, O most merciful Father, on all those who have come under instruction, though they be not yet altogether Christians! Convince them effectually by Thy Word and Spirit of their sinful and miserable state; pour upon them the spirit of grace and supplication, and draw them to Jesus.

Take away blindness from the Jews. Let them receive Thee, O Jesus, as their Messiah, and proclaim Thy saving Name among the Gentiles!

Deliver all Mohammedans from the delusions of the False Prophet. O Thou True Prophet of Thy Church, enlighten them by Thy Holy Spirit, and bow them down at the foot of Thy Cross!

Pity blind idolaters who are kept in cruel bondage by the god of this world. Turn them from idols, that they may serve the Living and True God.

O Thou Almighty Saviour, Who by the right hand of God art exalted, and hast received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, shed forth His light and grace on this dark world!

Cause all Christians, we beseech Thee, to sow bountifully that they may reap also bountifully. O Thou that lovest a cheerful giver, let all grace abound toward them, that they may minister liberally of their substance to the making known of Thy Name!

With these our humble prayers, we join our praises and thanksgiving for what Thou hast already done in making known Thy salvation; perfect Thy work, O Lord; shortly accomplish the number of Thine elect; and hasten the coming of Thy Kingdom.

Be present with us, O Lord, at this time. Give us all a single eye to Thy glory. May Thy blessing rest upon our meeting; and may all our hearts be this day quickened and encouraged to fresh and persevering efforts in Thy Service.

We ask these mercies for the glory of Thy Name, through the merits and mediation of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; and would ascribe to Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, Three Persons in One God, everlasting praise. Amen.

Our Father, which art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, As it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses, As we forgive them that trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation; But deliver us from evil: For Thine is the kingdom, The power, and the glory, For ever and ever. Amen.

PRAYER USED AT THE OPENING OF MEETINGS OF THE FOREIGN COMMITTEE

Almighty God, our heavenly Father, Who hast purchased to Thyself an Universal Church by the precious blood of Thy dear Son, we give Thee hearty thanks that it hath pleased Thee to call us to the knowledge of Thy grace and faith in Thee, and to appoint our lot in an age and country where the true light shineth. We bless Thee that Thou hast awakened us in some measure to feel our responsibilities. We praise Thee for what we have seen and heard of the power of Thy Word among the Heathen; we adore Thee for Thy many servants who have gone out from amongst us to toil, and suffer, and die in making known Thy salvation; and we thank Thee that Thou dost allow us, unworthy sinners, to unite together in this work of faith and labour of love.

We humbly confess our past lukewarmness in this Thy service, notwithstanding these Thine inestimable benefits and mercies. For our Lord Jesus Christ's sake, forgive us our past negligences, and so endue us with Thy Holy Spirit that we may more earnestly seek Thy glory in the salvation of souls.

Grant us, we beseech Thee, Thy very present help at these our meetings. We ask, most gracious God and Father, for a constraining sense of the love of the Lord Jesus, and for wisdom to direct us in all our endeavours. Increase upon us the spirit of power, and of love, and of a sound mind. Give us faith and courage; give us zeal and patience; give us a single eye to Thy glory; and help us to bear and to forbear. The silver and the gold are Thine, O King of kings! Supply us with what is needful for Thy great work, and make us faithful stewards of Thy bounty, for proclaiming to the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ.

We pray also for all who are united with us in the direction of this sacred cause.

May Thine especial blessing rest upon our Committees, with their Secretaries, throughout the world. Bestow on them the help that we feel so needful for ourselves. Enable them to maintain the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, and ever to find favour in the sight of all with whom they may have to do.

Especially we beseech Thee to look, O most merciful Father, upon our missionary brethren. Draw out our hearts towards them more and more; and while they are bearing the burden abroad, give us grace to help and succour them by our sympathy and prayers at home. Bless every letter written to them from this house, and all our intercourse with them. We pray for them that they may be filled with Thy Spirit. Grant that the same mind may be in them which was also in Christ Jesus. Let them never lose their first love. Raise them above the cares of this world. Help them to deny themselves and to endure all things for the elect's sake. Give them the tongue of him that is taught. Clothe them with humility. Teach them to follow peace with each other, and with all men. Support them under spiritual distresses, temptations of the adversary, bodily sickness, domestic anxieties, and hope deferred. And so confirm Thy Word from their lips by the power of the Holy Ghost, that through them multitudes may be turned from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto Thee, our God.

We commend to Thee the missionaries' children entrusted to our charge. Bring them all to a saving knowledge of Christ Jesus. Defend them with Thy heavenly grace that they may continue Thine for ever, and daily increase in Thy Holy Spirit more and more, until they come unto Thy everlasting kingdom. Give all needed grace to those who have the direction of the Home in the discharge of the arduous work with which Thou hast been pleased to entrust them.

We most heartily thank Thee, O Lord, for those whom Thou hast already sent forth through this Society; and we pray for a yet larger outpouring of a missionary spirit on our younger clergy, on the members of our Universities, on those who are elsewhere preparing for this holy work, on the young men and women of all ranks and orders throughout our land. And herein do we implore Thy special favour on our training institutions, that their numbers may be replenished continually: and that none may go forth from them but such as shall be able ministers of the New Testament, full of faith, and of the Holy Ghost.

We praise Thee, O Thou God of all grace, for the converts, the native catechists, and the native clergy, whom Thou hast granted to us in our several Missions. As Thou hast raised the native Churches thus far, bring them, we pray Thee, to full ripeness and perfectness of age in Christ. Pour out upon them Thy Holy Spirit. Stablish, strengthen, settle them, and so enlarge their liberality that they may both maintain Thy Word among themselves and may make it known to the regions beyond them, till all the Gentiles hear the glad tidings of Thy love.

And now, O Lord God, be Thou in the midst of us to-day. Give us a constant sense of Thy presence, and may all our undertakings be begun, continued, and ended in Thee, to the honour of Thy great Name, for the sake of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Amen.

Ten days' notice shall be given in three London Daily Newspapers, and in two other Newspapers, of any such intended Meeting, and of the purpose for which it is called; which shall be deemed sufficient publicity.

IX. None of the Laws of the Society shall be repealed or altered, nor any new ones made, but at the Annual Meeting, or at a Special General Meeting called for that purpose.

(a) Twenty-four Lay Members of the Society elected at the Annual Meeting.

(b) All Clergymen who are Members of the Society and have been so for not less than one year.

(c) All Honorary Governors for Life, and all such other Governors as have been so for not less than one year.

In every year so many of the elected Members shall go out of office as, with the vacancies, if any, occurring among them during the preceding year, will make six vacancies, and shall not be re-eligible until the following year. The COMMITTEE shall decide which Members go out of office in each year.

XII. The COMMITTEE shall elect, at their First Meeting in every year, either from among themselves, or from the other Members of the Society (being Members of the Established Church of England or of Churches in communion therewith), a Foreign Committee, a Home Committee, a Finance Committee, and a Patronage Committee, and shall have power to fill up vacancies. Each of the said Committees shall keep Minutes of its Proceedings, and shall make such reports of its proceedings to the COMMITTEE as the COMMITTEE shall require.

XIII. The COMMITTEE shall appoint annually a Committee of Estimates.

XIX. Subject to the control of the COMMITTEE, the Foreign Committee, the Home Committee, the Finance Committee, and the Patronage Committee respectively, may delegate any of their duties to Sub-Committees elected from among themselves and may authorize such Sub-Committees to report direct to the COMMITTEE. Subject in each case to the previous sanction of the COMMITTEE there may be added to any Sub-Committee appointed under this law a limited number of Members of the Society not being Members of the Committee appointing them.

XX. The COMMITTEE may make Bye-laws and from time to time vary regulations as to the conduct of business by themselves and by the other Committees, and subject to and so far as not inconsistent with any such Bye-laws and regulations for the time being in force, the COMMITTEE shall receive and deal with the Reports of the other Committees, shall decide upon the countries where Missions shall be carried on, and shall superintend and control the affairs of the Society in general. The COMMITTEE may authorize any of the Committees appointed under Law XII, and with the consent of the appointing Committee any Sub-Committee to deal with and dispose of any matters and classes of matters the consideration of which falls within its province, reporting its action to the next meeting of the COMMITTEE. Subject to the control of the COMMITTEE, every Committee may make Regulations for its own government, and may appoint Sub-Committees and fix their quorum.

XXI. The COMMITTEE shall have power to appoint such Officers and Assistants as they shall deem necessary for the well-conducting of the affairs of the Society, subject in the case of the appointment of Secretaries, to the approbation of the next Annual Meeting. One, at least, of the Secretaries shall be a layman.

XXII. The COMMITTEE shall have power to acquire property of every description for the purposes of the Society, and to invest the funds of the Society as they may deem expedient, and to vest all or any portions of the property and funds of the Society in the Church Missionary Trust Association, Limited, or in such Trustee or Trustees, or corporate body, as they may in each case think fit.

XXIII. The COMMITTEE shall meet on the second Tuesday in every month, and oftener if needful. The other Committees shall meet as often, and at such places, as shall be by them agreed on. All Committee Meetings shall be opened with reading a Form of Prayer composed for that purpose, or one or more suitable Prayers.

XXIV. The Patrons, Vice-Patron, President, Vice-Presidents, Treasurer, and Secretaries shall be ex-officio Members of the COMMITTEE and of the Committees appointed under Law XII, and the elected Members of the COMMITTEE shall also be ex-officio Members of the Foreign and Home Committees.

XXV. Five Members personally present shall form a quorum of the COMMITTEE; and three of each of the Committees provided for in Law XII; in each case exclusive of the Secretaries; in all other Committees and Sub-Committees the quorum shall be three unless otherwise fixed by the Committee appointing. In cases of equality of votes, the Chairman shall be entitled to a second or casting vote. Every Committee may act notwithstanding vacancies.

XXVI. All orders for payments on account of the Society shall be signed by Two Members of the Finance Committee and countersigned by the Lay Secretary, or in his absence by one of the other Secretaries. The Finance Committee shall have power from time to time to advance to the Lay Secretary such sums for interim payments as may in their opinion be required.

XXVII. The accounts of the Society shall be audited and reported upon by Public Accountants appointed by the COMMITTEE; and Five Honorary Auditors shall be appointed annually by the COMMITTEE for the purpose of considering the Reports of Public Accountants, and of making recommendations thereon, and generally on the Accounts to the COMMITTEE once at least in every year. The Honorary Auditors shall be Members of the Society, not more than two of them being elected Members of the COMMITTEE.

XXVIII. Every offer for Missionary Service shall be referred by the Secretaries either to the Foreign Committee or in the first instance to the Candidates Committee under rules laid down by the Foreign Committee; and the Foreign Committee shall have power to deal with the offer, both as to the "training" and as to the nomination as a "Missionary" of the Candidate. Provided that no one shall be sent out as a Missionary without having been approved by the Foreign Committee, and without, as a general rule, having appeared before them.

XXIX. Candidates nominated by the Foreign Committee and accepted by the COMMITTEE, shall receive instruction in such parts of knowledge, and be prepared in such a manner for their future employment, as the Foreign Committee shall judge expedient.

XXX. Candidates shall consider themselves engaged to go to any part of the world, and at any time that the COMMITTEE shall decide, and be subject to such regulations as may be established by the COMMITTEE for the direction of the Missionaries; respect, however, being had to their personal circumstances, or to any previous stipulation made by them with the Society.

XXXI. Men who have been duly prepared and finally approved for Missionary work, shall go out, either ordained or unordained, at the discretion of the COMMITTEE.[1]

XXXII. The Missionaries who go out under the direction of the Society shall be allowed to visit home, permission having been previously obtained from the COMMITTEE. After having laboured in the cause of the Society, to the satisfaction of the COMMITTEE, at the Stations committed to their care, until age or infirmity prevent further exertion, such provision shall be made to render their remaining days comfortable as in the judgment of the COMMITTEE is suitable. The COMMITTEE shall have the power to assist also, in particular cases, the dependent Relatives of those Missionaries, who, by devoting themselves to the service of the Society, are prevented from contributing to their support. The COMMITTEE shall be further empowered in special cases to make such arrangements with those employed by them as they may think fit.

GENERAL

XXXIII. A friendly intercourse shall be maintained with other Protestant Societies engaged in the same benevolent design of propagating the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

XXXIV. All questions relating to matters of Ecclesiastical Order and Discipline, respecting which a difference shall arise between a Bishop abroad and the COMMITTEE, shall, in the absence of any tribunal having legal cognizance of the same, be referred to the Archbishops and Bishops of the Provinces of Canterbury and York, whose decision thereupon shall be binding upon the Society and its agents, and representatives.

The proposed reference shall be made by the COMMITTEE, through his Grace the Primate, accompanied by such explanations and statements as the COMMITTEE may deem advisable.

XXXV. The object of the preceding Law being only to provide a mode of settling questions relating to Ecclesiastical Order and Discipline as to which no provision has yet been made by the Society, it is not to be so construed, as in any other respect to alter the principles and practices of the Society, as they are contained in its Laws.

XXXVI. It is recommended to every Member of the Society to pray to Almighty God for a blessing upon its designs: under the full conviction, that, unless He "prevent us, in all our doings, with His most gracious favour, and further us with His continual help," the Society cannot reasonably hope to meet with persons of a proper spirit and qualifications to be Missionaries, or expect their endeavours to be crowned with success.

[1] Note based on Memorandum by Rev. H. Venn, 1839.—The Bishops of the Church of England under the authority of the law of the land ordain and send forth [ecclesiastically speaking] the Society's Missionaries; and in the event of their being appointed by the COMMITTEE to labour at stations within the jurisdiction of a Bishop of the Church of England abroad, it is the practice of the Society to apply to the Bishop for licences in which are specified the districts to which the Missionaries have been assigned. This is done on the understanding that licences will neither be refused nor when granted be withdrawn from the Missionaries during their connexion with the Society, except for some assigned legal cause.

STATISTICAL VIEW OF THE SOCIETY'S MISSIONS

NOTES

Col. 1. In the case of several of the Missions the statistics are furnished in more than one line in order to show what progress has been made in the matter of self-government, with which self-support is closely connected. "a" represents work entirely under C.M.S. authority; "b," work administered by a church council responsible to the C.M.S.; "c," work sprung from the C.M.S. Mission but now administered by a church council or other body deriving its authority from a synod. In the Punjab ("d") all work, including that of Europeans, is controlled by a central council responsible at present to the C.M.S. but constituted after the manner of a synod on an elective basis.

Col. 12. A station is a place where at least one foreign missionary resides regularly, or an ordained native with a similar status and responsibility. Different points of occupation in a city are considered as one station.

Col. 13. An out-station is a place, other than a station, with a resident native agent.

Col. 14. Organized congregations are normally those sending delegates to church councils which have taken a permanent form.

Col. 15. Communicants are counted again as baptized adherents.

Col. 18. Definite instruction is contrasted with mere church attendance.

Western India.—The Bhīl Mission, in which at the end of 1914 there were 138 Christian communicants and 487 adherents, was transferred from the Central Provinces Mission to the Western India Mission in April, 1915. This affects the figures in columns 16 and 20, both in Western India and the Central Provinces.

Ceylon.—The falling off in the number of adherents has taken place chiefly in Colombo and in the Tamil districts.

South China.—The loss in columns 16 and 20 is due to more accurate enumeration and to the destruction of villages during political disturbances.

Kwangsi and Hunan.—The decrease in adherents attributed in the main to a rigid revision of the registers.

Central Japan, Kiu-Shiu, and Hokkaido.—In the official returns of the Nippon Sei Kokwai the number of Christians on the Church's books is given and also the number of those known to the pastors, which is usually much smaller than the former owing to the frequency of removals in Japan. The figures given in columns 15 and 17–19 this year represent the number of Christians known to the pastors, whereas last year the returns were made from the larger list.

STATIONS, CLERICAL AND LAY MISSIONARIES, BUSINESS AGENTS, AND NATIVE CLERGYMEN,

On 1 June, 1916

 A STATION is a place where at least one foreign missionary resides regularly, or an ordained native with a similar status and responsibility, so that the place may be occupied by him in one year and by a foreign missionary in another. The main stations (where more than one) in the following list are prefaced by a numeral to promote facility of reference in using the index on p. lxxii. The post-town of each station, when it is known, is given in parenthesis after the name of the station, except in cases where the station is itself a post-town. Where not otherwise stated, it may be assumed that the stations which are not numbered have the same post-town as the main stations after which they appear. For Palestine, where there is no delivery of letters, it is desirable to address letters intended for the stations which are not numbered to the "care of" one of the missionaries at the main station. The figures immediately after the name of the station or post-town refer to the year in which the station was first occupied.

The figures after the names of the European and Colonial labourers show the year of their first sailing for the Society's Missions, or of their reception into connexion in the field. Missionaries' wives take the status of their husbands as concerns local connexion. The University or College of the workers is indicated after their names, and the nature of their work is shown in some cases after the date of their joining the staff.

The terms "Hon." and "Partly Hon.," in parenthesis, after the name of a missionary, mean that such missionary draws no allowances, or only a portion of the usual allowances. In the case of the Colonial Associations the missionaries have been selected, and, when necessary, also trained by the Associations, by which likewise they are supported in the field. The Canadian C.M.S. also has selected men and women for the Society's Missions, but they are sent out and supported by the Missionary Society of the Canadian Church, of which the Canadian C.M.S. is financially an integral part. In nearly all the instances referred to, the C.M.S. is responsible for all other than personal allowances, as well as for the expenditure which is involved in the maintenance of the work.

The figures after the names of native clergymen show the date of ordination as deacon.

The maiden names of wives of European and Colonial missionaries, and the year of marriage, when known, are given in parenthesis. In the case of each woman who was a missionary of the Society before marriage, the Mission in which she laboured and the year of joining it are stated; and in the case of a woman who was a missionary of another Society, the initials indicating the Society are given, as well as the country in which she worked and year of joining. Wives of missionaries are always expected by the Society to lay themselves out to do good among the native women in every practicable way, such as by cultivating familiar intercourse with them, educating children, and instructing the adult women.

The names of all missionaries in the field are placed under the stations at which they were working on 1 June, 1916. The names of those who on that date were at home, or on the way home, or on the way out, are placed under the stations at which they last resided, unless, in the case of those on the way out, they have been definitely assigned to some other station. The names under each station are printed in order of date, without reference to nationality, sex, orders, or other difference; except that the secretaries of Missions are placed first in order at the stations where they reside, and wives of missionaries are placed immediately after their husbands.

At the end of the list are given the names of accepted missionaries who have not yet sailed.

The following signs and abbreviations are used :—

* "Own Missionary," that is, connected with, and, as regards personal allowances, wholly or partially supported by, individual friends of the Society or by the Associations or other bodies whose names are given in brackets [thus ( )].

† Local connexion, that is, that the offers of service were accepted by the Society's representatives in the several Missions, or, in Canada, by the Canadian bishops.

THE ANNUAL SERMON

LORD BISHOP OF WINCHESTER
A Vice-President of the Society

"ENLARGE THE PLACES OF THY TENT, AND LET THEM SPREAD FORTH THE CURTAINS OF THINE HABITATIONS: SPARE NOT, LENGTHEN THY CORDS, AND STRENGTHEN THY STAKES."—Isa. liv. 2.

AN author of some distinction in the literature of fiction said the other day, speaking for himself and for a friend who is known throughout the English-speaking world, "We feel unable to write now; things are too big for us." There is reverence in the speech, such reverence as was more outspoken in the ancient holy words, "Be still, and know that I am God." "Let all the earth keep silence before Him." "Thy way is in the sea, and Thy paths in the great waters, and Thy footsteps are not known." Yet at such a time as this the true attitude of the Church and of her members is, I suppose, that of Habakkuk: "I will stand upon my watch, and set me upon the tower, and will look forth to see what He will speak with me."

Nor can this expectancy be wholly silent. There may rightly be some attempt to discern the signs of the times. Least of all can this be wrong, if in straining to see new indications of God's purpose we guide ourselves by remembrance of His works and "wonders of old time," and by the knowledge which He has given us of His abiding purposes.

The cause of Missions, the cause of the Gospel, suffers heavily to-day. The auspices may seem against us. Yet look again. Were things brighter, we may well ask, 117 years ago when your fathers took up, with the gallantry of Christian faith, the forlorn hope of evangelization? What in those days was the "home base"? What were the instruments and methods available? What were the open doors and highways of communication? The contrast is full of heartening suggestiveness. But, all the same, things are dark to-day. We must not deny it, nor ignore it, nor miss (as the world so strangely does) the signs of God's chastening hand. Missionaries in places are interned or impeded. Communications are poorer and more perilous. Reinforcements must needs be smaller, since many who would have been our volunteers have heard the sterner call of war. Some will never return to take up the purpose which in others, we hope, will gain depth and simplicity from the experience of earthly chivalry. In the ears of many of our women the call of suffering to be tenderly cherished is too loud to leave opportunity for other voices. If this were all, the heartening statistics of the year might well make you feel that there was much more cause for thankfulness than for fear. Your accepted candidates are only fewer by six; your contributions are actually increased by £24,000. Alas, we know that it is not all. We cannot forget that Europe, the great and age-long trustee of the Gospel, has become also Europe the great stumbling-block or scandal to it. What must the nations think and say of Christendom? "Christian" nations tearing out each other's vitals: Christian spirit, or the Churches which embody it, wholly unable to forbid or to stay the strife: force worshipped and triumphant: and, above all, a spirit of hatred, and even a glorification of that spirit, as almost the new commandment of the latest age: Christian ministers, if we may judge by reports of German pulpits (and are our own entirely free?) uttering words of deadliest rancour. These things must tell for evil, must perplex and baffle the friendly, must give great occasion to the hostile. The name of Christ is blasphemed through us. Heathenism may well reply to our missionary call, "Physician, heal thyself."

Perhaps there is more yet to be reckoned in. Are our own thoughts absorbed by the reports and anxieties and efforts of war? Are prayers which might have gone up for the missionary cause displaced for those which plead the urgent necessities and fears and hopes of this appalling struggle? The outlook is clouded: the hindrances real. Yet I know that I speak true when I say that to the question, "Are you discouraged?" there comes up from your hearts, genuine and unaffected, the answer, "No." If that reply were prompted only by the instincts of faith and simple duty it would be worth much, breathing the spirit and witnessing to the power whose "banner, torn yet flying, streams like the thunderstorm against the wind." But I would submit to you that it is more than instinctive. In a time of shaking the things that are not shaken will remain.

Can we already see grounds of reason which justify the instinct? My belief is that we can. That is our theme to-day.

(1) Let us consider. We have emerged from a period before the war of easy self-contentedness and apparent stability: one of those times in which men say, "To-morrow shall be as this day, and yet more abundant"; when "all the earth sitteth still and is at rest": a time when an enlightened present feels able to look back with complacency upon the strifes and tragedies of the past; when civilization seems to stand by its own equipoise and solidity. There are no times more dangerous than those. They put statesmen off their guard. They conceal the strength and possibilities of evil. They dispose men to forget God and to leave out of account

His providence. Threatening symptoms here and there, the forebodings of thoughtful and close observers, even a half-acknowledged feeling that things cannot go on long as they are, are not enough to affect greatly the general influence of such a time.

But the explosion comes, the volcanic forces find their outlet, and the lava streams out to deface and scorch the lands. The challenge to patriotism and the stimulus of response at first engross men's thoughts. But the conviction quietly forms that, noble as are the opportunities which the storm-time gives for individual or national prowess and patience, we are confronted by what is in its essence an explosion of evil; it changes all the values and credits; we cannot trust what we trusted, we must take stock afresh; we must strike deeper. Against evil rampant we look round for good. From a world of tumult we look upwards to God. That upward look is perhaps at first baffled; God seems silent or powerless; and we are tempted to deny Him, and to turn to the idols of iron and gold. But this is not the main effect. "Amidst all that," said a young non-commissioned officer to me, speaking with quaint thought and expression of the hideous mêlée of a charge against machine guns, "you feel that there must be a Supreme Being." The feeling grows that all this must mean something, and something great; else all is moral chaos. It is the very nerve of faith which is touched. Meaning or no meaning for the world's history and for human life! that and nothing less is the issue. And so it is that through the mists there is half discerned the mighty reality of the just, patient, and loving will of God. It is at work in judgment, but through judgment for good. God has a meaning through it all.

(2) That is one strong reason for courage—strong, but indefinite. Dare we go on to ask what He means? Surely we can tell in part by the effects. He compels us to understand again the moral issues. The old struggle of good and evil is revealed; the profound antagonism between them cannot be overlooked, nor disguised as in time of peace by a network of refined criticisms and appreciations of the better and the worse in all things. We see the evil; we can detect its roots; self and selfishness, individual and corporate; covetous desire; self-worship and self-confidence; the envy and hatred which selfishness breeds; the trust in visible things; the contempt of the invisible. So far as we see these things avowed and adopted by our enemies; so far as we can conscientiously say that we ourselves and our allies are against them, so far it is well, and we are at peace with our conscience, and grateful for a noble opportunity. But it is only shallow thought and foolish complacency which can stop there, and not go on to own that we too have had and have our part in things which, full-grown in our enemies, we recognize and detest.

For all the nations, and not least for our own, we have to ask what is the great antagonist force which can hold the field against evil, enduring it, resisting it, overcoming it? There is no answer but one. That force is the Kingdom of God upon earth; the force which He revealed, and wielded, and wields, Who came, in the power of it, to declare it and to set it up; the force which has its spring in love coming out from God, Who is love, to find expression in the life of man. Nothing else will do instead of this; not civilization, nor intelligence, nor culture, for evil may turn each and all of these into its agents and instruments. It is the force of the Kingdom which the Gospel proclaimed.

(3) But then there is a third consideration which bears specifically upon our particular work. Forced by the war to face, and not shirk the fundamental issues, we find of course that their scope is world wide. Far more than the Elizabethans we are in "spacious times." To "think in continents" as we were lately bidden to do seems as some one has said, already a belated thing. We can think no other than world thoughts, of world issues. The Kingdom is one for all the kingdoms and peoples. This experience makes us look back. We pick up anew our old recollections of the way in which the purpose of God has worked. It has gone forward by chosen and prospered instruments, Abraham and his seed, Moses and the nation which he builds, David and Solomon, with the monarchy which grows into an Empire, and becomes for ever the symbol of the ideal kingdom; Alexander and Augustus broadening life out and binding it into wider unities so that thinkers dream of a city in which gods and men are one. These are parts of God's ways.

But there is (more to our present purpose) another divine method even more marked and striking still, sometimes interlacing the other, sometimes contrasted with it. It works by catastrophe; its way is to release, through outward disappointment and failure, more spiritual hopes. Take the conception of the city of God; of the spiritual Jerusalem. It rises out of the ashes of the town sacked by Nebuchadnezzar. With the final destruction by Titus, it shows itself in fuller glory to St. John on Patmos. With the fall of the eternal city it acquires in Augustine's hands a new concreteness as the dominant reality of history. It stood in the world, but not of it; at the very time when the invasions seemed to be shattering all unity into fragments, it was there, a prophecy and a pledge of human unity in some far-off day.

And now we, who have talked so fondly of our "Christendom," and half identified it in our own thoughts with European civilizations (extended into the great English-speaking daughter civilizations), now, in presence of Europe's Armageddon, the huge collapse of its security and self-contentedness, do we not look out upon a world which is quite plainly henceforth a single arena, on which problems of universal interest are set to be solved, and issues are joined of gain or loss, life or death, progress or ruin, to—nothing less than the humanity in which all the races have part?

The surface signs of this have been abundant. The service of our Indian fellow-subjects tendered and given for an Empire which, whether or no it is beloved, is seen to respect and to do justice between its many races and religions: the alliance with Japan: the strong tension of the best American opinion about the moral issues and the immoral methods of the war: the transformation of the half sentimental relation between the Dominion and ourselves into one of conscious and resolute joint service to a cause of lofty principle: these all are signs on the surface of the increasing unity. But the matter goes much deeper than this. The world is challenged, by this awful catastrophe, to decide and declare by what principles it will live; to discover what forces it can rally against all too visible bulks and masses of material force and corporate selfishness. It has become fatally but gloriously plain that principles matter; that civilization cannot merely move by its own impetus, or stand by its own stability.

We may, I think, fairly claim that in regard of all this, the thought that has been ahead of its time has been that which has come from the mission field. Such comprehensive survey of world possibilities, world dangers, and world opportunities, as, to take a single name, Dr. Mott gave us in the decade before the war, went some way to anticipate what has now become palpable. If the Christian Churches failed, as they did, to make adequate response to such challenge, their failure was less complete than that of the nations. But that is of the past. It is to the future that we turn with straining eyes and beating hearts. What a wonderful opportunity for the faith of Christ! What a call to the barren to bear! What a challenge to enlarge the tent, to lengthen the cords, to strengthen the stakes!

A world-wide task and a world-wide conflict. Evidently there are two great ministries which the wide world needs in the name of Christ. They both touch closely the work for which we come together in prayer and thought. In both this Society can thankfully and hopefully claim a share.

(i) The first, least easy to define, is that of influence, Christian influence, upon the life of the nations, upon that which we call their civilizations, upon their historical growths, upon their national and international politics, upon the behaviour of the stronger of them to the weaker and so forth. We believe, with a belief which is stronger than ever now, that Christ is the fountain head from which justice draws its strength and equitableness, and loyalty its self-sacrifice, and patriotism its responsibility and self-restraint, and even war, while war lasts, its chivalry and honour.

If I were asked to name instances where this influence was being exerted (otherwise than by the mere contagion of upright character and disinterested service), could I do better than point to what has been done under the auspices of this Society by Alec Fraser at Trinity College, Kandy, by William Holland at Allahabad and now at Calcutta, or by his friends and comrades at Agra—work frankly and intensely Christian, and yet conscientiously fair to other faiths—work which feeds the springs and nourishes the root of civilization and character; work which does our Lord honour by showing His power to elicit and stimulate and purify the best in India's life? I know the honour which that work has won from the ablest servants of the State in India, not too favourably disposed towards Missions as such, by what they see to be its character-building results.

It is similar work by different methods and on a different plane that I saw done in Tinnevelly at Palamcotta and Nazareth by your own and the sister society in building and purifying village life in India. It is such work again, in a still more widely diffusive form, which is done in such noble missions of healing as those of Peshawar and Bannu.

The Kingdom of God is as leaven: and at home and on the world field alike we must do our part to help the leavening: to recognize and help without jealousy the work of the leaven wherever we see it: to own it as His Who redeemed the world, that the power of His redemption might win the world to be such as He from the first made and designed it to be, in light, and goodness, and truth.

(ii) But the Kingdom of which the breath is the Spirit Who breatheth where He will and of which every man who anywhere feareth God and doeth righteousness is in a measure a servant, has yet for its appointed organ and instrument the society, company, body, and Church of the Redeemer. He founded it upon the rock of His own acknowledged Messiahship, self-revealed and Spirit-witnessed in its supernatural and divine fullness, and He built and builds it of those who, one by one, with heart and life, make confession of His Name. It was the work of the devoted Christians whose tradition of faith and piety you inherit to witness, in times when the truth was almost forgotten among us English folk, for that to which now war and peace alike testify, namely, that this Kingdom, this city of God, cannot be less than world-wide, must have its gates open day and night, must gather into it the desirable things of all nations, must recognize among its citizens no distinctions (except for varying kinds of honour and use) of colour, and race, and sex, and kind.

It is easy enough, looking back, to see the crudeness of the early efforts. They were like those of children, feeling their way, finding their strength. We can see how they lent themselves to irony such as that of the honest and genial Thackeray; and that there was a certain truth in the charge that they went after blacks abroad, forgetting the abject intensity of white needs at their doors. But with childlike dutifulness and simplicity they held to their principle—or rather to their faith. They were out for the salvation of souls. They stood for the equal value of every human soul, not because all are equally insignificant, but because each is precious in His eyes Who clothes with glory the single flower. But, in doing this, they stood implicitly for the inclusion of every race in the city of God. The amazing century which has passed since then has opened out for seeing eyes the magnificent possibilities which this implied, the enormous range of its meaning, and the inevitable necessity of it, if faith in a world-Redeemer was to endure at all. But, if we do not mistake, the confusions and destructions of the war bring a new and stern compulsion to face the truth. If there are indeed world-wide issues of truth, and right, and freedom, there must be everywhere the witness of Him Who alone is Truth and Righteousness, Who alone makes free.

Words of a half-prophetic sort were spoken two years before the war by Dr. Van Dyck, and are quoted by my noble and missionary-hearted friend and colleague, Dr. Arthur Brown of New York: "It may be that disaster, and humiliation, and weakness must befall the Christian forces, and they must be driven to some dreadful battlefield of Armageddon to make them stand together against the united powers of darkness and unbelief."

How passionately this must make us long for what is not within any human foresight of possibility, the world-wide witness of a world-wide Church. We cannot accelerate it otherwise than by our fervent prayers: and by the cultivation of the spirit and temper (thank God so much more common) which across divisions owns brotherhood—by which we can converge even if the meeting point be far beyond the horizon. To do more might only shatter what we have. But let us, together where we can, apart where it must be so, keep doing the work of the Kingdom, keep bearing witness to the King, keep gathering in what the races and the nations have to bring, keep building the walls of the city with the open gates.

Hold on, then, with your beautiful and Christ-blest work. Keep your Anniversary in thankfulness and hope. Go out from it to persevere. You do not need for this such large and ranging thoughts as we have dwelt upon together to-night. The lives of the children whom you rescue from the pollutions and cruelties of heathenism into the innocence and happiness of Christian life; the women whom you build up into the purity of womanhood; the men to whom Christ through you teaches manhood, self-mastery, and patience, or who become in their turn His evangelists and witnesses; these are your reward, and it is rich: these are also your evidence, and it is sufficient, of the necessity and beauty of what you do. But God fulfils Himself in many ways: and I have desired, in a time of confusion of face and perplexity, to ask you to descry, indistinctly, I know, but not uncertainly, that even out of the darkness the light breaks, and out of our narrowing troubles comes some fresh largeness of hope.

PROCEEDINGS AT THE 117TH ANNIVERSARY

At the Annual Meeting of the Church Missionary Society, held at Queen's Hall, Langham Place, London, on Tuesday, 2 May, 1916, being the Society's 117TH Anniversary, The Right Hon. SIR JOHN H. KENNAWAY, Bt., C.B., President, in the Chair, succeeded by COLONEL SIR R. WILLIAMS, Bt., M.P., after reading of Scripture and Prayer, "The General Review of the Year" was presented, and, on the motion of Sir W. Mackworth Young, K.C.S.I., seconded by the Rev. G. B. Durrant, the following Resolution was adopted :—

That the General Review of the Year which has just been presented, together with the Report, be adopted, printed, and circulated under the direction of the Committee; that the thanks of the Meeting be given to the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Winchester for his Sermon before the Society last evening, and that it be printed and circulated; that Colonel Sir Robert Williams, Bt., M.P., be the Treasurer of the Society; and that the Committee be appointed for the ensuing year, with power to fill vacancies.

After which, on a motion by Dr. Eugene Stock, seconded by Miss G. A. Gollock, it was resolved :—

That this meeting of the Church Missionary Society renders humble thanks to the living God, Father of mercies, for open doors, faithful service under difficulties, and evident signs of blessing in the mission field during the past year; for His protecting care over missionaries in many dangers; for the spirit of steadfastness, prayer, and liberality among supporters at home; and for an income sufficient to meet the expenditure of the year and reduce materially the deficit of last year.

It acknowledges, with penitence, the widespread lack of a due sense of the sinfulness of sin, of a true appreciation of the all-prevailing sacrifice of Christ upon the Cross as the propitiation for sin, and of a faith strong enough to meet the demands of the present crisis. It expresses its determination to be instant in prayer and earnest in effort for the National Mission of Repentance and Hope, particularly remembering the share to be taken in it by the Honorary Secretary of the Society. Further, it calls upon its supporters in every land to press on to know Christ in the power of His resurrection, to receive the gift of the Holy Spirit for their work of witness, and to devote themselves afresh to looking for and hastening the return of the Prince of Peace.

Recognizing God's overruling hand in the world movements of recent years and in the searching and testing of modern life through the War it calls upon the Society not only to seize the present opportunities but also to prepare for the forward movement foreshadowed at the Swanwick Conference, which may well follow as the outcome of spiritual revival in the Church. To this end it suggests to the Associations that they should set themselves to pray for the labourers required, seek for individual offers of service, and devise practical plans for securing support from a wider constituency.

The following Meetings were also held in London in connexion with the Anniversary :—

On May 2, at the C.M. HOUSE, Salisbury Square, at 3 P.M. (for women), Miss de Selincourt in the Chair;

And at ROYAL ALBERT HALL, South Kensington, at 6 P.M., Sir T. F. Victor Buxton, Bt., in the Chair;

And on May 5, at QUEEN'S HALL, Langham Place, at 6 P.M. (Medical Mission Auxiliary), the Right Rev. Bishop Stileman in the Chair.

Addresses were delivered at these meetings by the Right Rev. Bishop Molony (Chekiang), the Revs. R. S. Heywood (Western India), Canon E. H. Pearce, Asst. Chaplain-General, Cyril Bardsley, E. A. Hamilton (Western China), T. Guy Rogers, C.F., A. W. Smith (W. Eq. Africa), G. W. Wright (East Africa); Drs. F. Johnson (Turkish Arabia) and J. H. Lechler (Western China), Major A. Neve, R.A.M.C. (Punjab), Dr. Catherine M. Ironside (Persia), and Miss D. C. Joynt (Chekiang).

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE

General Review of the Year

[READ AT THE ANNIVERSARY IN QUEEN'S HALL, 2 MAY, 1916]

"They which builded on the wall, and they that bare burdens, with those that laded, every one with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon."—Nehemiah iv. 17.

NEHEMIAH builded the walls of Jerusalem in troublous times. A less faithful servant of God might have laid down the trowel when forced to take up the sword. But Nehemiah did not so read the call of God. He had passed through a deep experience of Repentance and Hope; and he now regarded the warfare and the watching that came upon him from without not as a reason for lessened service, but as a call to double efforts. His fellow-workers were of one mind with him: every one with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon.

The Committee of the Church Missionary Society in these troublous times would ask their friends to face the twofold commission which they have received in the spirit of Nehemiah. They realize keenly how great are the sorrows, how manifold the difficulties, and how many the new duties and problems which have come upon our nation through the war. But they believe that the God Who commissioned His people to preach the Gospel to every creature is the same Lord, great and terrible, Who has called the manhood of our nation to fight, like the men of Israel of old, on behalf of their brethren, their sons and their daughters, their wives and their houses. And they have seen in this a call to an undiminished effort, nay, even to a hastening of their zeal to rebuild the walls of the city of God. It is the great Adversary alone who wishes to see the work of Missions slackened or abandoned, in order that he may triumph over the people of God.

The War: Political changes of the year

In Africa during the year under review there have been campaigns fought by small forces, but fraught with great consequences and affecting vast regions. Whatever the political future of the African continent may be, let the Christian Church not fail to get a vision of its spiritual possibilities. There are many important tribes, yet untouched by Islam, as accessible to the Gospel as Uganda, where men of faith and prayer may establish new self-supporting and self-extending Churches. Shall these tribes hear the sound of our guns, but not hear the sound of our Gospel?

In India the problems raised by the war are different. The valour and loyalty of India's sons whose lives have been given so freely in France, Mesopotamia, and elsewhere have excited a new admiration. Will it issue in a new spirit of brotherhood? This is the question India is asking, and it is expressed in the following verses by one of India's gifted daughters, Sarojini Naidu:—

> Gathered like pearls in their alien graves
> Silent they sleep by the Persian waves,
> Scattered like shells on Egyptian sands,
> They lie with pale brows and brave, broken hands.
> They are strewn like blossoms mown down by chance
> On the blood-brown meadows of Flanders and France.
> When the terror and tumult of hate shall cease
> And life be re-fashioned on anvils of peace
> And your love shall offer memorial thanks
> To the comrades who fought in your dauntless ranks,
> And you honour the deeds of the deathless ones,
> Remember the blood of my martyred sons.

Another serious question, of an entirely different kind, was raised by the repatriation of the many German missionaries working in India.

In Chotá Nagpur the Lutheran Mission, commenced through Pastor Gossner seventy years ago, was thus deprived of its sixty-five missionaries. With aid from the staff of the S.P.G. and C.M.S., Bishop Foss Westcott was able to give help to the Indian pastors and catechists in continuing their work; but here and elsewhere a heavy burden is thus laid upon missionaries already overworked.

The Moslem lands of the Near East are probably destined most of all to be affected by the political outcome of the war. A well-known British administrator recently remarked in private that the war will not improbably create a new spirit in the Moslem world. The contact and the clash of Moslem and Christian races, the new alliances with their intermingling forces, and the new antagonisms, have already accentuated the divisions amongst Moslem peoples, and will help to distinguish for them religious from political questions.

The past year has seen the cradle of the human race turned into a British camp, and the ruins of Persia's ancient capital have re-echoed with the boom of our artillery. The potential wealth of the fertile plain of the Tigris and Euphrates is such that it may soon see a material prosperity greater than in the days of Babylon, and a splendour surpassing that pictured in the "Arabian Nights." The little band of doctors and nurses recently working in Baghdad and Mosul are keenly watching for the first opportunity to return and minister to the spiritual and physical needs of the people. But the number of missionaries will have to be greatly increased if the awfulness of a new oriental materialism is to be averted.

Persia, too, has been drawn into the maelstrom of the war, and there also, in the future, will be an inrush of European influence, Christian or otherwise. Owing to political considerations, the missionaries were in September last warned to leave Ispahan. Some went to India, some came home. Later on work had to be abandoned first at Kerman, and then at Yezd. But in March, 1916, after the Russian troops had entered Ispahan, it became once more possible to re-open work, and within a fortnight of their entry Dr. Emmeline Stuart and a colleague had started back from India, and will be joined in Persia by Dr. D. W. Carr, travelling overland through Russia.

As for Palestine, it can never recur to its old condition, nor will it ever cease to exercise its fascination over Christian minds. Should the Lord delay His coming it would be rash to reckon upon missionary work there being easier in the future than in the past. The people of that land will not be brought under the sway of Christ except by Apostolic preaching of the Cross, by Apostolic zeal and holiness, and, it may be, by a return to Apostolic martyrdom.

Immediate effect on missionary work

The Committee thank God that by His blessing upon the silent labours of the Allied Fleets, travelling has been rendered possible. But two valued missionaries have lost their lives directly through the war. Miss Bull, a tried and loving friend of the Bhīl people, was drowned in the sinking of the "Persia"; and the Rev. J. R. Stewart, of Western China, a fearless son of a fearless father, was killed whilst conducting a funeral service just behind the firing line.

Many others connected with the Society have laid down their lives for their country, including Mr. Furness Smith (son of the Rev. G. Furness Smith), Mr. Burrows, and Mr. J. E. Robinson, all short-service workers; Mr. S. E. Hazell, of the office staff at Salisbury Square; and many relatives of members of Committee and officials. The Victoria Cross has been awarded to two sons of missionaries, Lieutenant Martin and the late Lieutenant Tisdall.

Helpful influences of the war

The war is bringing in a new spirit of mutual understanding between various sections of the community. The war service undertaken by so many missionaries and by several past and present members of the C.M.S. head-quarters staff, will doubtless tend to a wide diffusion of missionary interest in new directions. Bishop Price of Fukien, being home on furlough at the time, joined the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force, and was able to render valuable service on the Gallipoli peninsula. One confirmation was held at night in a deep gully on the left of the Anzac position, lighted only by two dim lanterns and the flashes from the cannon and the exploding shells, every man with his kit and rifle beside him.

In the mission field itself the missionaries are giving practical help to the Government as chaplains, doctors, and interpreters. The Uganda missionaries have received the public thanks of Mr. Harcourt, the Colonial Secretary, for their services, which included the treatment thus far of over 1000 soldiers in the Mengo Hospital. In British East Africa missionaries have acted as chaplains, the mission house at Wusi has been given up as a much appreciated sanatorium for officers, and help has been rendered in various ways by African Christians.

In the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, where the personal relations between missionaries and officials have always been friendly, the latter have not hesitated to state publicly that the presence of the missionaries is of positive advantage to the peace and good government of the country, and to urge their return with as little delay as possible after furlough.

In India the new levies of Indian troops include five or six whole companies of Christians from the Punjab, as many as thirty recruits coming from a single C.M.S. congregation. Several boys from Trinity College, Kandy, came to England and joined various regiments.

In China, since the capture of Kiaochau, the direct effect of the war has been small. It is not possible to say how far it may be indirectly responsible for the present unrest, showing itself by the declaration of independence by the southern and south-eastern provinces, but in any case China cannot fail to be an important factor in the political reconstruction afterwards. In Japan the European war echoes are somewhat distant, and their effect upon missionary work but small; though there is a perceptible drawing together between Japanese and English.

Kikuyu

The Archbishop of Canterbury's now famous Statement upon the Kikuyu question was issued just before the last Annual Meeting. As was to be expected, it was conceived in accordance with the best traditions of the Church of England. It took the form, not of an authoritative judgment, but of an opinion expressed for the guidance of the bishops under his metropolitical jurisdiction; and it gave advice to those bishops as to what they might or might not rightly sanction in accordance with the principles of the Church of England. Special advice was given upon three questions which had been raised in the controversy, and upon which the opinion of the Consultative Body of Bishops had been specially requested. Considering the widely divergent views of the bishops composing that body, their reply to the Archbishop's questions, which was unanimous, was a remarkable document, and forms the background of the Archbishop's own Statement. First, as regards interchange of pulpits, the Archbishop saw no reason to restrict the freedom of a bishop in the mission field as to those whom he might invite to address his people, or as to the sanction he might give to his clergy to address Christians of other denominations. Secondly, in regard to the admission of a devout Christian man to the Holy Communion, when circumstances seem to call for it, and when the ministrations of his own Church are inaccessible, the Archbishop unhesitatingly expressed the opinion that a bishop acts rightly in sanctioning such a practice. In both these matters the Archbishop closely follows the opinion expressed by the Consultative Body. Thirdly, as to bishops advising their own people to receive the Holy Communion, wherever and however administered, the Archbishop pointed out the danger of such indiscriminate advice, and the difficulties of discrimination. Having done so, he expressed satisfaction that the Bishops of Mombasa and Uganda had disclaimed the desire to give such general sanction, and abstained from dealing with the matter further. In addition to dealing with these three specific questions the Archbishop pointed out the confusion which might arise from the original proposals in the use of such terms as "federation," "co-operation," and "steps towards reunion."

The Committee of the Church Missionary Society had already foreseen some of the dangers pointed out in the Archbishop's Statement, and in June, 1914, had agreed to their missionaries joining in a Federation, on the lines of an amended form, which would have met all or most of these criticisms. But, as representing a Society belonging to the Church of England, loyal to its spirit and loving its order and traditions, the Committee made their agreement subject to their missionaries obtaining the concurrence of the ecclesiastical authorities concerned, namely, their own bishops.

The Bishops of Mombasa and Uganda naturally withheld their concurrence pending the issue of the Archbishop's Statement. They have since announced their intention of forwarding co-operation within the limits defined in the Statement of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and progress is steadily being made in this direction.

The aims of the Kikuyu proposals have been much misunderstood. From their first beginnings, before the conference in Nairobi in 1909, the chief end in view was to secure the highest standards possible for the work in which all the missions were engaged. It was realized that missions differed in their practice as to the conditions required for admission to baptism, the mode of appointment and training of native teachers and pastors, the manner of public worship, and the nature of their efforts to secure self-support and self-government in the native congregations. Those who met together desired to compare the existing practices in such matters, and to secure that the highest ideals and the most effective methods should prevail all round. It was never suggested that any mission should lower its standard in any respect, so that the possibility of compromise was ruled out from the commencement. Each mission was to remain autonomous, and whilst pledging itself to certain minimum requirements, it was to retain whatever beyond that minimum it desired.

The Committee take this opportunity of expressing their thankfulness to God that these issues should have been brought to public notice at a time when the See of Canterbury is occupied by one so profoundly acquainted with the practical working of the Church in the mission field, and so jealous for our Church's catholicity. They see also God's guiding hand in the loyalty and devotion of the Bishops of Mombasa and Uganda, and in the patience and charity with which those of widely differing opinions have striven to approach the all-important question of Christian unity.

The maintenance of a friendly intercourse with other Protestant missionary societies is one of the fundamental laws of the C.M.S., and the Committee cannot but rejoice in any steps which, without interfering with loyalty to their own branch of the Church of Christ, may strengthen the bonds of sympathy and brotherhood which bind them to all those who love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity.

Since the above paragraphs were written there has come the sad news of Bishop Peel's death through typhoid fever. Filled with the spirit of Christ and unsparing in his devotion, his memory will be an inspiration. But his deep spirituality and personal charm, his lofty example and tender affection to all his co-workers will be sorely missed.

Progress of native Churches

The war has given a new insistence to the old question, whether the native Churches cannot do more for the evangelization of their own people during these days of distress in Europe.

The largest group of C.M.S. converts in one district is found in South India, with 165,000 Christians.[1] But these are divided into several groups, mainly in Travancore, Tinnevelly, and the Telugu Country, speaking Malayalam, Tamil, and Telugu respectively.

The second in size is found in Uganda with 105,000, of whom the majority speak Luganda and inhabit the kingdom of Buganda; but with a considerable portion speaking other languages and spread over the protectorate.

The third in order of size is found in Nigeria, which numbers 75,000, of whom two-thirds speak Yoruba, and the remainder Ibo, and other languages, seven or eight in all. The next is in the Punjab with 24,000, speaking mainly Punjabi and Urdu. For purposes of comparison we may consider with these the 6000 Christians in the Chekiang Province, perhaps the most developed of our China Missions. When all these are added together a total population is reached less than that of the city of Leeds, and certainly with not a tithe of the wealth of that city. In estimating their powers these facts must not be forgotten.

These Churches might also be compared by their rapidity of growth, as a test of vigour, which would bring that in West Africa to the top of the list; or, again, by the proportion of native clergy to the Christian population as a test of the stage of development reached, when that in Chekiang would take the lead.

The actual missionary work undertaken by these Churches in some instances far surpasses the most sanguine expectations of past years. A study of the facts shows that if we would lead them in self-sacrifice we must make our own efforts upon an entirely new scale, for some of them are far ahead of us already.

A conspicuous instance of self-support upon a large scale is found in the work of the Lagos District Council. This includes about 22,000 Christians and adherents. This body supports no less than 153 paid workers in the settled districts and 137 evangelists to the outlying districts, including eighteen clergymen; and an army of voluntary workers besides. Not satisfied with this, they support one European clergyman at Christ Church, Lagos; and indirectly three C.M.S. European missionaries at the Grammar School and Girls' Seminary; and four C.M.S. missionaries in connexion with the Lagos Bookshop. Doubtless more might be done, and will be done in the future to meet the urgent needs around them, but where is the community of 22,000 in this country who will lead the way for these people in Christian giving?

Africa

During the year under review, the Government have consented to the C.M.S. commencing work at Kano. The work will have to be carried on at first under considerable restrictions, but the Committee hope that these will be relaxed in the near future, and that this may be the beginning of a more liberal policy towards our efforts to bring the benefits of Christianity to the Moslem population of the Northern Provinces of Nigeria.

The Society's missionaries in German East Africa remain cut off from communication with the outside world. In the midst of all the enmity caused by the war, it was cheering to receive from the secretary of the Berlin Missionary Society a message that the missionaries of that society were doing what they could to help their friends in the C.M.S., and that the latter were all living and well. Prisoners from German East Africa taken by our troops have also reported of their welfare.

Palestine and Turkish Arabia

None of the European missionaries have been able to return to Palestine or Turkish Arabia. Miss Lawford still remains at Nazareth, and is allowed to reside in the mission house and quietly minister to the needs of the people. Most of the Syrian pastors are also allowed to hold their regular services for the Christian congregations. The Bishop Gobat School is being used as an orphanage for Turkish children, the Nazareth Orphanage as barracks for soldiers, and probably most mission property is being put to similar use.

India

The term of the viceroyalty of Lord Hardinge which has just closed has been marked by wise and sympathetic administration, and on several occasions he has demonstrated his interest in and sympathy with missionary work. The C.M.S. Hostel at Allahabad, the high schools at Agra and Srinagar, and St. Thomas's Church, Simla, have all been visited by him.

Mr. Sherwood Eddy has been holding a series of missions for students and others in Palamcotta, Agra, Travancore, and other parts of India during the winter, which have been very largely attended. The number of inquirers which has resulted from these missions has severely taxed the energies of the missionaries at Agra and elsewhere, who long for more evangelistic workers, that they may follow up the work efficiently.

A notable event has been the opening of the new buildings of the C.M.S. College at Gorakhpur, which has now been raised to the status of a first-grade college (i.e. of B.A. standard). The Government of India has granted Rs 40,000 to the buildings, and Rs 1000 a month towards current expenses. In a most interesting address, the Lieut.-Governor of the United Provinces, Sir James Meston, pointed out to the Indian gentry present that the Government and the C.M.S. had both strained every nerve for the benefit of their children, and exhorted them to do their part also.

On December 18 Canon Sell celebrated the jubilee of his Indian missionary service, having landed in Madras on that date in 1865, after a voyage round the Cape lasting a hundred days. It was the year of Dr. Pfander's death, whose mantle as an Arabic scholar and student of Islam fell upon his younger contemporary. A few days before Canon Sell's jubilee, the Rev. E. H. M. Waller was consecrated Bishop of Tinnevelly in the Cathedral at Calcutta.

China and Japan

During the past year the China Inland Mission celebrated its jubilee, no less than 5000 baptisms having been the seal of God's blessing upon their fiftieth year. During this period they have taught many lessons of faith and courage by their example, and the Committee thank God for their fellowship in the defence and confirmation of the Gospel.

The seething political unrest in China and the indiscriminate desire for Western innovation have called the attention of many of the more thoughtful Chinese to the need of something deeper if the regeneration of China is to be effected. General Li Yuan-Heng, the Vice-President of the Republic, recently told the people frankly that in copying foreign customs they were "mistaking the husk for the kernel," and deprecated the light esteem in which the virtues of paternal love, honesty, propriety, and modesty were regarded.

In Fukien there has been an interesting advance in Sunday-school work, due to the efforts of the secretary of the China Sunday School Union, who has been visiting various stations, giving model lessons, and encouraging advance. In one school the eagerness of the children was such that each night on going to bed some of them asked, "How many nights before Sunday?" In other cases the children's attendance has led the parents to come to the Sunday services. This movement represents a new type of effort on the part of the Christians to reach the non-Christians in their districts. The schools have been divided into classes, many of which are being conducted by the Chinese themselves.

It is interesting to find Christianity in China, as in ancient Rome, penetrating the ranks of the Army. Two Christian soldiers at Ningpo refused to take the military oath before idols, and petitioned to be excused. When threatened with death they replied in the same spirit as the Christians of old, "We must obey God rather than man; we fear not the physical death, as our souls are safe; we would willingly lay down our lives for our country, but to comply with the President's orders would be to sin against God." Owing to their good character they were merely dismissed without further punishment.

The ceremonies connected with the Coronation of the Emperor of Japan during the past winter have revealed how deeply rooted is the old heathen worship in the Japanese life and thought. On the other hand enormous numbers of men throughout Japan have attended the meetings connected with the United Evangelistic Movement, which has embarked upon a three years' campaign.

The statistics of the Anglican branch of the Church in Japan show 1417 baptisms for the year. Of the clergy ninety-nine are Japanese as against sixty-five foreigners, the latter coming from the United Kingdom, the United States, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand; and their support from these places with the addition of South Africa and India.

Among the many deaths during the past year, special mention must be made of that of Sir T. Fowell Buxton, Bart., Treasurer of the Society from 1886–95. Sir Thomas was appointed a Vice-President in 1869, and, like so many members of his family, was a warm friend of the Society. Obituary

In the mission field China is poorer through the death of the Ven. Archdeacon J. R. Wolfe, beloved alike by Chinese and European, who passed to his rest after fifty-four years of strenuous service; West Africa loses promising workers by the deaths of the Rev. F. G. Payne, Miss E. Dennis, and Miss M. L. Commeline; Mrs. Bywater, after twenty-six years in Egypt, has passed to her reward; and the Society has lost valuable missionaries in Miss Bedells of Palestine, Miss A. M. Cox of the United Provinces, and Miss E. M. Read of Chekiang.

Of retired missionaries the Society has lost the Rev. Rowland Bateman, foremost evangelist in the Punjab; the Rev. C. A. Neve, faithful worker for many years in Travancore; the Rev. J. P. Ellwood, trusted adviser in the United Provinces; and others whose passing is a reminder of the triumphs of bygone years.

Candidates

It was to be expected that during such a period as that through which we are passing offers of service would show somewhat of a falling-off. Forty-nine offers of service were accepted (eighteen men and thirty-one women) against fifty-four last year. Of the men thirteen were clergy and two were doctors; thirteen were graduates—three from Oxford, four from Cambridge, two from Dublin, and one each from Durham, London, Manchester, and Sydney. Four of the women also were graduates, and two were nurses. Six of the recruits were accepted by the Colonial Associations.

Finance

The original estimate of expenditure for the year which has just ended was £380,069. Owing to the closure of some Missions on account of the war and the relief to the funds due to missionaries temporarily taking service in the Army, the Committee of 13 July, 1915, estimated that probably not more than £362,000 would be required, but the actual ordinary expenditure was still less, viz., £348,554. In addition, £12,781 was paid out of the auxiliary contributions of the year and of previous balances, so that there was a total expenditure of £361,335, as compared with £389,929 in 1914–15 and £403,158 in 1913–14.

The total contributions amounted to £382,404, an increase of £24,248 on those of the previous year. To this must be added £29,941, balances of appropriated and other contributions brought forward from previous years, making a total of £412,345, but from this amount no less than £51,830 (including the above £12,781) has to be deducted as it is not available to meet the ordinary expenditure of the year. There is thus a sum of £360,515 available to meet the expenditure of £348,554, leaving a balance of £11,961, which will furnish more than half the amount required to meet the deficit of £23,667 on 31 March, 1915.

The Medical Mission Auxiliary has been able to refund their portion of that deficit, £2444, but on the other hand there was unfortunately a depreciation in general securities to the extent of £2307, which nearly balanced the refund.

The net result is that (i) all the expenditure of the year has been met, (ii) more than half of the old deficit has been paid off, leaving one of £11,569 carried forward, and (iii) the balances of Appropriated and Auxiliary Funds, which will be available in future years, have been increased by £7593.

The Committee in the name of the Society would offer their heartfelt thanks to God for His blessing on the work of collection of funds at home, and the self-sacrifice of missionaries abroad, which has led to this result. They pray that God, Who has thus rebuked their lack of faith, will in the coming years send such offers of service and of money, that when in His good time the war may come to an end, the Society may be able to take advantage of the oportunities, which they feel sure will arise, for the extension of the work committed to it.

The Secretariat

During the past year two changes have been made in the secretarial staff at Salisbury Square, and the Committee have appointed the Revs. C. Mollan Williams and C. R. Duppuy as secretaries of the Society, and in accordance with Law XXI their names are hereby submitted to the approbation of this meeting. The Committee welcome Mr. Mollan Williams, who comes directly from the experience of an important parish, as vicar and rural dean of Ilkeston, and has been appointed to succeed the Rev. G. Furness Smith, upon the retirement of the latter. Mr. Furness Smith has served the Society for thirty-five years, and since 1902 as editor of the publications of the Society. He has discharged his onerous duties with thoroughness, efficiency, and self-effacement; and his sound judgment, his wide knowledge and accurate appreciation of C.M.S. work and principles, have been an inspiration to his colleagues and his friends. The Committee trust that he may long be spared to give the Society in an unofficial capacity the benefit of his able and valuable services.

Mr. Duppuy has for five years been serving the Society as deputy home secretary or home superintendent, and the Committee have confidence in placing the larger responsibilities in his hands.

It is with peculiar gratification that the Committee welcome the Rev. E. F. E. Wigram, the son of their former honorary secretary, who, also in an honorary capacity, succeeds Bishop Waller in the charge of the Indian Missions, after twenty-four years' service in the Punjab.

It was not without a realization of the immediate loss involved that the Committee agreed to release their honorary secretary, the Rev. C. C. B. Bardsley, from his duties until the end of the year, that he might become one of the chief secretaries of the forthcoming National Mission. But it became evident to them, as to him, that this was a call from God, laden with opportunity, and that they must gladly bear the sacrifice involved.

The National Mission

A National Mission of Repentance and Hope, carried through according to God's will and word and with His blessing, must intimately affect the Society's work. Repentance, following from the preaching of Christ crucified and leading to remission of sins in the Name of Christ, is the very message of every missionary (St. Luke xxiv. 47). And as repentance is the beginning of missionary purpose, so hope is the stay of missionary enthusiasm. The Committee call upon all members of the Church Missionary Society to pray for the National Mission and for its secretaries, that God may grant to His people deep repentance, simple trust in the redeeming blood of Christ, loving obedience to His holy word, and strong hope in the glory of God.

The Committee believe that here also lies the solution of the financial problem, which at the heart of it is the spiritual problem of self-sacrifice and of giving Christ the first place in our lives. Repentance at the foot of the Cross will make any sacrifice seem small, and Hope will make plans for advance seem possible. Then the Society's policy will no longer be determined by the dark aspect of human affairs, but by the bright prospect of the promises of God.

May the coming year see such deep repentance, such a true and widespread preaching of Christ as the one sacrifice for the sins of the world, and such a new and abounding hope as shall enable the Church of Christ with a new life and enthusiasm to build the walls of Jerusalem, even amidst the din of warfare, and to look for and hasten the return of the Prince of Peace.

Home Operations

The work of the Church Missionary Society is carried on under the direction of a Committee consisting of the following members of the Church of England or Churches in communion therewith: twenty-four laymen, elected at the annual meeting; all clergymen who are members of the Society and have been so for not less than one year; and all honorary governors for life and such other governors who have been so for not less than one year. At their first meeting in every year this Committee appoint four other committees. (1) The Committee of Patronage, which seeks to secure patronage and support for the C.M.S. and nominates for most of the important positions connected with the Society at home. (2) The Home Committee, which is concerned with all the organization at home for the collection of funds, the seeking of missionary candidates, and the circulation of information about the work of the C.M.S.; it appoints a number of sub-committees, one of which selects men for nomination as organizing secretaries, etc., and another deals with C.M.S. literature. (3) The Foreign Committee, to which is entrusted the administration of the foreign work, and the selection and training of missionaries; for these purposes it appoints a candidates committee and three group committees, one (Group I) to deal with C.M.S. Missions in the Far East and in North-West Canada; another (Group II) with those in India, Ceylon, and Persia; and the third (Group III) with those in Africa, Palestine, and Turkish Arabia. (4) The Committee of Finance, whose office is to superintend the accounts and financial affairs of the Society. Besides these committees there are many others, which deal with estimates, and medical, educational, industrial, and other sections of the Society's work.

The Society's work in the country is in the charge of associations for dioceses, archdeaconries, or smaller areas, which carry on their work with the co-operation and assistance of the organizing secretaries. Invaluable help is rendered by a large number of honorary workers in connexion not with these associations only, but also with branches of the Clergy Union, the Laymen's Union, the Gleaners' Union, the Ladies' Union, the Young People's Union, and the Home Preparation Union, and with Study Circles in all parts of the country.

The Hibernian Church Missionary Society has its own organization and officers. A few associations in Scotland are banded together to form the Scottish Auxiliary.

A serious outlook

In May, 1915, when the C.M.S. Anniversary was held, the outlook was distinctly serious. The accounts of the previous year showed a deficiency of nearly £24,000, and with the nation engaged in a life and death struggle, with taxation at an abnormal level, and with many and urgent calls on private charity, it was not easy to see how the situation was to be dealt with. The Committee realized that a repetition of the deficit must be avoided if possible, and decided in May that "the question of reducing existing work be deferred until the General Committee of July 13 . . . and that meanwhile no arrangements be made for the sailing of new missionaries in the autumn." The honorary secretary was asked to devote himself as far as possible during the year to the work of enforcing the spiritual issue of the crisis and further increasing the Society's income.

Preliminary steps

Preparations for the July Committee were immediately begun: (1) A letter[1] was sent to the country explaining the situation, and asking that a vigorous effort might be made to secure a more widespread adoption of the scriptural principle of regular giving, and that reports as to additional help likely to be forthcoming might be sent to head-quarters early in July; (2) the larger associations were urged to meet and consider what could be done in their areas, and conferences were held in three centres in England—Bristol, Leeds, and London—as well as in Dublin; (3) literature was issued showing what retrenchment in the Missions would mean; and (4) collecting material was provided.

The Committee's decision

With scarcely an exception all the larger associations in the country sent delegates to the meeting of the Committee on July 13, and their reports showed that a widespread attempt was being made to break new ground and reach an enlarged constituency. After a prolonged debate and a period of waiting upon God, four resolutions were passed.[2] In the first of them the Committee expressed their determination "to go forward maintaining their work in humble dependence upon God"; in the second they gave instructions that the expenditure in the year 1915–16 should be limited to £362,000; in the third they "urged upon themselves and their fellow-workers that their primary aim during the coming winter must be to share in the promotion of that renewed spiritual life in the Church which alone can find its issue in fresh sacrifice and service for the Kingdom of God"; and in the last resolution they suggested that further and extended attempts should be made to obtain new contributors, the aim being to raise the year's available income to £386,000, i.e. a sum sufficient to cover the year's expenditure and clear off the deficit on the previous year.

A two-fold aim

These decisions laid a heavy task upon the Home Department and the whole constituency. It was recognized that if it were to be accomplished there were required not only a sustained sense of commission from God and an expectation of blessing, but also thorough and carefully laid plans. A pamphlet, entitled "Aims and Plans, Winter 1915–16," was drawn up and circulated. This indicated a two-fold aim for the Society's workers and friends: (a) To share in the promotion of the renewal of spiritual life in the Church, as being the supreme need; and (b) To win increased support and break new ground.

Missionary conventions

With a view to bringing home this supreme need to the country one-day missionary conventions were held in 180 centres in England and Ireland. Some twenty leading clergymen acted as conductors, and a large number of the conventions were taken by the honorary secretary himself. The gatherings were arranged in most cases either for a diocese or archdeaconry, and they were followed in some places by conferences for workers and parochial campaigns. One immediate result was the formation of many small groups of friends to pray for spiritual renewal in the Church. A further endeavour to promote renewal of life in the Church was by the observance of Wednesday, February 23, as a day of prayer. A central convention was then held in St. Bride's Church, and wide use was made on the same day by many friends in the country of suggestions for prayer given in the honorary secretary's intercession paper. Arrangements were also made for gatherings in the mission field at which the missionaries and native Christians united in praying for revival.

A "Day of Prayer"

The second part of the two-fold aim, namely, the winning of increased support, received considerable attention. The organizing secretaries and missionaries on the deputation staff considered the possibilities at their annual conference in September. The committees of the larger associations held special meetings to devise plans for advance, and in many parishes a weekly giving plan was adopted, committees being formed to supervise the work of collectors. New penny-a-week and weekly gift boxes and collectors' registers and donors' cards were prepared and issued. The boxes rapidly proved popular, and during the year more than 27,000 were applied for. Altogether no fewer than 36,000 missionary boxes were sent out from Salisbury Square—a number more than twice as large as in any previous year. They were instrumental in increasing the contributions from many parishes. Only one example can be given here. St. Luke's, Harrogate, was already contributing to the C.M.S. more than £300 a year, and it might be thought to have reached its limit. It was decided, however, to try to raise an additional £100 by means of weekly contributions. The district visitors were pressed into the service, the parish was mapped out, and the scheme thoroughly worked in every way. The result was that a further £175 was secured, between 500 and 600 people contributing. Evidence goes to prove that the weekly giving plan has not only increased receipts, but has also been the means of increasing prayer for the missionary cause.

Widening the constituency

The receipts for the year served to prove that the pledges of increased support presented at the July Committee had been very generally fulfilled. It will suffice here to say that the total general income was £382,404. Of this amount £360,515 was available to meet the year's expenditure. Owing to the exercise of great care both at home and abroad, and to the temporary closing of certain Missions (Palestine, Turkish Arabia, Persia, and German East Africa) on account of the war, the ordinary general expenditure was £348,554, an amount £32,000 below the original estimate and £22,000 below the expenditure of the previous year. There was thus a surplus of £11,961 towards clearing off the deficit of £23,667 on the previous year's accounts.

The financial position

The following statement shows the position :—

Receipts	£382,404
Balances of Appropriated Contributions and other funds brought forward	29,941
	£412,345
Deduct Auxiliary Funds paid, and balances of Appropriated Contributions carried forward, etc.	51,830
Total available to meet expenditure of the year	£360,515
Expenditure	£348,554
Deficit reduced by	£11,961

It thus came to pass that the year 1916–17, after one or two adjustments were made, opened with an adverse balance of £11,569.

The associations

The plan adopted in 1907 of forming C.M.S. committees for diocesan or archidiaconal areas has met with such success that now with but few exceptions the whole country is covered. More and more each year these associations bear their share of responsibility in deciding the important questions which come before the Committee at head-quarters. They now have fifty-four representatives on the Home Committee. New associations were formed in 1915 for the archdeaconry of the Isle of Wight and for the archdeaconry of Ludlow.

The Home Department

The Home Department is responsible for promoting interest in the Society's work, collecting funds, and seeking missionary candidates. The central office initiates policy, controls organization in the country, arranges deputational visits, organizes conferences and summer schools, edits the "Gazette," seeks for clergy to act as organizing secretaries, and generally endeavours to co-ordinate the various branches of home work. Separate sections of the department exist for the Gleaners' Union, laymen's work, the Medical Mission Auxiliary, missionary study, women's work, work in public schools, and work among the young. (1) During the year thirty-two branches of the Gleaners' Union were formed and 3862 new members enrolled. (2) The Laymen's Union was reconstituted and several new branches were formed. A laymen's war fund proposed at the time of the 1915 anniversary brought in some £5000. Mr. T. H. Baxter, who is acting as secretary for this section, is now devoting most of his time to the work of the Laymen's Christian Crusade. (3) The jubilee of C.M.S. medical missions (which occurred in May, 1915) was observed throughout the year, and an effort was made to bring the claims of this branch of missionary work before the whole constituency. Many special services and meetings were arranged, and conferences were held at the C.M. House, and at Halifax and Sheffield. Efforts were made to reach and interest

Medical Mission Auxiliary

Voluntary Aid Detachment workers. The income of the Medical Mission Auxiliary was £42,886, a sum which exceeds the highest previous total. (4) As was to be expected, the number of study circles registered showed a considerable falling off, being 457 as compared with 800 before the war. A large number of other circles met, although they did not register. Five circles reported offers of service; sixty-five, definitely increased missionary intercession; and sixty, new subscribers and box holders. The sale of senior text books reached a total of 11,492 copies. (5) In September a retreat for women leaders was held at Westfield College to consider the message for the winter, and in February two days of united prayer took the place of the usual conference at that season. Lady Buxton, wife of Sir T. F. Victor Buxton, Bart., has accepted the presidency of the Ladies' C.M. Union for London. The Girls' Movement issued some 3000 copies of their intercession paper for use on Good Friday. The Girls' Special Missionary Union has become a part of the women's and girls' work of the C.M.S. (6) During the year visits were paid to 105 public schools and grammar schools and 92 preparatory schools. The head masters of all the leading schools now willingly welcome C.M.S. representatives and give them opportunities of bringing the missionary subject before their pupils. (7) Though there were slightly fewer branches of the Young People's Union on the register in 1915, a hundred more report-forms were returned than in the previous year. For the examination in the "Talks," 913 children entered and 814 passed. The department is endeavouring to get into more direct touch with both Sunday and day school teachers in certain centres. (8) The Loan Department continued to provide lantern slides, pictures, costumes, curios, etc., for use at meetings and exhibitions. The demand for "loans," however, as might have been anticipated, was not as heavy as usual owing to the darkened condition of the streets and to so many helpers all over the country being engaged in war work of one kind and another.

Though voluntary and independent (or self-governing) organizations, the Clergy and Lay Workers' Unions work in close touch with the Home Department. From 7–10 June, 1915, a number of members of the Clergy Union attended a convention held at Swanwick; and in January, 1916, a devotional gathering in London was addressed by the Bishop of Chelmsford. The London Lay Workers' Union was able to maintain its efforts, and reports a higher average attendance at meetings "notwithstanding the withdrawal of many men for military and other service connected with the war." The Union now has 629 members on its roll.

working closely in touch with the Parent Society it has its own laws and regulations, appoints its own officers, and controls its own organization. The total sum raised in connexion with its centenary (celebrated in June, 1914) amounted to £10,092, of which £2112 was ear-marked for new office premises in Dublin. Belfast sent a sum of £656 towards clearing off the deficit. The convention movement was warmly taken up and gatherings in connexion with it were held in various parts of the country. Miss Hollwey has been appointed honorary secretary in the Women's Department in succession to Miss M. P. Reeves, now a C.M.S. missionary in Japan.

Some outstanding events

The summer schools prove increasingly useful year by year. They not only cover their own expenses, but in addition to gifts to the Society's General Fund, sums amounting in the aggregate to £1825 have been contributed through them since 1904 for the support of summer school "Own Missionaries." The schools have also produced a number of offers of service for the foreign field. Arrangements had been made to hold the 1915 school at Ilkley, but owing to the presence of troops there the school was at the last moment transferred to Keswick, where some 300 members gathered together from June 25 to July 2.

Thankoffering Week

With one exception the Thankoffering Week has been observed in the January of each year since 1906, 300 parishes taking part on the last occasion. In several places the week is carefully prepared for and the proceeds are considerable.

Army Missionary Association

The support accorded to the Society by the Army Missionary Association continues to increase. Five years ago the amount contributed was £42; last year the C.M.S. share was £306. An effort is being made through the chaplains to win the interest of both officers and men in the new armies, and a special letter has been circulated to them through the Rev. M. W. Churchward, A.C.G., who acts as honorary C.M.S. organizing secretary for the Army.

Editorial and Publishing Departments

The total number of publications of all kinds and sizes issued by the Society in 1915–16 was 5,500,963, made up as follows: monthly magazines, 2,198,496; quarterlies and terminals, 2,123,617; books, etc., 54,640; almanack and pocket book, 93,000; pamphlets, hymn sheets and leaflets, 1,031,210. Among the new books were the following: "Called," by Mrs. Crawford; "The Church Missionary House," by Miss Irene H. Barnes; "Mary Bird in Persia," by Mrs. W. A. Rice; and "The C.M.S. Prayer Manual." There were also C.M.S. editions of four volumes for missionary study prepared by the United Council for Missionary Education. With a view to increasing the circulation of the Society's books and magazines, literature secretaries have been appointed in some 200 centres.

Candidates

The number of inquiries and offers of service during the year ending 30 April, 1916, was 302 (106 men and 196 women) as compared with 407 (185 men and 222 women) in 1914–15. Many cases went no farther than inquiry, but 102 (39 men and 63 women) were dealt with by the Committee; 26 candidates (6 men and 20 women) were accepted for training; and 49 (18 men and 31 women) were accepted for service, either after training or as qualified when they offered. The corresponding figures for 1914–15 were: cases dealt with by the Committee, 57 men and 85 women; accepted for training, 4 men and 36 women; accepted for service, 22 men and 25 women. Of the 49 accepted for service in 1915–16, 10 men were already qualified when they offered; 3 men and 3 women were accepted by colonial associations; and 2 men and 1 woman were taken into local connexion by the Society's representatives in the mission field. Of the 18 men accepted, 13 were clergymen or men to be ordained before sailing, and 2 were doctors. Among them were 13 graduates—3 from Oxford, 4 from Cambridge, 2 from Dublin, and 1 each from London, Durham, Manchester, and Sydney. Four of the women also were graduates, and 2 were nurses.

Both the College at Islington and the Hostel at Highbury have been closed for the period of the war. The few remaining men candidates, ineligible for war service, are being trained at St. John's Hall, Highbury.

Home Preparation Union

During the year, thirteen members of the Home Preparation Union sailed for the mission field. While the work among the men members has been seriously curtailed, there have been seventy in regular touch with the Union, and the women members have increased to 235.

St. Michael's, Limpsfield

Mary Summerhayes, daughter of the present director of St. Michael's, Limpsfield (the C.M. Children's Home), was first in all England in the Junior Oxford Local Examinations. There are now 149 children in the school, including 29 in the nursery home. A waiting list of 40 tells of the popularity of the school.

Secretarial changes

Several changes took place in the secretariat. The Rev. G. Furness Smith has tendered his resignation under the superannuation rule, and has been succeeded as editorial secretary by the Rev. C. Mollan Williams, vicar and rural dean of Ilkeston. Mr. Furness Smith had served the Society for thirty-five years in all. For five years from 1881 he was organizing secretary; then, after a short time as acting secretary, he was assistant secretary for six years. In 1893 he became a full secretary of the Society, and in 1902 he succeeded Dr. Eugene Stock as editorial secretary. During Mr. Furness Smith's tenure of that office, the Committee say in the resolution which they passed on his retirement, "he has faithfully and powerfully reflected the views of the Committee in the pages of the 'Review' and has maintained, and even increased, the high standard of the Society's literature in general."

The Rev. C. R. Duppuy who was appointed deputy home secretary in 1911, and home superintendent in 1915, has now been appointed home secretary. Since Bishop Ingham resigned in 1912 Mr. Duppuy has been in charge of the Home Department.

The Rev. E. H. M. Waller resigned his position as secretary in charge of the Society's Missions in Persia, India, and Ceylon, on his appointment as Bishop of Tinnevelly and Madura. The Rev. E. F. E. Wigram, eldest son of the late Prebendary F. E. Wigram (honorary secretary of the Society from 1880 to 1895) has been appointed in Mr. Waller's place, with the status of departmental secretary. Mr. Wigram had been an honorary missionary of the Society in the Punjab since 1891, and an honorary canon of Lahore Cathedral since 1912. He has, however, resigned his canonry.

In March, 1916, leave of absence until December 31 was given to the honorary secretary, in order that he might accept an invitation to act as one of the secretaries of the National Mission.

The Rev. H. Pegg has resigned his position as assistant secretary for the Gleaners' Union, on his appointment to St. Paul's, Cliftonville. During his five years' tenure of the office 303 new branches were formed and 27,300 new members enrolled. The Rev. L. B. Butcher has assumed charge of the Gleaners' Union in addition to his duties in the missionary study department. The Rev. Douglas Trimmer has been welcomed as an honorary assistant in the young people's department.

Organizing Secretaries

The organizing secretaries not only arrange for the deputations for sermons and meetings in their districts, but they have a large share in interpreting the Committee's policy and plans to the country, and in promoting the efficiency of parochial organization for the cause of missions. Five of them have resigned during the year:—The Rev. J. W. Augur, Ripon and Wakefield; the Rev. F. S. Golden, Durham and Newcastle; the Rev. H. G. Green, York and Sheffield; the Rev. C. F. Jones, Lincoln and part of Southwell, after twenty years' service; and the Rev. W. R. Cole, Organizing Secretary for the M.M.A. in the North-West of England. All five have been presented to benefices. The following new appointments have been made: The Rev. F. Appleton, to Ripon and Wakefield; the Rev. T. J. Ison, formerly of the Western India Mission, to York and Sheffield; the Rev. F. Mellows, to Durham and Newcastle; and the Rev. L. C. Peto, to Lincoln and part of Southwell. No successor to Mr. Cole is being appointed for the present.

Alterations in the Society's Laws

At a special meeting of members convened on February 8 certain alterations in the Laws of the Society (proposed by a sub-committee appointed to consider the work of the office) were sanctioned. The Committee of Correspondence will in future be known as the "Foreign Committee," and the Funds and Home Organization Committee as the "Home Committee." The five standing Committees are reduced to four, the Estimates Committee being omitted from the list. The duty of seeking for candidates is now entrusted to the Home Committee.

Obituary

The Society has suffered the loss by death of six Vice-Presidents, four Honorary Life Governors and four Honorary Life Members. The Vice-Presidents were the following: The Bishop of Kilmore (Dr. Elliott), Bishop O'Sullivan (formerly of Tuam), Dr. T. W. Jex-Blake (formerly Dean of Wells), Archdeacon T. J. Madden, Archdeacon J. R. Wolfe, and Sir T. Fowell Buxton, Bt., G.C.M.G. The Honorary Life Governors called to their rest were the Rev. S. Bott, the Rev. Canon Gilmore, Mr. T. F. Allison, and Mr. J. Magee. The Honorary Life Members who died were Miss R. E. Dugdale, Miss Anna Fenn, Mrs. Handley C. G. Moule, and Miss M. Walsh.

Patronage

The office of Vice-President has been accepted by the Archbishop of Dublin (Dr. Bernard), the Bishop of Hull (Dr. Gurdon), the Bishop of Ossory (Dr. Gregg), and the Bishop of Tinnevelly and Madura (Dr. Waller); and the Committee have appointed to the same office Sir T. F. Victor Buxton, Bt.; the Hon. Sir George E. Knox; the Hon. Sir Arthur Lawley, G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., K.C.M.G.; and the Rev. Canon E. Sell, D.D.

The following have been appointed Honorary Life Governors: The Rev. Prebendary E. A. Eardley Wilmot (London), the Rev. A. J. Easter (Croydon), the Rev. J. Howell (Derby), F. Batchelor, Esq. (Greystones, Ireland), and J. P. Hargreaves, Esq. (Birkenhead).

The Committee have also appointed the following as Honorary Life Members: Miss K. Brookes (Leamington), Miss C. E. Cooke (Paddington), Mrs. Elliott (Godstone), Mrs. Foster (Woking), Miss B. B. de Lasalle (London), and Miss E. E. Newton (Derby).

The Colonial Associations

The Colonial C.M.S. Associations in Australasia were set on foot as a result of a visit from Dr. Eugene Stock and the Rev. R. W. Stewart, who were sent as a deputation by the Committee of the Society in 1892. The New South Wales C.M. Auxiliary, which had existed since 1825, was then reconstituted, and new associations were formed for Victoria (with which Tasmania and South and West Australia afterwards combined) and New Zealand. These associations accept, train, and send forth candidates for missionary work in C.M.S. and other fields, and are responsible for their support. They have sent to the C.M.S. field ninety missionaries (excluding wives of missionaries), namely, thirty-six from the New South Wales Association, forty from the Victoria Association, and four from the New Zealand Association, now known as the New Zealand C.M.S.

In Canada, Wycliffe College, Toronto, formed a missionary association in 1888, which maintained men in Japan and in North-West Canada. In 1895 this gave place to a Canadian Church Missionary Association, afterwards called the Canadian C.M.S., and the missionaries previously sent out by Wycliffe College were added to the Society's staff. The Canadian C.M.S. is financially now an integral part of the Missionary Society of the Canadian Church, which sends out and supports the missionaries. Since the formation of the Canadian Church Missionary Association twenty-two of its missionaries have joined the C.M.S. staff, but many of these are now working in India, China, and Japan, in spheres which are not, though some of them were, a part of C.M.S. Missions, and their work is administered by the M.S.C.C.

In 1895 several parishes in Cape Colony which supported the C.M.S. formed themselves into a South Africa Association, which is analogous rather to diocesan or archidiaconal associations in England than to the Australasian associations. The association is responsible for the personal allowances (in whole or in part) of a number of missionaries, in the same way as parishes or unions in the United Kingdom having "own missionaries." Candidates for missionary service are sent to England for training and acceptance.

The West Indian C.M.S. Council, which was constituted in 1897, selects West Indian agents for service in West Africa, and superintends their preparation at the Mico College in Jamaica. It is not responsible for their support.

I. NEW SOUTH WALES

THE New South Wales Association has twenty-nine missionaries connected with the Church Missionary Society, namely, eight in East Africa, one in Uganda, two in Egypt, one in the Sudan, one in Palestine, two in South India, two in Ceylon, one in South China, one in Hunan, six in Fukien, three in Chekiang, and one in Western China. The names added to the list during the year under review have been the Rev. and Mrs. D. Haultain (East Africa), Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Bateman (Egypt), and Miss R. A. McIntosh (Chekiang). Miss S. A. Plumb, an accepted missionary, has resigned. Miss A. E. Jones, who had been accepted in 1914, sailed in 1915 for the Western China Mission. The association, conjointly with the association in Victoria, supports nine workers among the aborigines in the Northern Territory and the Chinese in Victoria.

There are sixty branches of the Gleaners' Union in New South Wales, 110 Sowers' Bands, and thirty-eight missionary bands for boys and girls. The aggregate membership of these organizations is about 4800. A decided increase of interest was discernible in the country dioceses; study circles grew in membership; conventions were held with happy results; and general advance on all hands is reported. The Rev. A. J. H. Priest has been appointed home secretary of the association.

II. VICTORIA, SOUTH AUSTRALIA, WEST AUSTRALIA, AND TASMANIA

THE Rev. T. L. Lawrence, Miss H. F. H. Beevor, and Miss M. M. Miller were accepted as missionaries of the Victoria Association in 1915, and Mr. Lawrence and Miss Miller sailed for the Uganda Mission. On the other hand Miss D. M. Carr, an accepted missionary, resigned. The association has now thirty-five missionaries connected with the C.M.S. Three of them are in East Africa, three in Uganda, two in the Sudan, one in Turkish Arabia, three in the Punjab, two in the United Provinces, one in the Central Provinces, five in Bengal and Bihar, one in Travancore, one in South China, six in Fukien, four in Chekiang, two in Western China, and there is one who has not yet sailed. In addition the association has seven missionaries on the staff of the C.E.Z.M.S. and, as already mentioned, it combines with the association in New South Wales to support nine workers in Australia.

Summer schools were held at Brighton in South Australia and Geelong, and several conventions were also conducted. The income of the association in 1915 amounted to £7641, as compared with £8774 in the previous year, leaving a deficit of £1061 to be added to one of £1262 with which 1914 opened. The committee have consequently resolved not to accept any more candidates until the financial situation has shown marked improvement.

III. NEW ZEALAND

THE New Zealand Association, or, as it is now called, the New Zealand Church Missionary Society, has eight missionaries on the staff of the C.M.S., one in the Northern Provinces of Nigeria, two in the Punjab, one in the United Provinces, one in Ceylon, two in Chekiang, and one in Central Japan. Miss G. L. F. Opie sailed for Ceylon during the year, and the Rev. and Mrs. R. de Lambert resigned. Dr. C. F. Strange having taken up war service, Dr. Carrington has been accepted for temporary service in his stead at Hangchow. Two men and seven single women missionaries of the New Zealand C.M.S. are working among the Maoris, or in Melanesia, or under the C.E.Z.M.S.

There are thirty-five branches of the Gleaners' Union in New Zealand, with a total membership of 1200, and nineteen Sowers' Bands. The receipts (£4108) of the association in 1915 exceeded those of 1914 by £1069; part of the increase was due to a sum of £700 specially contributed for the purpose of removing the deficit of £535 with which the year opened and sending missionaries to the field.

IV. CANADA

THE Canadian C.M.S. is now practically merged in the Missionary Society of the Canadian Church, but it still has three missionaries on the C.M.S. staff, two of them in East Africa and one in Egypt, besides two in local connexion in the diocese of Mackenzie River.

V. SOUTH AFRICA

THE South Africa Association sends its candidates to England for training and acceptance. It supports one missionary in each of the following C.M.S. Missions: Western Equatorial Africa, East Africa, Turkish Arabia, United Provinces, and Fukien; two in South China, Chekiang, Western China, and Central Japan; and three in South India—making a total of sixteen.

VI. WEST INDIES

THE West Indian agents of the C.M.S., who have been trained under the West Indian C.M.S. Council at the Lady Mico College, Jamaica, are: Mr. L. A. Lennon, in the Yoruba Mission; Messrs. W. E. Blackett, W. A. Brown, R. A. Llewellyn, T. E. McKay, and J. B. Stewart, in the Niger Mission; and the Rev. W. A. Thompson, and Messrs. T. E. Douglas, and H. H. Simpson, in the Northern Provinces of Nigeria. Two students are at present under training.

THE WORLD

The population of the world is estimated at 1,623,000,000. Of these 495,000,000 are said to be Christians (240,000,000 Roman Catholics, 105,000,000 Greeks, and 150,000,000 Protestants); 10,000,000 Jews; 200,000,000 Mohammedans; and 918,000,000 heathen. About two-thirds of the people in the world do not profess or call themselves Christians, while it is probably true that something like one-half have never heard the Gospel, although the whole world, with the exception of Arabia and parts of Central Asia, is more or less open to missionary effort.

The Protestant missionaries connected with societies in Europe, America, Africa, Asia, and Australia in 1912 numbered 24,092. Of these 6769 were ordained men; 5069 were laymen; 6286 were wives of missionaries; and 5968 were single women. The number of ordained Protestant natives was 5941; of other native Christian helpers, 111,862; and of adherents of the Missions, 6,055,425.[1]

Effect of the war on mission work

At the time when this chapter is being written the end of the awful war which is being waged between so many of the nations of the world is not in sight. The area of the conflict has been widened since 1914 by Italy, Bulgaria, and Portugal being drawn into the fray; the intensity of the struggle and the appalling sacrifice of human life have if anything increased. The effect of the war is felt far and wide. The added perils of ocean travel have been sadly exemplified in the loss of many lives, including those of two C.M.S. missionaries, and the strong and clamant call of King and country has led many missionaries, as well as others who under ordinary circumstances would have sailed to take part in the spiritual conflict in the mission field, to join the forces as chaplains, doctors, nurses, or combatants,[2] and has produced an embarrassing shortage in the missionary staff.

[1] "C.M. Rev." (on the authority of the Rev. Dr. L. Meyer), March, 1913, p. 186.

[2] Of those on the foreign staff of the Society when the war broke out 15, including Bishop Price of Fukien (see "C.M. Rev.," Feb., 1916, pp. 87, ff.), are serving as chaplains, 17 as doctors, 5 as nurses, 1 in combatant rank, and 4 in Red Cross work, etc., and 40 of those on the home staff (3 clergymen, 2 doctors, and 35 laymen) are also engaged in war service. Bishop Durrant of Lahore, a former C.M.S. missionary, paid a visit to the Forces in Mesopotamia; he was present at the battle at Kut-el-Amara in September, 1915, and has been mentioned in dispatches ("C.M. Rev.," Feb., 1916, p. 122; "Gaz.," ib., p. 49). Bishop Gwynne of Khartoum, another former C.M.S. missionary, is Assistant Chaplain General. The Rev. J. R. Stewart of the Western China Mission, has been killed while engaged as temporary Chaplain of the Forces. Two former members of the Society's staff engaged as combatants have also been killed, namely, Sergeant J. E. Robinson, of the Palestine Mission, and Mr. S. E. B. Hazell, of the C.M. House. A son of the Rev. J. Martin, of the Fukien Mission, and a son of the Rev. Dr. W. St. Clair Tisdall, who for many years was a missionary of the Society in India and Persia, have been awarded the Victoria Cross.

As concerns finances happily there has been less falling off. The chapter on Home Operations has explained the position as concerns the Church Missionary Society. Other societies both in England and America have much for which to be thankful. The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel had in 1915 an income within £10,000 of the highest in its history; the London Missionary Society, faced with the possibility of having to abandon its work in Calcutta and Mirzapur and reduce that in the South Seas, owing to lack of funds, received in a single week almost the whole of the £10,000 required to avert such a disaster; the income of the Wesleyan Missionary Society was £40,000 greater than in the previous year; and that of the China Inland Mission also showed advance.

Promotion of Christian unity

In the midst of the turmoil of war the strivings after Christian unity which have been so marked a feature of the present century have not been entirely intermitted. The World Student Movement has done much, and may do more, to allay bitterness, and Dr. J. R. Mott tells how he has heard "English and Scotch praying for the Germans, and Germans pouring out their prayers for their brothers in missionary work and in the Student Movement." In the United States of America an important Conference on Faith and Order was held at Garden City, Long Island, in January, 1916,[1] and in the following month a Latin-America Conference took place at Panama, not, however, without some opposition on the part of a section of the Protestant Episcopal Church to their mission board taking any share in the proceedings.[2] At home an interim report, entitled "Towards Christian Unity," has been published by the sub-committee appointed by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York and by representatives of the English Free Churches' Commissions in connexion with a proposed Conference on Faith and Order similar to that just spoken of as held in the United States.[3]

Medical missionaries

According to "Medical Missions at Home and Abroad" the number of medical missionaries engaged by British societies holding British degrees or diplomas in 1915 was 439, as compared with 448 in 1914, and 451 in 1913. The C.M.S. is credited with seventy-nine and the United Free Church of Scotland with seventy, no other society having more than thirty-seven. The list includes seventy-seven who are engaged in temporary war service, of whom seventeen belong to the C.M.S., nine being the highest number of any other society.

AFRICA

Africa is equal in area to Europe and North America combined, and comprises nearly 12,000,000 square miles. Its population is estimated at 180,000,000; about 35,981,000 live in the British spheres, which cover an area of 2,233,478 square miles. There are said to be 843 languages and dialects spoken in Africa, 500 of which have never been reduced to writing.

One-sixth of the non-Christian population of the world live in Africa, the great pagan continent. In East Africa there are few idols, and the religions chiefly consist in the use of charms and rites to keep off evil spirits. Mohammedanism is dominant in North and North-Central Africa; and farther south, especially on the west coast, it is spreading rapidly.

In connexion with the various Protestant missionary societies at work in Africa, there are some 2450 men and 2040 women missionaries. The number of adherents of the Protestant Missions is estimated at about 2,000,000.

Fighting in Africa

THE fighting in Africa has yielded many successes to the Allies. Togoland was subdued in August, 1914; in July, 1915, the campaign in South-West Africa was brought to a triumphant close by General Botha; the conquest of Cameroon was completed in February, 1916; and shortly afterwards the long-deferred advance into German East Africa was successfully begun. The loyalty to the British Crown of the natives in various parts of the continent has been shown by gifts of money to the National Relief Fund, including £25,000 from the Gold Coast, and £150 from the Native Council of Lokoja, the latter accompanied by a letter in Arabic containing the words, "If the King makes war, we follow him. We are Mohammedans; we pray that God may overthrow the enemies of the King." The Nigerian Council has unanimously decided that the Government of Nigeria should assume after the war liability for the charges for interest and a sinking fund of one per cent. on a share of the Imperial War Debt, amounting to £6,000,000. The Emirs of Kano and Katsina, who were unable to be present at the meeting of the Council, offered to provide £10,000 a year and £7000 a year respectively, from the funds of the native administrations of Kano and Katsina, towards the Nigerian constitution. Again, when "Red Cross Day" was observed at Lagos, Warri, and other places on the Nigerian Coast, £1500 was raised for the fund, 40,000 flags being sold at Lagos, where the population is about 70,000. Most striking of all, perhaps, has been a spontaneous gift of £100 from a chief in Togoland who had been exiled to Duala by the Germans on account of his British sympathies, and who wrote, "May God the Almighty bless the Great Britain to master the victory." The African British subjects appear to recognize that, to use Bishop Oluwole's words, "responsibility for this dreadful world-conflict rests upon Germany," and many of them join also with the Bishop when he says that the "German national life has been moulded, at least for some years, not by the Gospel of Christ, but by the teachings of philosophers who denounced Christianity and its principles."

Development of Nigeria

In the development of Nigeria great importance attaches to the construction of a deep-water dock at Port Harcourt, and of a railway thence to the coal-fields near Udi and on to the Kaduna River in the Northern Provinces, both of which are being rapidly pushed forward. At Udi there is said to be an almost inexhaustible supply of coal, which can be obtained at one-fifth or one-sixth of the price hitherto paid on the coast for coal from England, and this will make Port-Harcourt, which is to be the principal port of call for the mail ships, the greatest coaling station in the Atlantic outside England. According to the "Lagos Standard" plans have been completed to transfer the head-quarters of the Government from Lagos to Kaduna.

The Nigerian Government has taken steps also which should conduce to the well-being of the people. The Native House Rule Ordinance, which has been regarded as sanctioning domestic slavery,[1] has been repealed as from 1 January, 1915; and a new Marriage Ordinance came into operation on the following April 1, which will place church marriages on a sure and firm footing. Moreover, a new education code has been drafted and circulated, which recognizes religious instruction; this in the past was never actually disallowed by the Government in grant schools, but through not being recognized it was relegated to the background, and the pupils were therefore apt to regard it as a subject of comparative unimportance.[2]

The liquor traffic

As concerns the liquor traffic it is a matter for thankfulness that the evils of the "permit" system have been largely remedied by the intervention of Sir Frederick Lugard, the Governor-General, but much still remains to be done in order to protect the Africans adequately from the insidious snare of strong drink. According to the secretary of the Native Races and the Liquor Traffic United Committee the average annual imports of liquor during the three years 1910–12 as compared with the preceding three years increased in the Southern Provinces of Nigeria by 1,264,236 gallons, in the Gold Coast by 445,512, in Sierra Leone by 165,305, and in Gambia by 31,816. Figures published by the Colonial Office show that in the Southern Provinces of Nigeria 2,950,000 gallons of spirits were imported in 1909; in 1912 the quantity had risen to 4,450,000; and in 1913 it was 4,635,000.[3]

Extension of Islam in Africa

During the last year or two the C.M.S. missionaries in their annual letters have said but little concerning the spread of Islam in Africa. But the opening of the continent by railways, of which it is said there are 28,220 miles completed or under construction, means the development of trade and consequently the extension of the peril of Islam, through the instrumentality of Moslem traders, to races hitherto more or less exempt because their territories have not bordered on Moslem states. Whether or no they have come under the blighting sway of the religion of Mohammed the peoples of Africa stand in sore need of the Gospel of Christ. To Mohammedan women, whose only hope of escape from the torment of a devouring fire is the very precarious one that Mohammed will pity them at the last moment, and who in this life are often shut up entirely within the four walls of their home, Christianity has a message which is almost unbelievable in its richness and mercy. For animists, possessing perhaps some shadowy idea of a Supreme Being, but concentrating their attention on minor and often malignant spirits which must needs be propitiated by sacrifice—men and women on whom their priests practise tricks and deceit, and whose religion is characterized by an almost entire absence of moral standards—for them to learn that Christ will set them free, if they will let Him, from the bondage of superstition and sin, is a gain the magnitude of which perhaps they do not quickly appreciate. But whatever may be the response made by Moslem or heathen to the message of the Gospel, whether he will hear or whether he will forbear, there can be no doubt of the responsibility of the Church of Christ to offer him in Christ's name that salvation which Christ died to procure for men.[1]

Moslems and animists need the Gospel

SIERRA LEONE MISSION

PAST HISTORY

Africa was the earliest field entered by the C.M.S. Its first two missionaries were sent in 1804 to the Susu tribes on the Rio Pongas. In 1816 the Society's efforts were concentrated upon the colony of Sierra Leone, which, after the abolition of the slave trade in 1807, had become the depôt for negroes rescued from slave ships by the British cruisers. Much blessing attended the labours of W. A. B. Johnson and other missionaries, but at a great cost of life, fifty-three missionaries and missionaries' wives dying between 1804 and 1824. The work was afterwards extended to the Bullom and Mendi countries, and, later, among the Temnes, Yalunkas, and Limbahs.

In 1861 the Sierra Leone Native Church was organized on an independent basis, and undertook the support of its own pastors, churches, and schools, aided by a small grant from the Society, which ceased in 1890. In 1876 the native Church took over the outlying missions in the Bullom and Mendi countries, and in 1908 it assumed responsibility for the remainder of the C.M.S. work in the interior, with the aid of some financial help from the Society.

The bishopric of Sierra Leone was founded in 1852. Dr. Walmsley, who was consecrated in 1910, is the present bishop.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

The Society's work in the Mission, as distinct from that carried on by the native Church, is now confined to Freetown, the capital of the colony and protectorate of Sierra Leone, where it has Fourah Bay College (affiliated to Durham University), a grammar school for boys, and the Annie Walsh Memorial School for girls, at which a normal class is held. The C.M.S. staff consists of 1 European and 6 African clergymen, 1 layman, 1 missionary's wife, and 3 single women, beside 21 African Christian lay agents. There are 34 clergymen and 72 lay agents connected with the Sierra Leone Native Church.

Freetown

THE responsibilities of the C.M.S. for work in the diocese of Sierra Leone are now limited to Freetown and are almost entirely educational.

Fourah Bay College

At Fourah Bay College, a first grade college affiliated to Durham University, the number of students was lessened by the war, and especially by the disturbance of the work in 1914,[1] but in April, 1915, the German prisoners who had been interned on the college premises were taken to England, and things presented a more normal aspect. Nine of the students passed the B.A. examination, and two that for the L.Th. diploma.

Grammar School

The Grammar School completed the seventieth year of its existence in March, 1915, and duly celebrated the event, a committee composed of old boys deciding to raise some £400 as a scholarship fund. The school for the first time sent in some pupils for the Cambridge local examination, and one boy won a senior certificate, and two boys junior certificates. The position held by the school is shown by the fact that seven of the twenty-eight successful candidates in the government civil service examination were former pupils. In the early part of 1915 there was a good deal of trouble with some of the boarders, which led to five of them being expelled, and eventuated in a law suit. At the request of the Committee, Mr. T. E. Alvarez stayed in Sierra Leone for a few weeks on his way back to his work in the Northern Provinces of Nigeria so as to inquire as to the best course to be adopted, and in accordance with his recommendations the boarding department has been closed for a time.[1] The Annie Walsh School celebrated its jubilee [2] towards the end of 1915 by various gatherings, including a service in Holy Trinity Church, at which the large nave was almost filled by former students. The school was crowded with pupils, especially in the autumn term; the members of the normal class showed rather more enthusiasm than before; a good tone prevailed among the girls; the boarders belonging to the Missionary Endeavour Association helped various forms of Christian work; and a former senior girl offered herself, and was accepted, as a teacher under the Native Church Missions—the first native single woman in the colony to offer for the mission field. The Mohammedan School in Freetown, an elementary school, discharges a useful function and had a good year. The only pastoral work under the Society is that at the Bishop Crowther Memorial Church at Cline Town, a neighbourhood which has been partly depopulated through the Government acquiring a good deal of the river frontage for the purpose of constructing a new wharf ~~and the Henry Venn Memorial Church, or All Saints.~~

WESTERN EQUATORIAL AFRICA MISSIONS

PAST HISTORY

A large proportion of the freed slaves gathered at Sierra Leone at the beginning of the nineteenth century had been carried away from the Yoruba Country, which lies a thousand miles along the Guinea coast to the east. About the year 1840 many of them, having by that time become Christians and traders on their own account, returned to their fatherland. The result was an invitation to the missionaries to go thither, and the establishment of stations at Badagry, 1845, and Lagos, 1852, on the coast; and at Abeokuta, 1846, Ibadan, 1853, Oyo, 1858 (reoccupied 1887), Ode Ondo, 1876, and other towns and villages in the interior. More recently, Oshogbo, 1900, Owo, 1908, Offa, 1910, Ado Ewi (in the Ekiti Country), 1911, and Eme (in the Ora Country), 1915, have been occupied.

In 1841 a government naval expedition, accompanied by a C.M.S. missionary, the Rev. J. F. Schön, and by Samuel Crowther, a liberated negro slave, explored the River Niger. In 1854 a second expedition penetrated up the stream 500 miles, finding the natives everywhere ready to receive Christian teachers; and in 1857 Mr. Crowther accompanied a third expedition, undertaken for commercial purposes, and laid the foundation of the Niger Mission by establishing three stations. One of these was Onitsha. Other stations were subsequently occupied, namely, Bonny, 1866; Brass, 1868; Asaba, 1875; Awka and Kaiyama, 1904; Ebu, 1906; Patani, 1907; Igbide, 1912; Ogwashi, 1915.

The first station to be occupied in the Northern Provinces was Lokoja (1865), whence the work has spread to other places in the immediate neighbourhood. In 1890 a party of missionaries went out under the leadership of the Rev. J. A. Robinson and Mr. G. Wilmot Brooke, with the idea of residing at Lokoja and thence making an effort to reach the Mohammedans of the Hausa States. The climate shortly proved fatal to both the leaders, and drove the rest home. In 1900 Bishop Tugwell led a party to Kano, and though they were not permitted to stay in that town they did not leave the country. The Basa Country was occupied in 1897; Bida, 1903; Zaria, 1905; Kuta, 1906; and Katcha, 1909. In 1907, the Cambridge University Missionary Party (as C.M.S. missionaries) began work at Panyam, in the Bauchi highlands, in 1910 at Kabwir, and in 1915 at Per.

Samuel Crowther was consecrated Bishop of the Niger Territories in 1864. He laboured zealously in the Mission till the end of 1891, when he died at Lagos. In June, 1893, the Rev. J. S. Hill succeeded Bishop Crowther, receiving the title of "Bishop in Western Equatorial Africa." Two experienced African clergymen, the Revs. C. Phillips and I. Oluwole, were consecrated as his assistant bishops at the same time. Bishop Hill died in January, 1894, and the Rev. H. Tugwell was consecrated the following March. In 1900 the Rev. James Johnson, a third African assistant bishop, was consecrated. Bishop Phillips died in 1906. Lagos was included in the diocese of Sierra Leone until 1898.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

The Western Equatorial Africa Missions are carried on by 3 bishops, 26 English and 68 African clergymen, 11 laymen, 17 missionaries' wives, 25 other women missionaries, and 841 African Christian lay agents, in several clearly defined districts, namely, in the Yoruba Country and in the Lower Niger districts, which are in the Southern Provinces of the protectorate of Nigeria, and in the Northern Provinces.

I. In the Yoruba Country the pastoral work is almost entirely entrusted to African clergymen. At the three oldest stations—Lagos on the coast and Abeokuta and Ibadan in the interior—district councils have been formed, and the clergy are appointed by local authorities and maintained independently of the C.M.S. These councils, moreover, are responsible to the diocesan synod for the evangelistic work in their districts, while the Lagos council has missionary work, largely self-supporting, in the Ijebu Country. At the other centres—Ilesa, Oshogbo, Oyo, Ado Ewi, Ode Ondo, Owo, and Eme—evangelistic work is largely in the hands of the Society, but provisional church councils are gradually preparing the way for self-support and self-government.

All the educational work, with the exception of a training class at Lagos, grammar schools at Abeokuta, Ibadan, and Ijebu Ode, and some elementary schools, which are under the district councils, is administered and largely maintained by the C.M.S. The chief institutions are a training college for men at Oyo, a training institution for evangelists at Oshogbo, a boys' grammar school and a girls' seminary at Lagos, and a girls' training school at Ibadan; the grammar school is entirely self-supporting. In this connexion may be mentioned also the bookshop at Lagos, with its branches at Abeokuta, Ibadan, Ijebu Ode, Oshogbo, Ilesa, and Ebute Meta.

Besides Bishops Tugwell and Oluwole, the Society has 9 European and 17 African clergymen, 6 laymen, 8 missionaries' wives, 10 other women missionaries and 99 African Christian lay agents at work in the Yoruba Country. There are also 32 African clergymen and 380 African Christian lay agents in connexion with the Lagos, Abeokuta, and Ibadan district councils.

II. On the lower reaches of the Niger the work is carried on by the Niger Delta Pastorate (which has its head-quarters at Bonny and is manned and financed by Africans), save at Kaiyama, Patani, and Igbide, where it is under the C.M.S. Higher up the river there are a number of stations and out-stations, the chief being Onitsha, Obusi, Nnewi, Awka, and Ebu, on the east of the Niger, and Asaba and Ogwashi, on the west. At these places the pastoral and evangelistic work is largely in the hands of provisional church councils, with which the European agents of the Society co-operate closely.

There are a theological institute at Bonny (under the Niger Delta Pastorate), a training college for men at Awka, a training school for girls at Umudioka, and young women's homes at Ani Ofu, Obusi, and Emii; a number of elementary schools are also carried on. Medical work is maintained at Iyi Enu.

The European clergymen in the Niger Mission number 8; lay missionaries 2; missionaries' wives 6; other women missionaries 12 (2 nurses); and there are, besides Bishop Johnson, 17 African clergymen, of whom 10 work under the Niger Delta Pastorate. The African Christian lay agents, including those in connexion with the Delta pastorate, number 218.

III. The Mission in the Northern Provinces is among the Hausa people, who are practically entirely Mohammedan, at Zaria; the Nupé and Gbari peoples, who are partly Mohammedan and partly pagan, at Lokoja, Bida, Katcha, and Kuta; and the Basa and Yoruba peoples, who are mainly pagan, at Lokoja and the other stations around the confluence of the Niger and the Binue. Work has also been established at Panyam, Kabwir, and Per, in the Bauchi highlands, among the Sura and Angass tribes, who are entirely pagan.

Training classes for evangelists are carried on at Katcha, Zaria, and Kabwir, and there is medical work at Zaria and Kabwir. The staff in the Northern Provinces is composed of 9 European and 2 African clergymen; 3 lay missionaries, of whom 2 are doctors; 2 missionaries' wives; 3 other women missionaries; and 40 African Christian lay agents.

Bishop Tugwell's episcopate

THE first session of the fourth synod of the diocese of Western Equatorial Africa was held at Lagos in May, 1915, and the clergy of his diocese took advantage of the opportunity to present Bishop Tugwell, who had just completed twenty-one years of his episcopate, with an address of congratulation at a gathering at which the Governor-General of Nigeria, Sir Frederick Lugard, was present. No other white bishop has presided over a diocese in West Africa for more than fourteen years.[1] Since his consecration Bishop Tugwell has seen the number of clergy under his supervision grow from 30 to 95, communicants from 4000 to 14,767, baptized members of the Anglican Church from 7500 to 51,750, catechumens from 1200 to 22,936, and the contributions of the African Christians from £3500 to £22,418.

Three names on the roll of C.M.S. missionaries in Western Equatorial Africa have been removed by death.

Deaths of Rev. F. G. Payne,

The Rev. F. G. Payne died at Onitsha, of blood-poisoning, on 4 April, 1916. After a course of training at Islington College he sailed for the Niger Mission in 1906. He only returned to Africa after furlough at the end of December, 1915. He did valuable work in stimulating the Christians, but he was essentially an evangelist, and in his many tours he cheerfully bore the hardships which fell to his lot. His brother, Mr. W. J. Payne, and his sister, Mrs. H. Proctor, are working under the Society in West Africa, and two other brothers are also missionaries, though not of the C.M.S.[1]

Miss E. Dennis,

Miss E. Dennis, who died at Hastings on 29 December, 1915, joined the Niger Mission in 1896, after receiving her training at the Highbury Training Home. She was a sister of Archdeacon T. J. Dennis, of the same Mission, and of Mrs. Stephens, of the Travancore Mission, and of another brother and sister who were on the Society's staff. Her twenty years' experience, her knowledge of the language, and her love for the natives, made her a real power.[2]

Miss M. L. Commeline,

Miss M. L. Commeline passed away at Kaduna, whither she had been removed from Zaria for nursing, on October 6. She had only been in West Africa about six months, but she had already won the confidence of the people.

and Mrs. G. F. Bühler

A former missionary, Mrs. G. F. Bühler, who worked with her husband in the Yoruba Country from 1863–5, died at Chatham on September 26.

The Committee have accepted the resignation of Dr. A. E. Druitt.

Literary work

The literary work accomplished in the Mission in 1915 was as follows: in Yoruba a committee under the presidency of Bishop Oluwole continued the revision of the Bible, an "Early Church History" was compiled by the Rev. M. C. Adeyemi, and a book of "Lessons on the Life of our Lord" was translated and adapted from Dr. Stock's book, while Mr. C. W. Wakeman continued to edit the English-Yoruba monthly magazine, "In Leisure Hours." Archdeacon T. J. Dennis translated the Prayer Book into Union Ibo, and compiled a grammar and a vocabulary in that language, and the Rev. C. Brown edited a small monthly English-Ibo magazine, the English portion being reprinted from "In Leisure Hours." In Igabo, the Rev. J. D. Aitken translated portions of the Prayer Book.[3] In Hausa the Rev. W. A. Thompson began a translation of Leviticus and some of the Psalms, and in conjunction with Dr. W. R. S. Miller and Mallam Faté revised the translations of Exodus and Deuteronomy, while Dr. Miller translated some Psalms, and eight of

Dr. Rouse's "Tracts for Mohammedans." The Rev. J. W. Lloyd and Dr. J. C. Fox rendered St. Mark's Gospel into Angass, and Mr. Lloyd also translated portions of the Prayer Book, a catechism, and fifty of the "Hundred Texts," besides beginning the compilation of an Old Testament History. In Sura the Rev. E. Hayward translated St. John's Gospel, the Catechism, the "Hundred Texts," and the Communion and Baptismal services.

I. YORUBA MISSION

In the older districts of the Yoruba Country—Lagos, Abeokuta, and Ibadan, there are fully constituted district councils. In these districts the Society has no responsibility excepting for some educational institutions, but one or two of its women missionaries aid in the work among women and girls. In other parts of the Mission, where the work is of more recent origin and is less fully developed, provisional church councils have been formed, namely for the Ondo, Ora, Oshogbo, Owo, and Oyo districts.

Lagos

A convention was held at Ebute Ero in connexion with the Lagos District Council in July, 1915; each morning at 4 o'clock there was a prayer meeting, each afternoon a meeting for women only, and a general meeting each evening with an average attendance of 1500 persons. New premises for the Training Institution for Evangelists, for which the council is responsible, were opened in the summer; the students, who number six, attend school and also receive lectures on Islam and other subjects from the lower Lagos clergy. A European principal, the Rev. E. J. Evans, has been appointed to the Society's Grammar School. At the Girls' Seminary the kindergarten was specially successful. The Bookshop, which was started in the late 'sixties with a capital of £35, has grown wonderfully, especially during the last ten years, and now has six branches in various parts of the Mission. Connected with it there is a printing press. In the Aiyesan district more than 200 adults received baptism during the year, but the African pastor has to report some lapses from the faith.

Training Institution

Bookshop.

Abeokuta

At the invitation of the clergy of the Abeokuta District Council Mrs. E. Fry conducted a series of united meetings for women at Ake in the summer. She afterwards visited the different parishes to organize the work of the various women's bands.

Ibadan

The Training Institution at Ibadan exists to help girls who need simpler and less expensive training than that given in the Girls' Seminary at Lagos. Most of the twenty-six boarders are young women engaged to Christian workers; some of the students have only lately left heathenism, and still find it difficult to read the Bible. Miss C. C. Boyton had no European colleague at the institution during 1915, but the African teachers rose to the occasion.

Oshogbo

Training Institution for Scripture Readers

Sixteen of the forty candidates who applied for admission to the Training Institution for Scripture Readers at Oshogbo in January, 1915, were accepted, bringing the number of students up to thirty-six, with six in the preparatory class. The men spend the week-ends at such of the thirty out-stations as are without a regular teacher, and from time to time undertake a prolonged evangelistic tour. At one of the out-stations, Ilofa, to which they went, charms, or "medicine," of Shango the god of thunder, were found in the thatched roof of the church, apparently placed there by Shango priests who intended to burn down the church. The Rev. E. T. Pakenham writes :—

A Shango plot

> The Christians' explanation of the "medicine" is that by burning the church during the visit of the white missionary the priests would prove that Shango is a greater power than the white man's God, and therefore deserving of all the more homage. When the burning had taken place, the priests of the cult would have made a search in the ruins for the thunderbolt, which would be evidence of the displeasure of the god. This is a polished and sharpened stone, and after the burning would have been quite easy to find by the man who hid it in the roof. On this being found the Christians would probably have been forbidden to rebuild till a heavy penalty had been paid.

New out-stations

Two new out-stations were opened with the aid of the pastorate funds, one of them at Ede, a town with a population of between 15,000 and 20,000 ; and 180 adults were baptized. The contributions of the people in the district amounted to £267. Among the places at which the students help occasionally is Ilorin, a large city, mainly Mohammedan, where, when no one else is available, services are conducted in the little church by an ex-agent of the C.M.S., now working on the railway.

Oyo

Training College

Three former students at the Training College at Oyo were admitted to the diaconate in 1915, and two to priests' orders ; the total number of men in training was eighty, besides the members of a small divinity class, about half of the seventy men who presented themselves for examination at the beginning of the year having been admitted. Twenty years have now elapsed since the college was opened, and in that time 250 students have passed through or are at present in the institution. Of these thirteen are now working as clergymen, twenty-four as catechists, fifty-four as schoolmasters or other agents, forty-seven occupy posts as pupil teachers, eighty are in residence, twenty have been dismissed, three have resigned, and nine have died. Many inquirers came forward at Ogbomoso, and eleven adults were baptized.

Ilesa

The work in the Ode Ondo district is under the superintendence of the Rev. R. S. Oyebode, an African clergyman. He reports the baptism of sixty-two adults at Ilesa, his head-quarters, eighty at Ijebuere, and many at other centres. Meetings for women were conducted by Mrs. Fry at Iloro, and she found everywhere in the district a "thirst for the word of God." Troubles with the heathen were experienced at various places, and at Ode Ondo there has been discord between the younger Christians and their elders, which has resulted in the young people separating, and building a church of their own. In the Ile Ife district three new churches were opened, one of them having cost the people £1000; more Christian marriages were celebrated than in 1914; and 149 persons received baptism.

Ode Ondo

Ile Ife

Ado Ewi in the Ekiti Country was only occupied by a European missionary in 1911, but work had been carried on in the district for some years previously. It has advanced with great rapidity, and there are now sixty churches, and the contributions of the people exceed £500 a year. A training class for preparatory students is carried on at the chief station with twelve members. In the first ten months of 1915 more than 700 persons, mostly adults, were baptized. At several places the converts meet with active opposition, due in some cases to their own injudicious action, but in others to marriage difficulties. The Rev. A. W. Smith writes:—

Ado Ewi

700 persons baptized

> Many of the girls' difficulties arise on account of the youth and impatience of the majority of those who have but lately become Christians. Other difficulties have arisen on account of the fact that many of the girls and young women in our churches have been betrothed to pagans, most of whom are of course polygamists, much older than themselves. The young women wish to be married to Christians, and they cannot do this until they have first repaid the "dowry" which, with a fine added, amounts to £10, and this is a sum not easily obtainable. My wife has done what she could to help some of these girls who have been cruelly treated and have therefore left their homes. Instances have occurred in which the girls have been forcibly carried off to the homes of the pagans to whom they were betrothed, and this has been done before their heathen compeers were married. At one place a band of men waited outside the church with spears, and carried off the girls as they were coming to church. On the other hand, some of the young Christian men have abducted girls betrothed to pagans, and this has led to much bad feeling and difficulties with the chiefs.

Marriage difficulties

The Rev. H. F. Gane of Owo says that the increased numbers of people attending the services have necessitated in many places the enlargement of the existing church or the erection of a new one, but he adds that there is a tendency among the Christians of some standing to lose their keenness, and that Islam is everywhere strengthening its hold. Baptisms numbered 261, and contributions amounted to £60 more than in 1914. All the native workers in the district are supported entirely by the people, excepting for a little help through auxiliary contributions from England.[1] From Akure the Rev. J. A. Adejumobi reports a widespread spirit of inquiry. There are many Mohammedans, but Islam is not making much progress, and a number of them have been baptized.

Eme occupied

In November, 1915, the Rev. E. T. Pakenham took up his residence at Eme, a new station in the Ora Country, in the Benin Province. The work in that region had previously been superintended from Owo. There appear to be a number of different languages spoken in the country; they are not mere dialects of Ora, but distinct languages, Mr. Pakenham thinks, and the people of one town sometimes cannot understand what is said by those of another place in the same neighbourhood. The district contains twenty churches, and in some of the smaller villages half the population, especially of the younger portion of it, call themselves Christians. A good deal of the Christianity, however, is but nominal, and many cases of backsliding and immorality occur.

II. NIGER MISSION

THE sphere of the Niger Mission is divided into five districts, in four of which Ibo is spoken, while Ijaw is the language in the fifth. The four Ibo districts are the Onitsha or central, the Awka or eastern, and the Owerri or southern, all on the east of the Niger, and, on the west, the Asaba or western district. In each of these districts the bulk of the work is in the hands of a provisional church council, which normally is aided by a grant from the C.M.S. In 1915, however, the provisional church councils, in order to relieve the funds of the parent Society, voluntarily surrendered the whole of the grants-in-aid, amounting to £626, which ordinarily would have come to them in the second half of the year. Moreover, on the anniversary of the founding of the Mission, which was observed on Sunday, July 25, collections were made in the churches for the C.M.S., and a cheque for £154 was remitted as the result.[1]

Provisional Church Councils' help to the C.M.S.

While there are African clergymen in all but two of the five districts, Europeans are still needed to superintend them, and it is not easy to accomplish this seeing that nine years have elapsed since the Mission received any clerical recruit from home. Indeed, for the greater part of 1915, the Rev. G. T. Basden, besides discharging the duties of acting-secretary, had to be responsible for the superintendence of both the central and southern districts.

Onitsha

Little news has been received concerning the work at Onitsha, the head-quarters of the Mission, save that twenty-nine adults were baptized by the Rev. G. N. Anyaegbunam, the pastor of Christ Church, Waterside, and seven Christian marriages solemnized. The work of the Bookshop was a good deal affected by the war, which caused delay in getting out supplies, besides diminishing the income of the people. The Hospital at Iyi Enu was closed throughout the year. Thirty girls were baptized at Obusi. Some of them were inmates of the Young Women's Home, but the majority resided in their own homes while attending the preparation classes. Never before had it been found possible for girls in the town to lead Christian lives among their own people. The home was closed when Miss E. A. Hornby left on furlough in the autumn. Eleven of the eighty girls in the Girls' Training School at Umudioka received baptism. Women's Sunday schools, with a pupil teacher—accompanied by one of the bigger girls in the institution—in charge, have been set on foot in the neighbouring towns. The pupils raised nearly £9 among themselves for the support of a mission agent at Abagana.

Umudioka

Twenty-eight men were in residence at the Training College at Awka; three of them were reading for ordination, ten were preparing as evangelists, and fifteen as schoolmasters. The work in the town and district, especially that among women, flourished. The members of the provisional church council showed a better grasp of their duties, and at one meeting of the women's council more than 200 members were present, some having tramped twenty-four miles for the purpose. There are many failures among those who profess and call themselves Christians, but the Rev. C. Brown says that a gradual uplifting is taking place among the people.

Awka Training College

A gradual uplifting

The southern district of the Niger Mission, the head-quarters of which are at Ebu, a few miles from the government head-quarters at Owerri, comprises the political districts of Owerri, Okigwi, and Orlu, covers an area of about 2500 square miles, and is more densely populated than any other part of Nigeria. When Archdeacon T. J. Dennis returned in June after an absence of eight months on furlough, during which first the late Rev. F. G. Payne and then the Rev. A. C. Onyeabo had been in charge, he found that the number of out-stations had increased from thirty-two to fifty-five, and that the work had deepened as well as spread, progress being especially conspicuous among women and girls. He refers in his annual letter to the energetic operations of the Roman Catholics, who entered the district after the C.M.S., but who now have more out-stations than the Society, and says that many of the towns and villages in which they are established once applied to the C.M.S. for teachers, and when their requests had to be refused turned to the Roman Catholics. The anniversary offerings to the C.M.S. from the district amounted in 1915 to £70 as compared with £20 in the previous year. The Home for Young Women at Emii had twenty-five inmates at the end of the year.

Ebu

Home for Young Women

The head-quarters of the Asaba or Western District have been removed from Idumuje Ugboko to Ogwashi, the largest town in the neighbourhood and the seat of Government. The surrender of its portion of the grant from the C.M.S. has involved the provisional church council in some difficulties, and though the people have in many cases given well and in a few instances the heathen have come to the rescue, funds have been insufficient in some of the towns for the support of the catechist and school teacher, and the agents have had to be removed. A new out-station was opened at Owaoyibu, where the young "obi" or king was anxious to have a teacher. It will be difficult, however, for him to become a Christian and retain his position, for the older heathen chiefs are not likely to allow their sacrifices to be discontinued, and certain of the most important rites can only be performed by the "obi." The Rev. J. C. R. Wilson baptized 110 adults in all during the year, twenty-eight of them at Benin, which he visited at Bishop Tugwell's request, and ten at Igbankili, a place once worked by evangelists under Bishop Johnson, but now attached to the western district.[1] The Rev. A. N. Ekpunobi, who resides at Akwukwu, speaks of Christianity as making but slow progress in the neighbourhood, and adds that very few out-and-out Christians have been appointed by the Government to positions of responsibility. After the departure of the late Miss E. Dennis for England the Young Women's Home at Ani Ofu had to be closed.

A king's dilemma

Akwukwu

Among the Ijaw people, who are found on some of the lower reaches of the Niger, there is a distinct "feeling after God." Travel and association with other men in trade have opened the eyes of many to the uselessness of idols and the advantage of book knowledge, with the result that one town after another is building a prayer house and applying to the Mission for a teacher. Often, alas! the people have to be sent away without their request being complied with, and then it sometimes happens that they engage as teachers young traders from other countries who can read, but many of whom are not true Christians.[2] By dint of employing young men as evangelists, who from time to time are called to the European missionaries to receive further instruction, eight out-stations have been occupied besides Patani and Kaiyama, which have resident European missionaries, and large numbers of people are now being taught regularly. It is found, however, that they are inclined to lack perseverance, and that when they discover that a knowledge of reading and writing is not so very easy to acquire, they give up the attempt and withdraw themselves from the influence of the Mission. Some have more grit and have been baptized, and in 1915 the first confirmation in the district was held at Obunagha, when twenty-one persons were presented.

A "feeling after God"

Patani

The Igabo Country is divided into two districts, the Sobo, or western, which is worked by agents of the Niger Delta Pastorate, and the Soko, or eastern, of which the Rev. J. D. Aitken has been in charge, with his head-quarters at Igbide. At the beginning of 1912 an Ijaw woman, married to an Igabo man, heard the Gospel at Patani and carried the news to her husband's people; she could tell them no more than that some Patani people had left juju and were praying to God alone, but nevertheless she persuaded a few of her neighbours to try the new religion. This defection from juju worship was soon followed by persecution and the converts decided to build themselves a small village at the Igbide waterside. At the end of 1912 Mr. Aitken paid three visits to this village, which is called Owodokpokpo, and then he was appointed to itinerate in the country until he left on furlough in 1914. On his return he found that the converts had remained steadfast during his absence, though they had been left without a teacher, that the population of the village had increased to about 120, and that the movement had spread to other parts of the country. Now nearly 5000 persons in all are said to have given up idolatry and are worshipping God. Mr. Aitken wrote in December:—

5000 persons abandon idolatry

> They are people who "have turned to God from idols," and many have progressed little farther. Still, during this last year, we have been encouraged by the discovery of definite spiritual growth by many of the inquirers, both young men and women, who are striving to be "holy unto the Lord." Many of the girls are being persecuted by their parents and the heathen of their towns for refusing to enter into temporary marriage relationships with the men of their towns, a custom through which the parents benefit financially. Twins and tabooed children have been saved, and even a heathen woman, through the example of the converts, has been courageous enough to save her baby which omitted to cry at its birth and therefore, according to native custom, should have been allowed to die from neglect. Two women have been baptized and many more have applied for baptism, while several young men have applied to be trained so that they may become evangelists among their own people.

At a town named Useri, in which many deaths occur from poisoning, the chiefs sent all the professional poisoners to church that they might "learn to love and not to poison other people"; and these men now attend the services of their own accord and have given up their old profession. The church at Useri, eighty feet by twenty-seven feet, was crowded on Sundays and many, unable to gain admittance, were seated outside, in rows four or six deep. At another place, Aravia, the converts objected to building a larger church than they needed, and accordingly the heathen were not allowed to do more than stand outside the walls and hear what they could from that position. When a man burnt his juju and became an inquirer, he was allowed to enter the church and was expected to contribute threepence to the collection. On the occasion of Mr. Aitken's visit to the village the headman handed him £15 10*s*. which had been raised in this way, and on the Sunday on which Mr. Aitken was present 13*s*. 6*d*. was paid in from this source alone. It is heartrending to have to add that the exigencies of the Mission have made it necessary to transfer Mr. Aitken to Ogwashi, and consequently these 5000 Igabo converts and inquirers have been left without any resident European or African mission agent to shepherd them and guide this wonderful and rapid movement towards Christianity which is in progress.

III. NORTHERN PROVINCES MISSION

Lokoja

At Lokoja, the oldest C.M.S. station in the Northern Provinces of Nigeria, and the head-quarters of the work, services are held in English for the fifty or so Europeans who reside in the town, and also in four vernacular languages, namely Nupé (the best attended), Accra, Ibo, and Yoruba. Ten adults were baptized in 1915, one of them being a prisoner in jail under sentence of death. Two of the apprentices in the little industrial mission finished their course, and two others were admitted in their stead. A number of out-stations are worked from Lokoja. In the Basa Country, on the east of the Niger, there are three ; two of them, Kpata and Akabe, at one time had European missionaries, but for long have been left to African laymen. Indeed the work at Akabe has been closed for some time, but in 1915 the people built a new church, an agent was sent, and the "queen" and several young men received baptism. At another place, Ecewu, the services are attended by large numbers of natives, and six young men were baptized. West of Lokoja, at a distance of about fifty miles, lies the Kabba district, with seven centres of work, where thirty-nine adults received baptism during the year. The Christians in the district visit the villages in their neighbourhood and do what they can to teach the people, but the opportunity is far greater than they can overtake. "People are crying for teachers everywhere," writes the Rev. J. J. Williams, the African pastor at Lokoja. "They are renouncing their idols and heathen worship, and putting up temporary sheds for schools and for the worship of the true God, in spite of severe persecutions and great obstacles." At Okorogidi, although there is no resident teacher, almost all the young men and women and children are adherents of the Mission, and in spite of the opposition of their elders they have pulled down the old and inadequate church and are constructing a larger one. For a time, both they and the adherents at a village near by, called Ogidi, were driven from their homes and their lives threatened because there were not enough young men willing to carry out the time-honoured juju festivities.

People crying for teachers everywhere

Bida

At Bida there is little to show as a result of the efforts to evangelize the Moslem inhabitants of the city. The attitude of the leading men has been marked not so much by unfriendliness to the workers, as by indifference to their message. Nine evangelists and three school teachers were in residence at the Training Institution, and for a few months a number of youths, chosen from those neighbouring villages which were without a resident evangelist, lived at the mission station and received teaching which enabled them to help their fellow villagers until a properly trained teacher could be sent to live among them.

In the heathen villages around Bida, the desire for teaching increased during the year, and among the younger people pagan beliefs and practices were openly renounced and a desire for Christian baptism was evinced.

Zaria

Although two at least of the workers at Zaria write in a somewhat minor key, and one even goes so far as to say that "the predominant note of our work is discouragement," yet there was a good deal to call for thankfulness. The women converts were helpful and earnest; the missionaries were in touch with a number of youths and girls who joined their households for various reasons; many of the people when visited in their homes received the missionaries with friendliness and some allowed their open porticos to be used for Bible classes; and seven adults and two children were baptized.[1] On the other hand there was much chilling indifference to the Gospel, which was even more trying than the open opposition which it used to evoke.[2] There is one out-station, Gimi, thirty-two miles east of Zaria, where are a number of adherents who have joined together for instruction and for mutual protection against persecution. They have many shortcomings, Dr. W. R. S. Miller says, but there is no sway of Satan among them, though his activities are great. Eleven adults and four children were baptized at Gimi during the twelve months ending September 30, and there were seventeen persons in the catechumen's class. Dr. Miller, with the consent of the Governor-General, made a tour of seven weeks' duration to the chief centres of the Hausa States.

A Christian village

Moslems baptized

Panyam

Zaria and the stations in the Bauchi Province have little in common. At Zaria the work is among the Hausa people who are almost all Mohammedans; at Panyam and Kabwir the missionaries have to do with pagan tribes among whom Islam has made hardly any headway. At Panyam a few years ago a tribal movement towards Christianity on the part of Suras seemed probable and "heathenism was seen to be tottering to its fall," but the action of the Government in deposing the Christian chief and substituting the leader of the heathen faction in the town,[3] stemmed the rising tide of inquiry, and there has since been a distinct revival of heathenism. In 1915 the harvest, after an interval of four years, was inaugurated with the old heathen rites, but happily many prominent men were absentees on the occasion, though they had not thrown in their lot with the Christians. A new church, to accommodate 600 people, was begun,[1] and six men and two women were baptized, while there were twenty catechumens when the year closed. A distinct deepening of the spiritual life was observed among the converts; they and a number of others joined in conducting services in the compounds of the town on Sunday evenings, and nine of the young men expressed their desire to become teachers. The war was used by government officials as a pretext for refusing permission to occupy out-stations, and when the Rev. E. Hayward applied for leave to pass through a part of the country, where in the past both he and his message had been received with the utmost friendliness, it was refused unless he would give an undertaking not to preach.[2] This he naturally declined to do.

Missionaries not allowed to open out-stations

Kabwir

The town of Kabwir is said almost to be a closed door to the Gospel on account of the fanaticism of the chief and his followers, and the unwillingness of the people to abandon polygamy and excessive beer drinking, and the medical work is little more than falls to the lot of every missionary in an uncivilized country; nevertheless nineteen men and youths and seven girls received baptism, twenty-two persons were confirmed,[3] and two young men were under training as evangelists. In one small village the people complained that the books of their chief who was learning to read were offensive to the spirits, and he was deposed in consequence. The Government after much delay gave consent to the occupation of Per (called Amper in last year's Report[4]), a large village, the centre of a group of hamlets, eleven miles south-east of Kabwir, and the Rev. J. W. Lloyd took up his residence there in February, 1915. Nearly 200 people gathered together for the Sunday services which were held under a large tree while the necessary station buildings were being put up, and within a few months there was a catechumen's class consisting of nineteen men and boys.[5] Mr. Lloyd had to leave on furlough in June, and his place was taken by two student evangelists from Kabwir. Two other evangelists were placed at Myet, a village seven miles from Kabwir, which has a distinct language though the people all talk Angass freely, and at Pwel, which adjoins Kabwir.[6]

EAST AFRICA MISSIONS

PAST HISTORY

In 1844 Dr. Krapf, having lately been expelled from Abyssinia, established himself at Mombasa, where two years later he was joined by the Rev. John Rebmann, who opened the station at Kisulutini (Rabai) in 1846, and laboured on the coast for twenty-nine years. Their remarkable journeys into the interior led to all the subsequent geographical and missionary enterprise in East Africa. It was chiefly through the efforts of the C.M.S. that the Parliamentary Committee of 1871 was obtained, which led to Sir Bartle Frere's mission to Zanzibar in the following year. In 1874 the Rev. W. S. Price, formerly in charge of a C.M.S. asylum for rescued slaves at Nasik, Western India, was sent out; some 200 African Christians from among the freed slaves who had been under his care were collected as the nucleus of an industrial colony; land was purchased for a settlement, which was named Frere Town, in honour of Sir Bartle Frere; and 500 rescued slaves were, in 1875, received from H.M. cruisers, and housed, fed, instructed, and led to work for their living. In the Taita Country stations were opened at Sagalla in 1883, Mbale in 1900, and Wusi in 1905; at Vitengeni, in the Giriama Country, in 1912; at Kabete and Nairobi, in the Ukamba Province, in 1900 and 1906 respectively; and at Weithaga (1903), Kahuhia (1906), Kabare and Embu (1910), Muitira (1912), and Kathukeni (1913), in the Kenia Province.

When in 1876 a mission party was sent up-country to establish a Mission in Uganda, the route adopted was from Bagamoyo, on the coast opposite Zanzibar, through Ukaguru, Ugogo, and Unyamwezi; and intermediate stations between the east coast and the southern shore of the Victoria Lake were established, at Mpapua and Mamboya, in what is now German territory, in 1876 and 1880. The German East Africa Mission was extended by the occupation of Berega, Nyangala, and Mvumi in 1900; Buigiri in 1901; and Kongwa in 1904.

For these Missions a new bishopric was established in 1884, with "Eastern Equatorial Africa" as the title of the see, and the Rev. J. Hannington was consecrated the first bishop in that year. He was murdered in Busoga in October, 1885, by the orders of Mwanga, king of Uganda. Bishop Hannington's successor, the Rev. H. P. Parker, also had a brief episcopal career, for he died from fever in March, 1888. He was succeeded by the Rev. A. R. Tucker, who was consecrated in 1890. In 1897 the diocese was divided into the dioceses of Uganda and Mombasa, and in 1899 the Rev. W. G. Peel, formerly a C.M.S. missionary in South and Western India, was consecrated bishop of the latter. He died in 1916. The diocese embraces the whole of the British East Africa Protectorate, with the exception of the native reserves in the western portion of the Nyanza Province, and in German East Africa extends to long. 38° E. and lat. 8° S.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

The Society's work in East Africa has developed considerably since the formation of the diocese of Mombasa, and is now carried on in two distinct sections.

I. (a) In British East Africa the stations by the coast—Mombasa, Frere Town, and Rabai—are of long standing. There are a boys' hostel at Frere Town; a normal class and the Buxton High School for boys at Mombasa; and a medical mission at Mzizima, on the island of Mombasa. Much care and thought are expended on the pastoral care of the converts, many of whom are liberated slaves or the children of such.

(b) Proceeding inland about a hundred miles there are stations at Sagalla, Mbale, and Wusi in the Taita Country. Other stations have been opened of late years farther from the coast at Nairobi, the capital of British East Africa, and elsewhere in the Ukamba Province, and at Weithaga, Kahuhia, and other places around Mount Kenia. At all these the work is mainly evangelistic. There is a medical mission at Kahuhia.

In the British East Africa section of the Mission there are 19 European and 3 African clergymen, 2 European and 35 African Christian laymen, 18 wives of missionaries, and 11 European women workers. Two of the above are doctors.

II. In the German East Africa Mission elementary schools were prominent before the war at Berega, Kongwa, Mvumi, Buigiri, and their out-stations. There was a training college for catechists at Kongwa. The Society's staff consists of 7 European clergymen, 206 African Christian laymen, 5 missionaries' wives, and 8 European and 5 African Christian women workers.

The Kikuyu controversy

THE controversy aroused by the Kikuyu Conference in June, 1913, and by the united Communion Service at its close, was in some degree revived in 1915 by the publication in April of a "statement" by the Archbishop of Canterbury concerning some of the points at issue. In drawing up the document the Archbishop had before him the answer of the Central Consultative Body, constituted at the Lambeth Conference of 1908,[1] to two questions which he had submitted to them, namely, (1) whether the provisions of the proposed scheme of federation of missionary societies working in British East Africa contravened any principles of church order, the observance of which is obligatory upon the Bishops, the clergymen, and the lay-workers of the Church of England at home and abroad; and (2) whether, due consideration being given to precedent and to all the circumstances of the case, the action of the bishops who arranged and conducted the Holy Communion service at the close of the Kikuyu Conference, was consistent or inconsistent with principles accepted by the Church of England.[2] The Archbishop, who in the main adopted the opinions expressed by the Consultative Body, held that the drawing up of the scheme of federation was well warranted by the pronouncements of the Lambeth Conferences of 1888, 1897, and 1908, but that there were difficulties in the way of his advising that it should be put into practice, quite irrespective of its features in detail; and he recommended that the proposal to establish a representative council, composed of members of the several federated bodies, should be submitted for sanction to the Lambeth Conference. But he added, "Many, nay, I think most of the provisions of the proposed scheme of federation can, with perfect loyalty to our existing rules, be made effective under a system of co-operation and fellowship which may quite possibly pave the way for plans of formal federation, and of ultimate union in a native African Church." He next referred to some of the details which had been objected to, and held that the admission to Anglican pulpits of men who had not been episcopally ordained, and to the Holy Communion of devout Christian men of other denominations, might rightly be sanctioned by the bishop of each diocese, but he deprecated a general direction being given to members of the Anglican Church when temporarily isolated to seek the

The Archbishop of Canterbury's "statement"

[1] The members who signed the "answer" were the Archbishops of York (Dr. Lang), Armagh (Dr. Crozier), West Indies (the late Dr. Nuttall), Rupert's Land (Dr. Matheson), the Primus of Scotland (Dr. Robberds), the Bishop of Winchester (Dr. Talbot), the Bishop of Exeter (Dr. Robertson), Bishops R. S. Copleston, Wallis, and Ryle, and the Bishop of Gibraltar (Dr. Knight).

Holy Communion wherever and however administered.[1] A few months after the publication of the "statement," the late Bishop Peel and Bishop Willis, of Uganda, announced their intention to take action in the direction of co-operation with other missions within the limits defined by the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Deaths of Bishop Peel,

A very great loss has befallen the East Africa Missions by the death of Bishop Peel, which occurred at Mombasa, from typhoid fever, on 15 April, 1916, after a short illness. He was born in India, where his father was an officer, and in 1876 entered Islington College. He was ordained in 1879, and after a year in a curacy at Trowbridge, sailed for Masulipatam, where he served, first as Rugby-Fox master and later as principal, at Noble College. Towards the end of the 'eighties he was for a time acting secretary to the Madras Corresponding Committee, and in 1892 he became secretary of the Western India Mission. He continued at that post until in 1899 the call came to him to take up the greater responsibilities of the oversight of the diocese of Mombasa, which had just been formed out of the old diocese of Eastern Equatorial Africa. His episcopate was marked by a great increase in the number of mission stations, both in British and German territory, and by a general extension of the work. By the world at large he will best be remembered for the part he played at the historic Kikuyu Conference, but in mission circles his deep spirituality called forth equal, if not greater esteem.[2]

Mr. E. Luckock,

Two former workers in the Mission passed away in June, 1915. Mr. E. Luckock, who died on June 7, sailed in 1885 to take up a post at the Seychelles industrial school, which at that time was under the Society, and in 1894, when the school was handed over to the Seychelles Branch of the Mauritius Diocesan Society, he was transferred to the East Africa Mission. He retired in 1905.

and Mrs. S. T. Pruen

Mrs. Pruen, wife of Dr. S. T. Pruen, was married in 1887, when he had been a year in East Africa. Her health proved unequal to the climate, and its failure compelled her husband to resign in 1889. She died at Cheltenham on June 4.

Mr. E. M. Tinsley has not renewed his agreement.

Appointment of Canons

Archdeacon J. E. Hamshere, and the Revs. G. Burns, H. Leakey, and K. St. A. Rogers, have been appointed honorary canons of Mombasa cathedral.

Literary work

Miss F. I. Deed completed the revision of the Giriama version of St. John's Gospel, and began that of St. Matthew's Gospel, and also finished the compilation of a new Giriama hymn book. The Rev. H. J. E. Butcher translated parts of the Prayer Book into

I. BRITISH EAST AFRICA MISSION

Mission premises offered to the Government

A CERTAIN dislocation of the work in the Taita Country has been caused by the war, the mission premises at Wusi having been offered to and accepted by the Government as a sanatorium for the white troops,[1] while the Taita tribes have been drawn upon largely to supply porterage and labour. But most of the stations in British East Africa have been little affected and the operations of the Mission have proceeded as usual.

SEYIDIE PROVINCE

Mombasa

Buxton High School

In the absence of the Rev. S. A. Martin on furlough the normal class at the Buxton High School at Mombasa was suspended, but the school work was continued without alteration, and a keen and healthy tone prevailed among the boys.[2] The services at the cathedral are well attended, but the congregation consists for the most part of members of the country tribes. The natives of Mombasa, while ready enough to welcome the missionaries when they visit them, are slow to respond to their message. The work in the Digo Country to the south of Mombasa, the expenses of which are defrayed by the African Church Council at Mombasa, is most promising. About a hundred people gather together night after night for instruction at Matuga where four men have been admitted to the catechumenate, and thirteen others—men and women—as inquirers, while at several other centres African teachers are passing on the Good Tidings. Many of them are able to do a little simple medical work, and it is found that this gives them a hold on the people. The Rev. H. J. E. Butcher and Dr. R. K. Shepherd in the course of an itineration visited Muhaka where the refugees who had fled or been removed from southern Digo because of the German incursions were congregated, and had a splendid opportunity of addressing them.[3]

Promising work in the Digo Country

Mzizima

Hospital

Fewer out-patients than in 1914 visited the Hospital at Mzizima in 1915, but the number of in-patients increased, and more visits than before were paid to Indians and Arab-Swahilis in their homes. Many of the patients laid aside their charms, and the younger people were keen to learn to read. Two senior apprentices, whom Dr. Shepherd had been training, passed the third government examination, and two junior apprentices the first examination.

Much of the work at Rabai is among Christians, of whom there are more than at any other station in the Mission. Confirmation classes were held, and thirty persons were presented to Bishop Peel for that rite; there were also a number of other classes, one being for young married women, and another for junior catechists. Dispensary work also is carried on and classes for women are conducted at the out-stations at Ganga and Changombe. In the villages of the district much opposition is met with from the heathen elders, but one young man, the son of a Mohammedan, put away his second wife and asked for baptism. The women missionaries pay visits to Jimba, where the Rev. L. F. Gore, an African clergyman, is the pastor. Rabai

A good deal of damage was done to the property of the Mission during the rising in the Giriama Country which took place in August, 1914. Vitengeni in particular suffered, and the Rev. H. T. Harris had to make Rabai his head-quarters from which to superintend the work in the whole of the country. Both at Vitengeni and Jilore the African teachers acquitted themselves fairly well while the country was closed to missionaries by the Government, and the people are keen on being taught.[1] At Kaloleni, whither Miss F. I. Deed and Miss M. L. Mason were allowed to return in the spring of 1915, the troubles were found to have given a great impetus to the work.[2] On every side little school houses were being put up by young men, who in the intervals between the visits of regular teachers helped one another as best they could; and the younger men were bringing their wives forward for instruction. A good many persons were admitted to the catechumenate or as inquirers, and although there were several sad cases of sin among the Christians the outlook was distinctly bright. But the situation is in some respects critical. Miss Deed writes:— Vitengeni Kaloleni Political troubles give impetus to mission work

> The Giriama people seem in a state of transition which has its dangers as well as its advantages. Tribal authority is lessening, there seems very little cohesion among the members of the tribe, and old manners and customs, some of which had a good influence, are losing power. If Christianity does not win' the young people soon it will probably mean that later on they will be much harder to win; they will have deteriorated.

Sagalla is only nine miles from Voi, a centre of military operations. Several times raiding parties from German East Africa were in the immediate neighbourhood, but the mission premises escaped molestation. The work, however, was affected by the absence of most of the able-bodied men from their homes for the greater part of the year on porterage or other work connected with the war. Two Christian marriages were celebrated in the church, and the school had an influx of small children as pupils. Sagalla

For the first five months of the year Archdeacon J. E. Hamsphere

Wusi

resided at Wusi and carried on a Divinity Class composed of two local men in their third period of training, and a number of ungraded agents. The students paid several visits to the railway camps on the new military line to Taveta, and were able to gather groups of from 80 to 150 men to listen to the Gospel. When the mission premises were taken over by the Government as a sanatorium in June, 1915,[1] the class was removed to Mbale, and five months later to Frere Town. After Archdeacon Hamshere left Wusi the services were carried on by Africans, and an officer who was present on one occasion spontaneously wrote as follows as to the genuineness of the faith of the converts :—

An officer's testimony

> How far does their religion influence their daily life ? Are there not lapses even to drunkenness and witchcraft apart from failure—common to ourselves —to realize the ideals of the higher life ? The missionary must indeed have many disappointments. But a superficial observation of some months leads one to believe that the Christian African does not fall so very far short of the average member of a so-called Christian nation. We two who had the privilege of worshipping God under somewhat unusual conditions to-day are now returning to take part again in this great war on behalf of liberty. We carry away the conviction that, apart from the necessity of obeying the order of the Master, all those whoassist in supporting African missions may rest assured that their time and money are neither wasted now nor will be hereafter.[2]

Mbale

A new church was dedicated at Mbale in September, 1915. Many of the people in the district were called upon to take part in the war in various capacities, but not withstanding their absence the congregations were larger than in 1914, thirty-one persons were admitted as inquirers and twenty-one as catechumens, and twenty-one adults were baptized. The dispensary, at which 7000 attendances were registered, was carried on by a son of the Rev. L. F. Gore, the African pastor at Jimba.

UKAMBA PROVINCE

Nairobi

THE services at Nairobi continued to attract large congregations, the people even sitting on one another's knees, and the weekly prayer meeting held on Fridays brought together more than 200 people, the prayers following quickly on one another, while the volume of the "Amens" was quite startling in its effect. The classes for catechumens and inquirers were so large that they had to be divided into two sections, and even then it was almost impossible to get into real touch with all the members. From 100 to 200 young men attended the night school, and the women's school steadily increased. During the year a daily afternoon class was begun at the police training depôt at the request of the Commissioner of Police; the Government made a grant of Rs 150 towards the expenses, and some of the members became inquirers. Thirty-one women were admitted as inquirers, eight were enrolled as catechumens, and one baptized. Nine others, belonging to five different tribes, were expected to be baptized before the end of 1915. There was a general eagerness to buy Christian books, and since there are no heathen elders to contend with, and many temporal advantages attend having a Christian name and education, the difficulty is not to win the people but rather to keep them from pressing into the visible Church without having experienced any change of heart. Much prayer needs to be made for the converts who are surrounded by temptations, even greater, perhaps, than those experienced by their brethren at other stations.[1]

The outstanding event of 1915 at Kabete was the opening of the out-station at the far end of the district, where Koinange, a hereditary chief, tries to lead his people to attend services and send their children to school.

KENIA PROVINCE

Kahuhia

THE Rev. D. A. L. Hooper, who joined the staff of the Mission more than thirty years ago, describes the outlook as more encouraging than ever before. The daily attendance at the school at Kahuhia rose to 200; about fifty patients visited the dispensary each day; the work among women and girls went forward; and in some even of the distant villages in the district the people began to observe one day in seven as a day of rest.

Weithaga

The opportunities at Weithaga "seem to be boundless," says the Rev. H. J. E. Butcher, who was in charge of the station for part of 1915, though some of the chiefs and elders in the district are antagonistic to the Mission. Seven women were baptized during the year, and twelve were admitted to the catechumenate, while many others, including some quite elderly women, were inquirers. From seventy to ninety women and girls attended Sunday school, and the girls' day school had nearly the same number of pupils. At Njumbe, an out-station, a young lad, named Meshek, has gathered together about fifty youths, who attend school regularly, visit the markets for open-air work, and on Sundays the people assemble for worship, so that their church, which will hold about 500, is packed and many have to sit outside. At another out-station, Kiruri, a deputation from a neighbouring village asked Mr. Butcher to visit them. On his arrival he found 500 people gathered together to listen to what he had to say. Afterwards the elders determined to build a church and asked for a resident teacher, and the Weithaga Christians, hearing of it, forthwith instituted a system of monthly subscriptions to provide the salaries of the teachers whom they agreed to send.

A young lad's good work

Kathukeni

At Kathukeni, a new station occupied in 1913, much of the Rev. A. E. Clarke's time was taken up with building operations, and he met with strong opposition in the spiritual work from the elders, who are intensely conservative and jealous of any interference with their old tribal customs. The Sunday services, however, were well attended, about 300 people usually being present, and two adults, the firstfruits of the station, were baptized.

Muitira

Muitira, the mission station for a district containing 100,000 people, was without a resident missionary during part of 1915, but the African teacher had much encouragement in his school work.

Kabare

Opposition from chiefs

Bitter antagonism from the chiefs and elders, due in part to the stand made by the Mission against certain terribly immoral customs, was conspicuous at Kabare; but although all who go near the missionaries are marked men and have to be prepared to suffer at the hands of their chiefs, the school was attended by large numbers of young men, some of them accompanied by their wives as well as their children, and more people came together for the services than could be accommodated in the church. Twenty-five persons were admitted as inquirers. Some of the young men showed praiseworthy zeal in evangelistic work.

Fort Embu

After being left without a missionary for two years Fort Embu was again occupied in April, 1915. The Rev. J. Comely at once reopened the dispensary and set to work to provide some accommodation for in-patients, the hospital erected by Dr. T. W. W. Crawford having fallen into ruins. He also instituted industrial work in the form of the cultivation of the twenty-five acres of land attached to the station. Many of the men and boys employed attended the services, and some of them the school.

II. GERMAN EAST AFRICA MISSION

Internment of C.M.S. missionaries

VERY little news has reached the Society concerning its missionaries in German East Africa. In August, 1915, a heavily censored letter, written in June, was received by Mrs. Westgate from her husband, in which he spoke of being a prisoner of war at an unnamed place, and stated that all the other C.M.S. missionaries were at another place, the name of which was not given, together with many missionaries of the Universities' Mission to Central Africa; he added that he himself had been engaged in translational work. A few months later a message from Dr. Axenfeld, of the Berlin Missionary Society, reached the Society by an indirect route, to the effect that the C.M.S. missionaries were well; and in December the Bishop of Zanzibar sent home a list of some of the Universities' Mission and C.M.S. missionaries interned, attaching to each name particulars of requirements of clothing sent in by them through the authorities, and reaching the Bishop through the British Admiral on the station. Most of the U.M.C.A. men were evidently in camps that did not receive permission to send lists.[1]

UGANDA MISSION

PAST HISTORY

The original impetus to the exploration of Africa from the east coast was given by the C.M.S. missionaries, Krapf, Rebmann, and Erhardt. They communicated to Europe the first report of the lake system of the interior, which led to the journeys of Burton, Speke, and Grant, and, incidentally, to those of Stanley. In November, 1875, in consequence of information sent home by the last named of the readiness of Mtesa, king of Uganda, to receive Christian teachers, and of two anonymous donations of £5000 each being offered in order that a missionary expedition might be sent to his dominions, the Society resolved, in dependence upon God, to organize a Mission in Uganda, and a well-equipped party accordingly proceeded to East Africa in the spring of 1876. The first leader, Lieut. G. Shergold Smith, R.N., and Mr. T. O'Neill were killed, and Dr. J. Smith died before reaching the country. The Mission, however, maintained its position in Uganda from July, 1877, and that notwithstanding tremendous difficulties. A French Roman Catholic Mission arrived in 1879. King Mtesa, who died in 1884, was succeeded by Mwanga, and the new king was led to regard the missionaries with suspicion. He caused Bishop Hannington, while in Busoga, en route for Uganda from the coast, to be murdered on 31 October, 1885. The storm reached its climax in the arrest of many African Christians, several of whom were tortured and burnt to death. In August, 1888, King Mwanga was driven from the throne. In October, through the hostility of the Mohammedan Arabs, the English and French missionaries were expelled from the country, and a period of revolution and bloodshed ensued. In October, 1889, exactly a year after the missionaries' expulsion, Mwanga re-entered Uganda and regained his throne through the help of his Christian subjects, and two of the missionaries returned with him. Alexander Mackay, however, one of the pioneer missionaries, died in 1890 while at the south end of the Lake. In the same year Mwanga accepted a British flag from the representatives of the Imperial British East Africa Company. Sir Gerald Portal reached Uganda, as Queen's Commissioner, in March, 1893, and in April, 1894, the British Government declared the country a British protectorate. In the summer of 1897 Mwanga fled from the capital, and his infant son Chwa, baptized by the name of David, was proclaimed king. In September of the same year a serious mutiny of the Sudanese troops broke out; several European officers were seized and murdered; and one of the missionaries, Mr. G. L. Pilkington, who in response to the appeal of the authorities was accompanying the government forces as interpreter, lost his life. The country of Busoga first had a resident missionary in 1891, and in the five following years there was rapid expansion in the kingdom of Buganda; Toro was occupied in 1896; Bunyoro in 1899; Kavirondo in 1900; Ankole in 1901; the Acholi country in 1904; and Bukedi in 1908.

In 1897 the diocese of Eastern Equatorial Africa was subdivided, the Uganda Protectorate, according to the boundaries then obtaining (which have since been altered), being formed into the diocese of Uganda, which Bishop Tucker elected to retain, relinquishing the remainder to form the diocese of Mombasa. He resigned in 1911, and Bishop Willis was consecrated as his successor in 1912.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

I. Many of the counties in the kingdom of Buganda, which is co-terminous with the province of that name, have been occupied by British missionaries or Baganda clergymen.

Candidates are prepared for ordination in the theological school at Mukono; training classes for men are held at various stations; and men school teachers are trained in a normal school at Kampala, the capital. For women there are evangelists' training classes at Kampala and elsewhere, and a normal school for girls at Gayaza. The schools include an intermediate school (known as the King's School) at Budo, and lower grade schools at Kampala. Mukono (Bishop's School), Kasangate, Ndeje, Mityana, Kikoma, and Kako, all of them for the sons of chiefs and for others who can pay the fees; a girls' boarding school at Gayaza; and a considerable number of elementary schools. All the schools are supported by the Uganda Church, the C.M.S. providing only the salaries of the European missionaries engaged in them. At Kampala there is also the Mengo hospital, to which several dispensaries are affiliated.

II. In the Western Province, which comprises the kingdoms of Ankole and Toro, and in the kingdom of Bunyoro, in the Northern Province, the training of evangelists is prosecuted at Mbarara, Kabarole, and Hoima, and at each station there is also a lower grade school. There is a hospital at Kabarole. Work has also been begun at Gulu, in the Acholi country.

III. In Busoga work is of long standing; but in Bukedi, which, like Busoga, is in the Eastern Province, and in Kavirondo, which is in the East Africa Protectorate, it is still in its infancy. There are training classes for evangelists at Kamuli and Ng'ora, and for women evangelists at Iganga, and lower grade boys' schools at Kamuli, Ng'ora, Mbale, and Maseno.

The pastoral care of the 114,570 Christians connected with the Society in the Mission is shared by European missionaries and Baganda, Batoro, and Banyoro clergymen. All the African clergymen and lay teachers, who now number 45 and 3412 respectively, have always been entirely maintained by the contributions of the people, save that since 1910 a number of evangelists have been sent to Bukedi who are supported from money voted to the diocese by the Committee entrusted with the distribution of the unallotted portion of the Pan-Anglican Thank-offering.

Throughout the Mission evangelistic work is largely in the hands of African evangelists superintended by European missionaries.

The staff of the Mission consists, besides Bishop Willis, of 38 European clergymen, 5 doctors, 6 other laymen, 36 missionaries' wives, and 35 other women missionaries; 9 of the women are trained nurses, working in connexion with the medical missions.

Growing wealth of Uganda

THE government report for 1913-14 on the Uganda Protectorate, which was issued in 1915, gives the population as 2,909,122, of whom about 1000 are Europeans.[1] During the year reported on, the number of deaths from sleeping sickness was 708 as compared with 932 in the previous year and 8003 in 1905. The wealth of the country is growing rapidly, and the imports, which in 1909 were of the value of £400,000, rose in 1914 to £1,000,000. The value of the cotton crop in that year exceeded £300,000.[2]

Opportunities for mission work through the war

The ordinary work of the people and also of the Mission was materially interfered with in 1915 by the war. Many of the chiefs and headmen went off to the front, and a large number of the people were pressed into service as carriers. Drawn as these were from all parts of the diocese, and with fresh men continually coming and going, valuable opportunities of teaching them were afforded to the missionaries, Archdeacon T. R. Buckley, and the Revs. G. R. Blackledge, H. B. Lewin and J. Britton, who were appointed Army chaplains. The porters attended services freely, and many of them bought Testaments or reading books.[3] Moreover at the mission hospital at Kampala, which was offered to the Government and accepted as a base hospital, and to which many sick Indians and a certain number of wounded men were sent, there were many openings for evangelistic work, and Hindustani New Testaments were gladly accepted. A number of boys from the mission schools were formed into a native medical corps and gave great assistance, while boys from King's School, Budo, for about six months acted as police at Kampala in the place of the men who had gone to the front. The Rev. E. Millar, the secretary of the Mission, received in June, 1915, an expression of Mr. Harcourt's "appreciation of the service which the Church Missionary Society rendered to the Government of the Protectorate on the outbreak of war." [1]

The Government's thanks

Several steps, designed to increase the efficiency of the work of the Church of Uganda, of which the European missionaries as well as the people of the country are members, were taken in 1915, among them being the extension of the scheme for dividing the diocese into rural deaneries [2]; a prolongation of the period of the catechumenate in all districts coming under the Board of Missions from six months to two years; and an effort to bring the Theological Board and the Board of Education into closer touch. As an experiment it has been decided to train junior catechists and junior schoolmasters in the same classes, reading the same course, in the hope of inducing more of the better educated boys to take up evangelistic and pastoral work, as distinct from merely educational work. Again, an educational conference, the first to be held in the country, attended by both European and African delegates, was held at Budo in April [3]; and this was followed later in the year by a schools' guild, attended by the Governor and Lady Jackson and many other European visitors, at which sixteen schools from different parts of the diocese competed with each other at football, squad drill, etc., and there was an exhibition of the coffee grown on the school estates and the products of other forms of industrial work. Another event of the year which calls for record is the laying of the foundation stone of the new cathedral by the Kabaka, Daudi Chwa, in November.[4] The great national services held in the old cathedral had a marked influence on the people, and the lack of them is sorely felt.

Educational conference

The Church of Uganda has for many years been noted for its missionary zeal. In early days it sent out Baganda teachers to foreign countries such as Ankole, Bunyoro, and Toro, and in process of time natives from those kingdoms accompanied the Baganda to the still remoter regions of Bukedi and Gulu. But lately, while there have been an ever-widening horizon and an ever-growing demand for Christian teaching in the unevangelized parts of the diocese, there have also been, says Bishop Willis, "a steady diminishing zeal for the work of Christ shown among those who should have been foremost in doing it, and a growing satisfaction with the comforts and honours of this world, and an increasing tendency to leave to younger congregations and immature boys the task and the glory of evangelizing our own 'regions beyond.'" Of the money given to the work in the missionary districts, eight-ninths is derived from England through the Pan-Anglican Fund, and only one-ninth from the Church of Uganda.[1] But 1915 witnessed a new step. The Rev. A. Shaw, a C.M.S. missionary in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, visited Uganda in June in order to appeal for volunteers to help the Sudan Mission. The pagan people in that region have seen many African Mohammedans, some of them in high positions of trust and responsibility, but they have seen nothing of African Christianity and the presence in their midst of African Christian workers appeared desirable as evidencing the progress of Christianity in Africa as well as reinforcing the staff of the Mission. Two boys in their third year at King's School, Budo, were the first to respond to Mr. Shaw's appeal, and they were followed by a pupil teacher from Ndeje. Then an appeal was made to the elder men gathered for the meeting of the synod. The response was immediate, One of the senior Baganda clergymen, the Rev. Yosuwa Kiwavu,[2] the "father" of the work in Busoga, offered himself, and his example was speedily followed by three other clergymen and two lay readers. Kiwavu, the two lay readers, the Budo boys, and two or three others, left in July for work at Mongalla and Malek.[3] Sickness, however, soon obliged Kiwavu to return to Uganda.

The anti-doctor sect

The annual letters of the missionaries contain many references to the anti-doctor sect which was described in last year's Report,[4] and which seems now to be called the Malaki sect, after the native teacher who began the practice of indiscriminate baptism. The movement received an impetus by the Kabaka sending a letter to the county chiefs forbidding them to hinder Malaki in the propogation of his tenets, and also by a number of the chiefs allowing their illegitimate children to be baptized by the teachers of the movement. For a time many of the Christian congregations were thinned, for no questions were asked of those who sought baptism from these teachers, and many went to them who desired to get a Christian name—which is regarded as a sign of civilization and carries with it a certain improved social status—without the trouble of learning about the Christian faith or amending their lives. But the teachers or preachers of the movement always tell the people to read the books which they can only obtain from the Mission, and many of their adherents in course of time put themselves under regular Christian instruction. On the whole the general opinion seems to be that this movement is not likely to prove a grave or permanent danger to the Church.

The Committee have accepted the resignation of the Rev. G. H. Casson. By an oversight last year's Report failed to mention the retirement of the Rev. A. B. Fisher after twenty-two years of work in the Mission, for the most part at new stations.

Literary work

The literary work in the Mission was as follows: the Rev. H. T. C. Weatherhead, with the help of some of the senior boys in the King's School, continued the revision of the New Testament in Luganda, wrote a commentary on St. James's Epistle in that language, and edited a magazine, "Ebifa mu Buganda," which has a circulation of about 1300 monthly; Mrs. H. K. Banks compiled a first reading book in Lugisu; Archdeacon A. L. Kitching translated St. Matthew's Gospel into Ateso, and revised the other three Gospels in that language; the Rev. A. E. Pleydell translated most of St. Paul's Epistles and parts of the Prayer Book into Dholuwo; and in Luhanga the Rev. A. J. Leech completed and revised a translation of St. Luke's Gospel, and also translated a form of service for the baptism of adults and several hymns, and compiled a first school reader.

I. BUGANDA PROVINCE

Kampala Normal school and other schools

THE Normal School at Kampala had thirty-five students, all reading for the senior schoolmasters' certificate, for under present arrangements the boys seeking the junior certificate are taught at the district centres. The payment of fees is about to be required so as to obtain a better standard of students than those who become pupil teachers merely for the sake of the lucrative posts which open to them directly their term of service is finished. The High School has been eclipsed in some degree by other institutions owing to its fees for boarders amounting to about £5 per annum, whereas at the Central School, a day school with 250 pupils under a very capable Muganda master, they only amount to 16*s*. Twelve women were in the Class for Bible Women reading for the second certificate. There is a normal class at the Girls' Day School, the expenses of which are largely met by the proceeds of the girls' needlework and the coffee they grow. The girls show a missionary spirit, and more than once of their own accord brought pencils or other school necessaries that they might be sent to village schools which lacked them. The work at the Mengo Hospital was on a larger scale than ever before; the number of beds was increased in 1915 from 140 to 300, and 3100 in-patients were received, as compared with 1887 in 1914. Nearly 1000 of the patients were soldiers, many of whom were accommodated at the theological hostel which was put at the disposal of the doctors; and 130 Indians were admitted on a single day, most of them suffering from malaria. All the patients received in the new Indian hospital which was opened in January, 1915,[1] pay fees, and the income from this source amounted to Rs 6000 in ten months. No restrictions were placed by the Government on the evangelistic work in the hospital. Among the African patients was a man who had been brought a distance of eighty miles for treatment. At first he was afraid of the Europeans, but when he left he said, "Now I have seen your kindness and your customs, I want to know about your God." The Pastoral Work at Kampala is in the hands of the Rev. B. Musoke. His daily men's Bible class was attended by but few, but a good number were usually present at that taken by the Rev. E. Millar once a week at the Katikiro's.

Mengo hospital

"I have seen your kindness . . . I want to know about your God"

Some difficulty is experienced in getting Baganda girls to offer themselves for school work; their parents want them at home for cultivating and cooking the food, many of the young people get married soon after leaving school, and often those who put themselves under training have not enough perseverance to go through the whole course. The number of students at the Girls' Normal School at Gayaza is consequently but small. The need of women school teachers is, however, urgent. In almost every case where it has been possible to have a separate school for girls, instead of sending them to learn with the boys, the number of girls has increased. There is a normal class at the Girls' Boarding School; one member of it, a niece of Sir Apolo Kagwa, the Katikiro, left in 1915 to take up work in Busoga. The number on the roll of the girls' day school at Gayaza was reduced owing to the Malaki movement; many of the pupils were baptized by the leader of the sect, and having thus "received a name," and wanting nothing more, they discontinued their attendance at school.

Gayaza Girls' Normal School

Girls' Boarding School

Several boys left the King's School at Budo in 1915, two of them, sons of the Katikiro, to enter Trinity College, Kandy, where they speedily distinguished themselves in athletics; two to act as pioneer African workers in the Southern Sudan; and three because of their inability to comply with a new rule of the Board of Education that fees must be paid in advance. Three others were expelled for misconduct during the holidays; the tone of the school is wholesome, but the lads when at home are exposed to much temptation. A normal class is held in the school; all the central schools in Buganda now have old Budo boys as their headmasters, and some of these are looking forward to ordination. The printing press has been enlarged and now undertakes all the work for the Mission. An old boy, Sergeant Ashe Mukasa, has been promoted to the rank of "Effendi," or Lieutenant in the Buganda Rifles.

The Malaki schism affected the work at Entebbe, and the attendance at the schools was diminished by the war and by an epidemic of smallpox. Entebbe

Ten candidates for ordination were in residence at the Theological Hall at Mukono, and twenty-five men studying for the lay readers' licence. The difficulty met with in 1914 on account of cultivation being part of the training died down, the synod having decided that manual labour, including cultivation, should be an integral part of the curriculum. The Bishop's School, a day school for the sons of chiefs and others who can pay the fees, had more pupils than in 1914; the boys do needlework, which is men's work in Uganda, and help to meet the expenses of the school by their exertions on the school plantations. They have undertaken the support of their "own missionary," a young schoolmaster in Bukedi. The girls' school, where a class of thirteen pupil teachers, is held, was affected adversely by the Malaki movement. Two new schools for girls only were opened in the district, and placed under the charge of former members of the class. One of them was at Nakanyonyi, where under the leadership of the Rev. Y. Nakumanyanga the people have made a good deal of progress in the direction of self-support.[1]

Ndeje is the head-quarters of the work in the county of Bulemezi, which contains a population of 102,000, and the district of Buruli, where Lunyoro and not Luganda is spoken. Including Ndeje, there are six pastorates, each under a Muganda clergyman, the centres of which are at distances varying from twelve to fifty-four miles from the head station. Classes for teachers reading for the senior and junior certificates, and for would-be schoolmasters and Bible women are held at Ndeje, and on two mornings a week there is Dispensary work. The new rule as to the prepayment of fees caused a falling off in the attendance at the Central School. Many of the chiefs and headmen in Bulemezi left for the "front," and this had much to do with a decrease in the gifts to church work; but it must be admitted that the people in general, though wealthier than they used to be, are prone to spend their money on providing their new requirements in the shape of European clothes and food rather than on God's work. But the Rev. J. S. Herbert adds that "the teachers are wonderfully good, and are doing work—often responsible work—for very little pay, seldom complaining, yet living lives of self-denial that often put us to shame." Ndeje

Patient teachers

In the county of Singo the great majority of the 50,000 people are heathen, and Mohammedans are few in number. A training class of ten pupil teachers is held at the Central School at Mityana, Mityana where the Muganda master is doing capital work. The Rev. H. Bowers made three extensive evangelistic itinerations, besides paying many visits to village churches near at hand.

Kikoma

About a hundred candidates were presented to Bishop Willis for confirmation from the two pastorates in the county of Buwekula; the Bishop during his visit conducted a three days' retreat for the teachers which was of "untold value and blessing." Twenty men were in the Class at Kikoma for teachers preparing for the senior certificate. As soon as it became known that schools had to be self-supporting, many of the schoolmasters left because they knew there would be no money available for their salaries, but six remained at their posts out of pure love for the work. In the Naigana district some of the teachers had to leave their stations in order to procure means to clothe themselves, for the principle of self-support has as yet made little progress in the district, but they soon returned. Four young men offered themselves for work in outlying districts of the protectorate. The immorality of some of the chiefs makes the task of winning the people around Naigana one of special difficulty.

Schoolmasters love their work

Kasaka

The district worked from Kasaka comprises the counties of Gomba, Busuju, Butambala, and Mawokota, with a population of about 72,000. It is divided into three pastorates, each under a Muganda pastor, and each with its own church council and schools. Bishop Willis confirmed more than 300 candidates at Kasaka in January, 1915, and afterwards devoted a couple of days to a retreat for the workers,[1] the good results of which were felt afterwards. The attendance at the Holy Communion throughout the district improved, but there was a decided falling off in that at the Sunday afternoon services. This may have been due in part to the Malaki movement, which was diligently propagated in the country districts, and also in part to a smallpox epidemic, which caused the roads to be closed for a time to public traffic, and thus isolated a large number of villages.

A retreat for workers

Kako

The county of Budu is the strongest Roman Catholic district in Buganda, and it is estimated that sixty per cent. of the patients who attend the dispensary at Kako belong to that faith. Most of the people in Budu have heard of Christ from either C.M.S. workers or the Roman Catholics, and the county of Koki is fairly well supplied with teachers, but Kabula and Mawogola, the two other counties worked from Kako, are still mainly heathen and have but few evangelists. The Malaki sect was active in the district, and the schools suffered from lack of funds. At Rakai in Koki, where a Muganda pastor is stationed, the people are weak and fickle, and singularly prone to sins of the flesh.[2]

II. WESTERN PROVINCE

THE kingdom of Ankole forms the south-western portion of the Uganda Protectorate and borders on German East Africa. It has been placed under martial law, and this accounts for the number of baptisms (592) in 1915 being fewer by some 200 than in the previous year. The country has been behind some other parts of the Mission in the organization of women's councils for examining women candidates for baptism or confirmation, but one was formed at Mbarara, the capital, in 1915, and one also at Kitoju, an outlying district. There are at Mbarara a Class for Teachers reading for the first certificate, a Boys' High School with sixty-seven pupils, and a growing Boarding School for Girls with thirty-one pupils. When the war first broke out one of the teachers in the missionary district of Kigezi, bordering German East Africa, was killed, and the rest had to flee for their lives; several have since been able to return to their stations, and there are now seven of them in the district.

Mbarara

There was a great increase in the number of African patients at the Hospital at Kabarole in the kingdom of Toro, and more Europeans also were treated in 1915 than in 1914. Many of the patients after leaving the hospital regularly attend a Sunday school organized for their benefit.[1] The Normal School, which was opened in 1914 for pupil teachers in the Western and Northern Provinces, had but six students, four of them from Toro and two from Bunyoro, but they did well in their studies. The High School improved in tone, and most of the boys showed an earnest spirit. The standard of teaching at the day school advanced; it is said that the Mukama (king) is trying to arrange with the government district commissioner a system of compulsory education. There are sixty girls in residence at the Girls' Boarding School, drawn from all classes. At the girls' day school the pupils were taught to make baskets with coloured twisted grasses and fibres—an industry which appeared likely to die out—and also drawn-thread work, and they cultivated coffee, supplying fifty lbs. of ground coffee a week to an agent who sent it to the Belgian troops in the Congo. The general work was affected adversely by the war, thousands of men being sent off as carriers, and also by the character of the Batoro, who are lacking in stability and perseverance. Several itinerations were made, and the Rev. A. B. Lloyd in the summer visited the southern half of Toro.[2] He found a keen desire among the people to understand the Gospel, and opened a new church at Katwe, by the shores of Lake George, where there is a great salt industry which attracts thousands of people. A fresh centre of work was established at Ng'oma, on the borders of Buganda. Among the Bakonjo, on the slopes of Mount Ruwenzori, a good number of young people were gradually being won for Christ, and the work prospered at Mboga, in the Belgian Congo, notwithstanding the fall of the chief teacher into sin.

III. NORTHERN PROVINCE

Masindi

Masindi, a township with nearly 5000 inhabitants, is the capital of the kingdom of Bunyoro, and the head-quarters of a district with a population of 50,000. The year was a record one as concerns the number of baptisms and the gifts of the people; £29 was raised by means of missionary boxes in the two years 1914 and 1915, and the Church received a legacy from one of its members who died at Mombasa. Classes are held at Masindi for teachers preparing for the second and first certificates, and for pupil teachers; the day schools prosper; the Sunday school supports a teacher at Gulu; and a night school for men and boys who are at work during the day has been set on foot and has thirty-three pupils, some of whom are reading for baptism and confirmation. The church estate, too, comprising 856 acres, yields twenty-seven per cent. on the invested capital, and in 1915 produced a crop of eight and a half tons of coffee. The Mukama, or king, takes a great interest in all church affairs, and Miriya, his wife, is very helpful in the women's work, and is a regular attendant at the meetings of the Mothers' Union. But there are some blots on the record. The Rev. H. W. Tegart says that never during his nineteen years in the Mission has he known of so much immorality, disease, and drunkenness among the Christians as at present, and he expresses his fear lest the old heathen customs should be getting a renewed grip on the converts and even some of the teachers. He mentions one uncertificated teacher who became seriously ill through brooding about some horns buried near his house to intimidate him, being firmly convinced that he was bewitched.

A record year

Superstitious fears

Hoima

There was a slight increase in the number of boys at the High School at Hoima, and they won the cup given for squad drill at the schools' competition at Kampala. An adult Sunday school was set on foot in place of the afternoon service, and gained an average attendance of well over a hundred, but, speaking generally, the people do not show much eagerness for instruction. The Dispensary, a branch of the hospital at Kabarole, which is open three mornings a week, attracted nearly twice as many patients as in the previous year. In February, 1915, Bishop Willis confirmed 159 candidates, drawn from the whole of Bunyoro, and a retreat for 150 teachers was afterwards held. A happy sequel was the offering of thirty young men for work at Gulu.

Gulu

A boarding school for the sons of chiefs was opened at Gulu in April, 1915, and soon had about thirty pupils; three of them were baptized before the year closed and ten others were under instruction for baptism. Some of the boys took teachers with them to their villages when they returned for the summer holidays. Five women, four of them chiefs' wives and the fifth the wife of the son of a chief, were baptized in October, the first women converts in the district. The year witnessed the occupation of several fresh out-stations, a step rendered possible by an influx of evangelists from Bunyoro, and by offers of personal service and gifts of money from the Gulu Christians. Ten of the new out-stations are in the sub-district of Kitgum, which lies to the north-east of Gulu, and others are in Lango, to the south-east. A government interpreter from Nyassaland was baptized in Kitgum, and the firstfruits of the work among the Chopi tribe, who inhabit a district to the south-west of Gulu, were received into the visible Church.

Many new out-stations

IV. EASTERN PROVINCE

A MEMBER of the Malaki sect visited the Jinja district, and baptized a number of the heathen, but many of them afterwards attended the church services, and the sale of books increased considerably. Frequent changes in the headmastership prevented much advance at the Boys' Boarding School.

Jinja

There are an Industrial School for boys at Iganga at which sixteen lads are taught carpentry, and a Girls' Boarding School with fifty pupils; most of the latter are the daughters of chiefs, and an effort was made with some success to induce the parents to contribute towards the cost of the school. A new iron-roofed church was completed and consecrated, in which later was celebrated the marriage of the young chief, Gideoni Oboja, with a well-educated Christian girl. This was an important event, since polygamy is a great hindrance to the evangelization of the country. Several itinerations were undertaken in the large district, in which a mass movement towards Christianity is in progress. It is said by the Rev. S. R. Skeens to be primarily a social and educational movement, but it has a strong religious element.

Iganga

Christian marriage of a young chief

Kamuli is the head-quarters of C.M.S. work in a district occupying the north and north-east of Busoga which has a population exceeding 200,000. The Teachers' Class had thirty-two members; the men are often lacking in grit and perseverance, and fifteen of those who had been in the class had left before the end of November. A new building was opened for the Balangira School for the sons of chiefs, which had 103 names on its roll. Forty-five of the boys were confirmed. One boy who was about to leave asked one day that a position in a government office might be obtained for him, but shortly afterwards he returned to the Rev. F. S. Rogers with the request that he might be appointed to a post as a teacher, in which he would receive much smaller pay than under the Government. A retreat for teachers was held by Bishop Willis in July, an immediate result of which was an offer by about twenty of them for work in Bukedi. A visit to the district from an agent of the Malaki sect led to a diminution in the number of patients at the Dispensary. From Kamuli several out-stations at distances varying from seven to twenty-five miles are visited periodically, but Kaliro, though in the district, is worked from Iganga. Ezekieri Zibondo, the chief of that part, married a Christian girl during the year.

Mbale

In the summer of 1915 it was decided to relinquish Nabumale as a European station, since it is only eight miles from Mbale, and to concentrate the staff at the latter station. This decision was not reached without some hesitation, and before it was made the question of permanently moving the High School for boys to Nabumale from its site about two miles from Mbale, which was regarded as unsuitable, had been under discussion. The uncertainty as to what was to be done did not conduce to the success of the school. The most important chief in the Mbale township became an adherent of the Malaki movement, and his example naturally was followed by many. The movement, as has already been pointed out, is "anti-doctor"; nevertheless some of Malaki's followers were among the patients at the Harper Memorial Dispensary at Mbale, and one of their number, a man afflicted with a bad ulcer, when asked why he applied for treatment, replied that it was all very well to make the promise not to use medicine so as to "get your name," but when the pains began to bite who would be so foolish as not to seek relief if it could be had! The district now worked from Mbale covers an area of 3500 square miles and contains a population exceeding 500,000. Large numbers of the people are under instruction, many others desire to be, and there is a great and sustained increase in the sales of reading books and testaments. But although the number of Bagisu "readers" rose from 6000 early in 1914 to 10,000 in 1915, the number of teachers fell from 150 to fewer than 100. More than 200 persons were baptized during the year, including the first of the chiefs in the county of Budama to become a Christian.

Ng'ora

In July Bishop Willis consecrated a church at Ng'ora, where 689 persons were admitted to the catechumenate in the first six months of 1915. The gifts towards the erection of the church included Rs 115 collected by an Indian trader, Rs 530 from Baganda residents, Rs 702 from Teso natives, Rs 376 from the Ng'ora Agricultural School, and Rs 1308 from Europeans. Advance was revealed also in the appointment of a Teso Christian to the diocesan synod,[1] and in the readiness of the converts to instruct others, illustrated by the fact that of the fifty-three persons confirmed in 1915 twenty-one were working as local teachers by the end of the year.[1] The Training College for teachers had nineteen students in residence. Lack of rain and a consequent shortage of food, a poor cotton crop and low prices for the cotton, a scarcity of money among the chiefs owing to the war—these and other adverse factors affected the Agricultural School prejudicially, but the spiritual tone of the school did not suffer, and many of the lads are reading for baptism. Much keenness to learn to read is shown in the district, and there is an ever increasing demand for the Scriptures; for some time the stock of copies of St. Mark's Gospel had been exhausted, and when a consignment of nearly 1000 copies arrived, all but ten were sold within a couple of days, while 500 copies of St. John's Gospel were disposed of in a fortnight.

V. KAVIRONDO

At the request of the Government a local committee has been formed, representing the missionary societies at work in Kavirondo, of which Archdeacon W. Chadwick is chairman. The Government, he says, has listened not only respectfully, but with the greatest generosity to the recommendations of the committee, and when a question arose between two of the societies as to an out-school, a member of a third society was easily able to show what was the proper course to be adopted.

A committee to represent missionary societies

At Maseno, as at Ng'ora, there has been rapid advance. At the end of 1913 the total number of adherents was 568; two years later it had risen to 1796, and in the same period the number of village schools increased from twenty-three to forty. Five girls were baptized in 1915, and more than a dozen were admitted to the catechumenate. In some districts, however, there were fewer adherents than formerly, owing partly to the great demand for Kavirondo labour in various parts of East Africa, and partly to the lapse of some of the senior converts into polygamy, which has had a bad influence. The chiefs and elders, it is said, are strenuously opposed to monogamy for two reasons: (1) Because of a desire for children, a childless husband being treated as a nonentity in their tribe, and (2) because of domestic difficulties if monogamy is adopted, since the wife of a monogamist has to work much harder than the wife of a polygamist, and when she is incapacitated there is no one to look after the children, fetch water and firewood, and so on. The Boarding School maintained its numbers; six of the boys were being trained as teachers, but most of them prefer to take up carpentry or building, by which, when qualified, they can command a higher wage than as teachers.

way, were more largely attended than ever, and almost all the baptized men feel it their duty and privilege to pass on to others what they have learned. With this evangelistic zeal among the Christians it is not surprising that the number of baptized Christians quadrupled during the year, and the number of catechumens more than doubled.

Butere

Archdeacon Chadwick, who is stationed at Butere, the youngest C.M.S. centre in the diocese, writes as follows of the situation in his district :—

> Little congregations are springing up in the villages, which I cannot oversee or visit properly, and some congregations which are not little. One numbers between four and five hundred persons. Our experience in other districts is that such congregations always dwindle after a few years or months. It is easy to say that this is because they are due to a love of novelty. I believe that God will not be pleased with that excuse. Some will follow the latest novelty, but most would stay if they were not starved. A flock of pigeons does not scatter and leave its loft so long as there is healthy food in sufficient variety. These people are very gregarious. We try to develop individual conviction, but our opportunity is very often with the mass. The difficulties that beset a few scattered Christians are immense; the marriage difficulties alone sometimes seem almost insurmountable; but when a whole village comes over, there are no longer complaints of Christian girls being forced to marry heathen who perhaps already have several wives. Public opinion comes to be for us instead of against us. Only, the village must be taught; otherwise the last state is worse than the first.

Zeal of converts leads to extension of work

The zeal of the Christians, which is mainly responsible for the growth of the work, is shown in various ways. Two mission school-boys approached the chief of their village and suggested that they should have a little school church; the chief approved; a building was erected; a couple of lads, one a Muganda and the other a Muhanga attending the school at Butere, went to live at the place; and soon they had more than thirty pupils in the school they held daily, and a congregation of ninety persons at the Sunday morning services. Again, a young man, baptized at Kisumu, returned to his friends in the Samia Hills, forty miles west of Butere, began teaching the people, and soon gathered together a congregation too large for the church, holding 200 persons, which he built. The first Butere converts, two men and a big boy, were baptized in December, 1915.[1] Among the inquirers is a chief, Mulama by name, who is held back by having fourteen wives, most of them sisters or daughters of chiefs; he would probably be willing to give them up were it not that doing so would prejudice his chances of succeeding to the position of paramount chief.

MOHAMMEDAN LANDS

The Church Missionary Society is one of the few missionary societies which pay special attention to work among Mohammedans, the number of whom is estimated at 201,297,000. Work among them is attended everywhere, even in countries where Christian governments are supreme, with peculiar difficulties and often with vexatious restrictions; and these are intensified in lands under Mohammedan rule, where the law of Islam, which enacts death as the penalty for forsaking that faith for another, is still in some degree in force, notwithstanding proclamations of religious liberty. The British protectorate over Egypt renders the position of converts from Islam in that land less perilous than in Persia and in lands under Turkish government, where a Mohammedan can only become a Christian at the imminent risk of liberty and life.

The C.M.S. has considerable work among Mohammedans in West and East Africa, India, and Ceylon, as well as in those countries which are included under the title "Mohammedan Lands."

The war in Moslem lands

SINCE the Report for 1914–15 was written a great deal of fighting has taken place in Moslem lands. The Gallipoli peninsula has been the scene of deeds of marvellous but ultimately futile heroism on the part of the British and Colonial troops and of their French allies. To the east, after victories in Caucasia, the Russians have advanced to the capture of Erzeroum and Trebizond, and the deliverance of Northern Persia from the yoke which the enemy sought to impose upon it; while in Southern Persia engagements have occurred between the Russians and the heterogeneous forces gathered by German influence. In Turkish Arabia, the enemy was defeated at Kut-el-Amara on September 28, and on November 23 sustained another reverse at Ctesiphon, about twenty-five miles from Baghdad; then, however, the arrival of fresh Turkish divisions made retreat imperative, and on December 3 the British force was back at Kut, where almost at once it was besieged. All efforts to relieve it failed, and on April 29, General Townsend, 2970 British troops, and about 6000 Indian troops were obliged to surrender owing to the exhaustion of supplies. Palestine alone of the lands included under the title of this chapter has witnessed little if any conflict, but nevertheless war is greatly in evidence there. It is said that all the convents in Jerusalem have been transformed into barracks; recruits exercise in the Plain of Samaria and on the Mount of Olives, where German officers are said to have installed posts of observation; and a shooting range has been organized on Mount Golgotha. Large numbers of the Jews have been expelled from the Holy Land with relentless cruelty, and those who remain are reported to be in dire straits.

Turkish atrocities

The Turks are often stated to be "clean" fighters, but they have committed the most fearful atrocities upon the Christians under their rule. Wholesale massacre and deportation were carried out against the Christian inhabitants of certain districts comparatively early in the year, and after the entry of Bulgaria into the conflict the ferocity of Turkey's treatment of her Christian subjects was intensified. Eastern Anatolia, Cilicia, and the Anti-Taurus region have been the scene of the worst cruelties. At Marsoven early in June the authorities ordered the Armenians to meet outside the town, surrounded them, and killed 1200 of the younger men among them. The richer Armenians were allowed to avoid death by conversion to Islam, but the poorer ones who wished to deny their faith and thus save their families were killed or exiled. At Bitlis and Mush some 12,000, many of them women, are reported to have been shot or drowned. Up to August 17 the total loss of life was estimated at 500,000. Others besides the Armenians suffered. All the Nestorian Christian villages in the plain of Urumia were plundered and burned by Kurds in March, 1915, and more than 12,000 persons were murdered or died of disease.[1]

Converts and inquirers

Work in Moslem lands was so largely in suspense in 1915, and so few reports have been received, that there is little account to give of converts and inquirers. In one of the Missions, the head teacher in a mission girls' school was baptized, and among other new converts were a couple of women patients in a mission hospital at one station, a young woman and some others at a second, and three girls at a third. Some inquirers are also spoken of, but few details are added concerning them.

EGYPT AND THE SUDAN MISSIONS

PAST HISTORY

The original object of the C.M.S. Missions formerly grouped under the heading of the "Mediterranean Mission," which were begun at Malta in 1815 at the close of the great war, and were afterwards extended to Egypt, Abyssinia, Greece, Turkey, Asia Minor, and Palestine, was twofold: first, to revive the Eastern Churches; and, second, through them to evangelize the Mohammedans. Some very able and devoted missionaries were employed in this work—Jowett, Gobat, Krapf, Pfander, Koelle, etc. But the hopes of the founders of the Society were not fulfilled. Oriental Christendom manifested no readiness to be quickened into life by emissaries from the West; and Moslem fanaticism, which barely tolerated Greek and Armenian Christianity, utterly repudiated the Gospel when presented in a pure form.

The Society formerly had a Mission in Egypt, as part of its scheme for the revival of the Eastern Churches. Many of the Coptic clergy and one bishop were trained in the C.M.S. seminary at Cairo; but the visible results were small, and the work was discontinued in 1862. In 1882, in response to the appeals of the late Miss Whately and in consequence of the British occupation of Egypt, the Rev. F. A. Klein, formerly of Jerusalem, was sent to Cairo to begin a new Mission among the Mohammedans. A medical mission was opened in 1889, and women were added to the staff in the following year. Helouan was occupied in 1903, and Menouf and Shubra Zanga in 1910. After Gordon's death at Khartoum in 1885 a Gordon Memorial Fund was opened, and soon after the defeat of the Khalifa's forces Omdurman (1899) and Khartoum (1900) were occupied, under some restrictions, however, as to evangelistic efforts. Atbara was occupied in 1908. In 1905 the Society was invited by Lord Cromer and the Sirdar to commence work in the southern part of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, and Malek was occupied in the following year; Lau in 1912; and Yambio in 1913.

Egypt is included in the jurisdiction of the Right Rev. R. MacInnes, the Anglican Bishop in Jerusalem. An assistant bishop, the Right Rev. Ll. H. Gwynne, consecrated in 1908, resides at Khartoum. Both of these bishops were C.M.S. missionaries previous to their consecration.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

I. The Society occupies five stations in Egypt proper. A boarding school and two day schools for girls are maintained at Cairo; a school for boys, with a hostel attached, at Old Cairo; and a school for high-class girls at Helouan. There is also a book depôt at Cairo, and a fortnightly magazine, "Orient and Occident," is published. Evangelistic meetings are held for sheikhs, students, and others. Medical work is carried on at hospitals for men and for women and children at Old Cairo and Menouf. Work among the fellahin is maintained at Menouf and Shubra Zanga.

II. In the Sudan, the sphere of the operations of the Gordon Memorial Mission, the Society has girls' schools at Khartoum, Omdurman, and Atbara, and a medical mission at Omdurman. Work has also been begun among the Jieng and Azandi, pagan tribes, 1000 miles farther up the Nile.

There are 12 clergymen, 9 laymen, 11 missionaries' wives, and 20 other women missionaries engaged in the Missions; 6 of these are doctors and 4 are nurses. There are also 45 native Christian lay agents.

THE war has not produced any very great change in conditions in Egypt, beyond that caused by the presence of large numbers of troops in the country and some fighting near the western border, where the Sennussi were defeated in January, 1916. "The people are by no means pro-British, but they are fatalists, and they are prepared to await the issues of the war, and to abide by the results as a proof of the will of Providence. The sting has been taken out of the agitators' propaganda. . . . Everything is quiet and peaceable, and if the coming cotton crop is good, there is every prospect that the present tranquil state of things will continue." [1] But while the great conflict has brought about but little change in the conditions under which the missionaries work, it has made it impossible to give any detailed account of their proceedings during 1915, for the mail containing the great majority of the annual letters from the Mission has been lost, presumably through some feat of German or Austrian submarines.

Deaths of Mrs. E. B. Bywater,

Mrs. E. B. Bywater, who sailed for the Mission in 1890, died at Cairo on 13 December, 1915. She and her daughter, Miss J. E. B. Bywater, were the first women missionaries, as distinguished from missionaries' wives, sent out to the Mission. She did excellent work in the girls' schools of Cairo.

and Mr. H. Lamb

Mr. H. Lamb, who worked in the Mission as accountant from 1907 to 1914, died at Bournemouth on November 23.

The Committee have accepted the resignations of Miss L. Crowther and Miss D. Lloyd, and the Rev. J. F. Medley's agreement with the Society has expired.

Literary work

The Rev. Canon W. H. T. Gairdner wrote in Arabic a manual on Preparation for the Holy Communion, and commentaries, with new translations, on the Epistles to the Galatians and the Hebrews, and compiled a book of Oriental Hymn Tunes, to which he supplied a preface on oriental music; he was also engaged on two controversial works, to be published in both Arabic and English, namely, "God as Trinity, as Incarnate, and as Atonement," and "Aspects of the Redemptional Work of Christ." The Rev. E. C. Gore completed a tentative translation of St. Mark's Gospel into Azandi, and the Rev. W. Haddow one of St. John's Gospel.

Cairo

Training Class closed

THE Training Class at Cairo, which was set on foot in 1903, was closed towards the end of 1915, three of the girls then receiving their certificates, two others being given posts as pupil teachers, and the remaining four transferred to the boarding school. During the twelve years that the class has been carried on sixteen certificates have been awarded, and good work in the C.M.S. schools has been done by the holders, as well as by others who have not taken the full course.

Old Cairo

Hospital

The Society's Hospital at Old Cairo was called upon to receive some patients who would normally have been treated at the government hospital at Cairo, in consequence of the latter institution being reserved for wounded soldiers, but this did not cause a large increase in the number of patients at the C.M.S. institution, because a rumour got abroad that it, as well as the government hospital, was closed to natives.

The visit which Lord Kitchener paid to the C.M.S. hospital at Old Cairo in 1913 [1] led him to encourage the Public Health Department to open ankylostomiasis hospitals in the provinces, and the Egypt missionary conference determined in consequence to adopt that course at Menouf. With the aid of money contributed as a memorial to the late Dr. Pain buildings were erected, which were formally opened in April, 1915. They consist of a dispensary for out-patients, two compounds for men and women ankylostomiasis patients, and a small ward with a few beds for serious cases of other illnesses. Following on this development, the dispensary at Hamoul was given up, while that at Ashmoun was superintended from Menouf where Dr. F. J. Harpur made his head-quarters. An attempt was made during the year to poison two of the Society's women missionaries, but happily serious harm was averted by the prompt measures which were taken. [2]

II. ANGLO-EGYPTIAN SUDAN (GORDON MEMORIAL MISSION)

1. NORTHERN SUDAN

With the permission of the director of education for the Sudan the Rev. J. F. Medley conducted a Bible class for the Copts of the senior department of the Gordon College at Khartoum. He says that Christian instruction is given in the junior department only, while Islam is taught throughout the college.

Khartoum

One of the Sudanese girls living with Mrs. A. C. Hall at Omdurman was married early in 1915 to a Moslem gardener employed by the American mission, there being no Christian Sudanese suitable as a husband for her.

Omdurman

2. SOUTHERN SUDAN

Both at Malek, 990 miles south of Khartoum, and also at Lau, the work is among the Jieng, a childlike people, animists by religion, who offer sacrifices but possess no idols, and whose priests use mediums by which they profess to tell people the causes of illness, etc.

The dispensary at Malek records about 400 visits of out-patients each month, an inquirers' class and a reading class are held, and an endeavour is made to teach some lads the arts of printing and weaving. Some work has also been set on foot among the women in the form of spinning classes. One man declared his belief in Christ and renounced heathen customs and practices, but the other "inquirers" hesitated to take such practical steps, and particularly to discontinue night dancing. One of the mission houses was destroyed by fire in March, 1915.

Lau

Lau also suffered during the year, for it was raided by a band of Nuers. The dispensary there was popular, and the people were friendly. A couple of boys professed faith in Christ, but showed few signs of any real change of heart. Mohammedan influence is strong at the station. There are several resident Moslem merchants, and many travelling traders, soldiers, and government officials, who affect Islam, visit the place; these employ a number of small boys who are slowly but surely adopting the dress and customs of their masters, and are learning to keep the Mohammedan feasts.

Strong Moslem influence

Yambio

The Azandi, who are reached at Yambio, are said to be superior to the Jieng, albeit they are cannibals and are more immoral and less religious.[1] Some thirty boys attended the school, and made progress in their studies, while the six pupils under industrial training showed a natural aptitude for work both in wood and iron. The dispensary registered 8000 visits of patients, each person on the average attending about seven times. One boy who expressed a wish to be baptized seemed to have a good grip of the truth, but he died of dysentery in the spring of 1915. Several other boys, solemnized by the death from dysentery of two of their companions, and some men also put themselves under regular instruction.[2]

PALESTINE MISSION

PAST HISTORY

The C.M.S. work in Palestine began in 1851, in response to an invitation given by Bishop Gobat. The following places have been occupied by European labourers: Jerusalem, 1851; Nazareth, 1852; Jaffa and Nablous, 1853; Haifa, 1856; Shefamer, 1871; Salt, 1874; Ramallah, 1877; Gaza, 1878; Ramleh, 1879; El Husn, 1890; Kefr Yasif, 1892; and Bir Zeit, 1894. Medical missions have done much to diminish prejudice. The first (under a native doctor) was set on foot at Salt in 1883. In 1887 the Society began to send unmarried women to this Mission. In 1899 the work of the late Female Education Society at Nazareth, Bethlehem, and Shefamer was taken over by the Society.

The bishopric in Jerusalem was founded in 1841 on the initiative of King Frederick William IV. of Prussia, the arrangement being that England and Prussia, who shared the expense of the see, should alternately nominate its occupant. The first three bishops were Dr. Alexander, Dr. Gobat (1846), previously a C.M.S. missionary, and Dr. Barclay (1879). On the death of the last named in 1881 the German Government failed to nominate a successor, and eventually declined to continue the arrangement. In 1887 the bishopric was revived by Archbishop Benson, the London Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews and the Church Missionary Society having undertaken to make an annual subscription to the stipend of the see to supplement the endowment, and Dr. Blyth was appointed. He was succeeded in 1914 by Bishop MacInnes.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

Before the war the C.M.S. worked at six main stations west of the Jordan namely, Jerusalem, Nazareth, Nablous (the Denis Crofton Mission), Jaffa, Gaza, and Haifa; and at Salt, on the east of the river.

At each of these stations and at their out-stations day schools were carried on, that at Gaza being attended by some 300 girls. The chief institutions for men and boys were the English College and the Bishop Gobat School at Jerusalem, and for girls a training school at Bethlehem, an orphanage at Nazareth, and a boarding school at Ramleh. Jaffa, Nablous, Gaza, and Salt were centres of medical missionary work. Much was done to reach the women by means of visiting them in their homes, both in the towns and villages.

The pastoral work in the Mission was mainly in the hands of the Palestine Church Council, with which 9 native clergymen are connected. The European staff consists of 7 clergymen, 6 laymen, 11 missionaries' wives, and 25 other women missionaries; of these, 6 are doctors and 6 are trained nurses connected with the medical missions. The native Christian lay agents number 121.

Kindness of Turkish officials to a missionary

THE only C.M.S. European missionary in Palestine when 1915 opened was Miss E. A. Lawford who, on her own responsibility, had decided to remain at Nazareth. News concerning her and the native clergymen and workers has from time to time reached the Committee indirectly, from which it appears that for a time Miss Lawford was allowed to reside at the orphanage. Later, however, this was no longer permitted, and she had to take rooms in the town. She wrote in November that her neighbours were showing her much kindness and that she had many callers, some visiting her in the hope of obtaining food and clothing, but others without such ulterior motives.

Services conducted by native workers

In the spring of 1915 the Rev. B. Musa and the catechist and schoolmaster of Jaffa were living in a house which they had rented at Damascus, after having been imprisoned in that city for a time. Later communications spoke of Mr. Musa holding services at Jaffa, though still forbidden to reside there; apparently he had been allowed to leave Damascus and live at Jerusalem. At the other stations, excepting Haifa and El Husn, services seem to have been conducted regularly and without opposition.[1]

Deaths of Miss A. A. M. Bedells,

The deaths have to be recorded of one member of the mission staff and three former members, Miss A. A. M. Bedells, who passed away at Khartoum on 2 June, 1915, went to Palestine in 1892, and having previously had some training at the Mildmay Hospital was appointed to the hospital at Gaza, whence a couple of years later she was transferred to Nablous. When the missionaries had to leave Palestine she did not wish to come home, and was therefore sent to take charge of the girls' school at Atbara, 190 miles north of Khartoum. It was while there that she was seized with the illness which proved fatal.[2]

Sergeant J. E. Robinson,

Sergeant J. E. Robinson was killed at the Dardanelles on August 21. He joined the C.M.S. as science master at the English College, Jerusalem, in 1911, and returned to England in 1914 on the expiration of his agreement.[3] Shortly after the outbreak of war he enlisted in the 8th West Riding Regiment.

Mrs. R. Elliott,

Mrs. Elliott, widow of the Rev. Dr. R. Elliott, who died at Shortlands on August 29, was a daughter of the late Bishop Royston. She worked in the mission with her husband from her marriage in 1888 until his retirement in 1892.

and Miss E. Armstrong

The death of Miss E. Armstrong, who worked in the Mission from 1888 to 1898, occurred at Southport on October 15. She was one of the first to respond to the appeal made at Keswick by the Rev. J. R. Longley Hall for ten women missionaries for Palestine. Her long experience of work in England enabled her from the outset to render valuable help in the Mission.[4]

The Committee have accepted the resignations of Miss F. E. Newton after twenty years' service, and Miss K. M. Strong.

TURKISH ARABIA MISSION

Baghdad, which is in the Turkish Empire, is in the immediate neighbourhood of the sacred places of the Shiah Mohammedans. Thousands of pilgrims flock to it from all parts of Persia, and in order to reach them the city was occupied by a C.M.S. missionary in 1883. A hospital was opened in 1886. In 1898 the work, previously carried on in connexion with that in Persia, was constituted an independent Mission. Three years later Mosul, near the site of ancient Nineveh, was occupied.

Before the war medical and educational work were carried on at both the above stations. The staff consists of 2 European clergymen, 2 laymen, 2 missionaries' wives, and 5 women missionaries; of these, 3 are doctors and 3 are trained nurses. There are also 22 native Christian lay agents.

The fighting in Mesopotamia

Reference has already been made in the chapter on Mohammedan Lands to the prolonged and desperate struggle in Mesopotamia, with its varying fortunes, leading up to the siege and surrender of an important British Force at Kut-el-Amara, at the end of April, 1916. Bishop Durrant, of Lahore, visited the troops on the Tigris in September, and spent a week at least in each of the several camps. He was there when Kut-el-Amara was captured by the British, and on the Sunday evening before that event, by the special wish of General Townsend, he held a service at which the whole British Force gathered in the aviation square.[1]

Death of Mrs. E. E. Lavy

Mrs. Lavy, wife of the Rev. E. E. Lavy, M.B., passed away at Peshawar on 23 December, 1915, a few days after giving birth to a son. Dr. and Mrs. Lavy had been temporarily located to Peshawar when they left Turkish Arabia owing to the war.

The Committee have accepted the resignation of Dr. A. H. Griffith.

There has been no C.M.S. missionary in Turkish Arabia since Dr. Johnson and his colleagues left early in 1915, and no news has reached the Committee concerning the native Christian agents of the Mission.

PERSIA MISSION

PAST HISTORY

Persia, though one of the youngest of the C.M.S. Missions, was among the first countries thought of by the Committee, and was mentioned in each of the two earliest Annual Reports. Henry Martyn stayed ten months in the country in 1811. Since 1834 an American Mission has laboured with much blessing among the Nestorian Christians, and latterly among Mohammedans also, in northern and western Persia. In 1869 the Rev. R. Bruce, of the C.M.S., visited Persia on his way back to India, and, finding the Mohammedans of Ispahan and its neighbourhood not unwilling to discuss religious subjects, he took up his abode at Julfa, and gathered round him some few Moslems and a considerable number of Armenian Christians who were dissatisfied with their own corrupt form of worship. He also opened schools, etc. In 1875 the Society decided to carry on his work, and Persia became one of its Missions. A medical missionary was sent out in 1879, and women were added to the staff in 1891. Kerman was occupied in 1897; and Yezd in 1898.

Persia was under the episcopal jurisdiction of the Bishop of London (the late Bishop E. C. Stuart for several years taking confirmations in his behalf) until 1912, when a see was formed for the country, to which the Rev. C. H. Stileman, formerly a C.M.S. missionary in Persia, was consecrated. Bishop Stileman resigned in 1915, and the see is now vacant.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

The three present stations in the Mission (for Ispahan and Julfa, its suburb, may be regarded as one) are widely separated from each other, Kerman being about 420 miles south-east of Ispahan, with Yezd almost midway between them. The isolation of the stations is enhanced by travelling being both slow and dangerous, owing to the indifferent roads which are frequently infested with robbers.

Much of the work centres round the men's and women's hospitals at each station. There are schools for Persian boys at Ispahan (Stuart Memorial School), Kerman, and Yezd; for Persian girls at Ispahan (with a normal class); for Armenian boys and girls at Julfa; and for Parsi girls at Yezd. During the holidays a little evangelistic work is accomplished in the villages.

The staff of the Mission consists of 6 European clergymen, 7 laymen, 11 missionaries' wives, and 20 single women; 9 of the above are doctors and 6 are trained nurses. The native Christian lay agents number 44.

German influence in Persia

THE statement made in last year's Report[1] that the C.M.S. missionaries in Persia did not meet with any material hindrance because of hostilities unhappily cannot be repeated in a history of the Mission during the year 1915. In the spring it became evident at Ispahan that enemy influence was at work. The Germans began to trade upon the anti-Russian feeling which was marked in Northern and Central Persia, and won the sympathies of many by giving it out that all Germans were Moslems. In the summer the crisis became more acute. At Bushire, Ispahan, and Shiraz attacks were made on

British officials, and in September by orders of the consul the British community, including the missionaries, evacuated Ispahan. Most of the missionary party proceeded to Ahwaz, which is within the British sphere in the South-West of Persia, and thence to Bombay, but at the request of the Russian consulate Dr. Catherine M. Ironside and Miss A. P. S. Braine-Hartnell accompanied the Russian community to Teheran. Some of the workers afterwards came home; others took up work in India; others again engaged in war service. At length in May, 1916, the Russians having occupied Ispahan, and permission having been given by the British Consul-General, Dr. D. W. Carr, the acting secretary of the Mission, and four of his colleagues returned to the city.

Missionaries leave Ispahan

Events were slower in development at Yezd and Kerman than at Ispahan. At Yezd armed Germans appeared at the mission hospital in August and demanded a supply of drugs for their journey, saying they had been robbed by the Russians, but they stayed on in the town, and in December the missionaries had to leave for Teheran. There they remained, helping the American missionaries, until May, when the way was open for them to go back to their own station. The first German emissary appeared at Kerman in July, and was warmly greeted by the gendarmerie, with whom a small but energetic band of men, calling themselves democrats, allied themselves. Before long a British subject from India was shot at in the bazaar by a paid assassin in broad daylight, and the position became so threatening that the British and Russian communities left the town on December 17 for Bandar Abbas, the C.M.S. missionaries afterwards proceeding to Bombay.[1]

Work suspended at Yezd and Kerman

Before these troubles came to a head the Mission had sustained a great loss through Bishop Stileman's resignation, on account of ill-health, of his see and of his position as a C.M.S. missionary. After working from 1889 to 1906, first at Baghdad and then at Julfa, the Armenian suburb of Ispahan, he was detained at home for several years, during part of which time he filled a gap in the secretariat at the C.M. House; then he became C.M.S. organizing secretary in the dioceses of Exeter and Bath and Wells, and from 1908–12 he was secretary of the C.E.Z.M.S. In the latter year he was consecrated as Bishop of the Church of England in Persia. The Mission owes very much to his wise guidance.[2] The Committee have also accepted the resignation of Dr. Evelyn A. Constable.

Literary work

The Rev. W. A. Rice completed the translation into English of a Persian book called "Religious Tenets of the Shiahs," and began the preparation in Persian of a set of Scripture lessons.

Ispahan

Hospital

Until the end of the summer the number of patients at the Men's Hospital at Ispahan was well maintained, some of them making journeys of eight or ten days' duration in order to obtain treatment. Several mullahs were among the patients, and after visiting them the chief mullah one day addressed a crowded congregation in one of the mosques, and declared that the English had come to stay and ought not to be interfered with. Good work was done in the hospital by the native evangelist, who persevered in his efforts notwithstanding the threats of the mullahs to take his life; and others among the native workers were also helpful. Dr. Catherine Ironside mentions one young Persian nurse who said, "Perhaps God is letting the hospital be closed that we may have more time to pray. Sometimes at night I have been ashamed to look up into the face of the Lord Jesus because I have spoken so little to Him all day." In May two telegrams were received urging that a doctor be sent to Kashan, a town 110 miles to the north, to perform an operation. Efforts had been made to prevail on a Persian doctor to go from Teheran, but he refused unless a fee of £700 was paid in advance! Dr. C. M. Schaffter started the same evening and arrived at sunrise on the second day after, to find that the patient had died. In gratitude for his prompt response to the summons, an offer of a site for a mission hospital was made to him.[1] The Women's Hospital attracted a good number of patients, and the increased confidence of the Persian ladies in the doctors was noticeable. New buildings for the Stuart Memorial School were opened in April by G. Grahame, Esq., the British Consul-General, in the presence of the Deputy Governor of the city. This seemed to infuriate the mullahs, and they first held meetings and expressed their disapproval, then preached on the subject in the mosques, and finally issued a notice forbidding boys to attend the school, and threatening to beat and excommunicate all who should do so and parents who should send their sons. Their efforts were successful in reducing the number of pupils to between thirty and forty, but there was compensation in the loyalty of the staff. For example, one of the junior masters, a former pupil, though not a Christian in name and though prominently mentioned by the mullahs for punishment, never failed for more than one day to be at his post, not, as he said, because the salary was an inducement, but because he had learnt that he might help God and his country by teaching his younger fellow-countrymen. Unhappily the new buildings were ransacked when the Europeans had to leave, all doors and desks being carried off, and the schoolroom converted into a stable.[1] Strangely enough the Persian Girls' School remained unmolested while the Stuart School was receiving such undesirable attentions, and from eighty to ninety girls were usually in their places. Many of the teachers in the Armenian Girls' School at Julfa, a suburb of Ispahan, were very earnest in their work, and after the departure of the missionaries contrived to keep the school going for a time. The Sowers' Band among the girls raised £15 during the year, which was devoted to various religious and philanthropic objects. There was great encouragement in the villages round Ispahan, which were visited by the women missionaries.

Persian Girls' School

Julfa

The Hospital at Yezd had rather fewer in-patients than in 1914, but there was an average attendance of twenty at the weekly class for women. The Governor of the city was among the patients to whom Dr. H. White was called.[2] After the withdrawal of the missionaries the head-mistress in the Parsi Girls' School continued to teach about forty of the fifty-six girls, asking them to her own home.

Yezd

At Kerman, as at Yezd, there was a decrease in the number of patients at the Hospital, but some of them were anxious to take a gospel portion home with them when they left. They listened readily to Christian teaching, and assumed the attitude that the Lord Jesus is one of the greatest prophets, and that by His blessing they might hope to be cured. "At Homes" were held for Persian ladies, at which sometimes as many as forty were present. There is said to have been quite an opening among the Jews.

INDIA

The population of India in 1911 was 316,000,000. All but one million of these were under British rule or suzerainty, the remainder being in French and Portuguese settlements. In British India the Hindus numbered 217½ millions; Mohammedans, 66½ millions; Buddhists (almost entirely in Burma) and Animists about 10 millions each; and Christians, 3,876,000. During the decade 1901–11 the increase in the general population was 7·1 per cent; among Hindus it was less than 5 per cent; Mohammedans less than 7 per cent; Animists, 20 per cent; and Christians, 32·6 per cent.

Lutheran missionaries under the S.P.C.K. laboured in South India in the eighteenth century, and many thousands of converts were baptized; but their Missions, after the death of Schwartz and other leaders, languished, and at length only a few Christians remained. In 1793 William Carey, the famous Baptist missionary, went out to Bengal, but for some years prior to the renewal of the East India Company's charter in 1813 no missionaries were allowed to reside within the British dominions, and he and his companions had to take refuge in the Danish settlements. Henry Martyn, who landed at Calcutta in 1806, had been in communication with the C.M.S., but he went out eventually as a chaplain of the East India Company. He and other government chaplains, men like Brown, Buchanan, Corrie, and Thomason, did what they could to prepare the way for future workers. The C.M.S. had an important share in the establishment of the bishopric of Calcutta in 1814 by its publication of Claudius Buchanan's work on the subject. In the following year the first two clergymen of the Church of England who went to India as missionaries were sent to Madras by the C.M.S.

In 1912 Protestant missionary societies in India had a staff of 1443 ordained and 3758 (of whom 3124, including wives, were women) lay foreign missionaries; there were also 1665 ordained and 36,793 lay Indian workers. Indian communicants numbered 568,000, and the offerings of Indian Christians amounted to Rs 1,734,338.[1]

Loyalty of the peoples of India

DURING the year 1915 little if any diminution was seen in the magnificent display of loyalty on the part of the peoples of India towards the King Emperor which characterized the early days of the great war.[2] On August 4, the anniversary of the day on which war was declared, according to a message from Bombay to the "Times," "in church, mosque, and temple, all the communities of India assembled to pray for victory to the Allied arms, convinced that through victory alone can peace come in this righteous cause. Thousands of meetings throughout the land protested India's unswerving devotion to the Empire's service, and the offer of all our resources for the prosecution of the war." Valuable gifts for war purposes continued to be received from the ruling chiefs and noblemen of the land, including five lakhs of rupees (£33,333) for aeroplanes from the Gaekwar of Baroda, and railway workshops for making munitions from the Begum of Bhopal and the Maharajahs of Bikanir and Jodhpur,[1] while contributions to war relief funds were made by high and low throughout the land. The Christian community was not behind in gifts of money, and the way was opened during the year for them to render personal service more fully than before, not only by work in connexion with the Y.M.C.A., but also by joining the Army. Three double companies of Punjabi Christians were formed and attached to the Carnatic regiments—one, composed of Church of England Christians, to the 63rd Light Infantry, and the others, consisting of Presbyterian Christians, to the 83rd Light Infantry.[2] This loyalty among the educated classes is said to be due largely to the influence of Lord Hardinge, who has been succeeded as Viceroy by Lord Chelmsford, while the splendid example of disinterestedness and faithfulness shown by the great body of officials from England, coupled with the beneficent work of missionary educationists, evangelists, and doctors, has conduced to a similar spirit among the rank and file of the people.

Christian companies in the Indian army

When the war began the Government showed itself liberal and even generous towards the German missionaries in India, about 600 in number, offering advances in money to mitigate the discomfort arising from the interruption of communications with Germany; but the generosity was not always responded to, and it became necessary in some instances to increase the slight restraints which had been imposed. In April, 1915, only 115 of the enemy alien missionaries had been interned, and seventy were compulsorily residing in specified places, the remaining 442 being allowed to remain at their posts on parole on condition of good behaviour. In May, however, it was decided for political reasons and as a result of the gross violation on the part of Germany of the chivalrous usages of war, but not, as has sometimes been supposed, in consequence of treacherous conduct by the German missionaries, to remove all persons of alien nationality to concentration camps; and about the middle of August more severe steps were felt to be necessary, and the German missionaries who were interned, as well as those still at large, received notice that they would be repatriated to Germany, or, in the case of men under 48 years of age, sent as prisoners of war to Ahmednagar. The Bishop of Madras tried to get the order modified, and the German Missions Relief Committee, of which he is a member, sent a letter to each German missionary in which they expressed "distress at the manifestation of bitterness in the public press," stating that they had done their best "to prevent the passing of premature judgments on the political question, and still more to help our fellow missionaries to maintain an attitude of brotherliness towards you all personally," and begging them on their part "to refrain from criticism either of Government or of British missionaries." [1] The removal of the enemy alien missionaries to concentration camps brought about a serious situation in the diocese of Chota Nagpur, where in a region as big as England the extensive work of the Gossner Mission was suddenly bereft of its leaders. In the emergency the Government appealed to the Bishop of Chota Nagpur, making a special grant of Rs 3000 a month so that the schools might be carried on, and he, with the help of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel and of the C.M.S. who lent the services first of the Rev. W. V. K. Treanor, and afterwards of the Revs. E. Cannon and W. E. N. Munn, made arrangements for the supervision of the Indian pastors and agents engaged in the mission. It may be remarked parenthetically that the Bishop exonerates the Lutheran missionaries from the charge of using their position to promote German interests, and says that they taught the children in their schools the duty of obedience to the Government, and impressed it upon the congregations in their churches.[2]

Effect of the war on missionary work

The fact that but few references to the war appear in the annual letters of the C.M.S. missionaries, save in connexion with gifts to relief funds and the like, indicates that for some reason or another the waging of so sanguinary a conflict between professedly Christian nations has not aroused in the minds of the peoples of India any doubts as to the nature of Christianity which are not susceptible of easy removal. Only one or two speak of the war as proving a subject of reproach, and the Rev. N. H. Tubbs quotes the words of a boy in the hostel of St. John's School, Agra, who concisely summed up the situation by saying, "Germany is bullying Belgium, and of course England steps in to stop it." Some Indians, not quite satisfied perhaps with so simple an explanation, are yet coming to see that, as a Hindu religious student and celibate expressed it, "it is not Christianity or Christ that has failed, but Christian nations who have failed to follow Christ." [3] The war, of course, has had an adverse effect on mission work through the shortage of workers and scarcity of funds which it has induced, but there have been gains in other directions.

Territorial troops and foreign missioms

Many of the Territorial troops, who were sent to India to replace the regiments dispatched to the Front, have been led to revise their conceptions of mission effort, and, as concerns the peoples of India, the Bishop of Madras sees reason to anticipate an increase in the mutual confidence and trust between them and the people of Great Britain, a marked forward movement in social reform and social service, and a growing spirit of self-sacrifice for the public welfare.[1]

Education

Another outcome of the war, the Bishop of Madras hopes, will be an improvement in the system of education, adapting it to draw out the peculiar genius of Indians and enabling them to live their own life. There is much to be done in this respect, and also in the extension of education. According to the census of 1911 only five and a half per cent. of the Hindus are literate, that is can write a letter to a friend and read his reply. But marked advance has lately been made, as is shown by the returns for the years 1907–12, which reveal an increase of twenty-five per cent in the number of children in primary schools; while during the same period the number of pupils in secondary schools rose from 473,130 to 667,068. There are many proofs that the value of education is becoming realized in India. The Maharajah of Indore, following the examples of the Gaekwar of Baroda and the Maharajah of Mysore, has made elementary education compulsory throughout his State, and the Maharani of Baroda has given £10,000 for the permanent endowment of scholarships for deserving Hindu girls. In old days it was difficult to induce boys to attend schools; now the complaint is that it is not possible to provide adequate and efficient schools for the boys who desire education.[2] The Quinquennial Review of the Progress of Education in India, figures from which have just been quoted, contains the following testimony to the part taken by missionaries in Indian education:—

Testimony to missionary educationists

> The work of these bodies constitutes an element of strength in the educational system of the country. They furnish a body of men, well educated, imbued with fresh ideas from Europe or America, endowed with the missionary spirit, self-sacrificing, reliable. It would be difficult to imagine an agency more helpful to the Government, more trusted by the community, and more wholesome in its educational influence.

There are, however, fears in some quarters of the influence in behalf of Christianity which is exercised by mission schools. The question of a conscience clause is raised from time to time, and an important Hindu daily newspaper, lamenting the attendance of such large crowds at meetings addressed by Mr. G. Sherwood Eddy at Palamcotta,[3] traces it to the teaching in mission schools, and says:—

> Hindus are generally not inclined perhaps to mind the small hour spent every day in a serious and profound study of the Bible, a repository of so much good sense and good literature. But this teaching of the Bible is carried on in anything like an academic spirit only in few institutions. . . . It will be well if the Government will bestow some attention on the indiscreet and unfortunate religious controversies that are launched into habitually in the class room by the Bible teachers.

Mission schools are at once the consequence and one of the causes of the spread of Christianity, of which there are many indications apart from the evidence afforded by statistics. In December, 1915, two interesting gatherings were held at Allahabad, one a meeting of the All-India Council of the National Missionary Society of India, which was founded in 1905, and now has thirty agents, two of them honorary, working in five different language areas; and the other the second All-India Conference of Indian Christians, consisting of seventy-five Indian delegates, nearly all of them university men. Moreover there are results among those who have not yet openly embraced Christianity. The Rev. Dr. R. F. Horton speaking in London in May, 1915, said that when he was in India in 1913 he addressed a large meeting in Baroda at which the Gaekwar and his ministers and all the judges, lawyers, and gentry in the State were present. They listened most attentively, and the Gaekwar thanked him afterwards and told him that he agreed with nearly every word that had fallen from his lips. The Dewan, on seeing him off at the station, was most grateful to him for coming. The same Dewan had applied for a grant of Bibles for a class of men he teaches on Sundays. Yet he has not been baptized and is not included in statistics as a Christian. Again, there are many instances of Hindus and Buddhists assimilating their religious terminology to that of Christians,[1] while a revolt against caste is beginning, which may be attributed in part at least to the influence of Christian thought and example.[2]

National Missionary Society of India

Use of Christian terminology by non-Christians

But there remains much land to be possessed. The Christians are but a little body in comparison with the great masses of Hindus and Mohammedans; and Christianity has to battle against a powerful foe. It is hindered rather than aided by the reconstructions of Hinduism.[3] And in the life and death struggle against the religion of Jesus of Nazareth, the King not of the Jews only but of the World, there are arrayed what the late Rev. Canon Nihal Singh termed "seven evil spirits," namely so-called Christian Science, Unitarianism, Theosophy, Arya Samaj, Materialism, Agnosticism, and Spiritualism. How inexpressibly sad that so many of these should emanate from lands in which the rule of Christ is supposed to be established!

PUNJAB, NORTH-WEST FRONTIER, AND SINDH MISSION

PAST HISTORY

The Punjab Mission was begun in 1851, soon after the annexation of the province to British India. The first station occupied was Amritsar, the sacred city of the Sikhs; Peshawar was occupied in 1854; Multan, 1856; Narowal, 1859; Dera Ismail Khan, 1862; Srinagar, 1863; Bannu, 1865; Lahore, 1867; Clarkabad, 1873; Batala, 1878; Tarn Taran, 1885; Quetta, 1886; the Chenab Colony (formerly known as the Jhang Bar), 1899; Islamabad, 1902. Work was commenced at Kotgur in 1844 and Simla in 1845, prior to the annexation of the Punjab. At Lahore a divinity school was founded in 1870 by the Rev. (afterwards Bishop) T. V. French. The Rev. G. M. Gordon (who was killed at Kandahar, 16 August, 1880) established, mainly at his own expense, stations at Pind Dadan Khan and Dera Ghazi Khan, both near the frontier, the latter as a base for work among the Baluch tribes, but these have since been abandoned, because of the weakness of the mission staff in the one case, and the inroads of the Indus in the other. Several stations fringe the British frontier, the most important of which is Peshawar, where work among the Afghans was established in 1854 under the auspices of Sir Herbert Edwardes, then Commissioner of the Division. In the Valley of Kashmir a medical mission was started by Dr. Elmslie in 1865, which has been a great blessing to the people, especially at the time of the famine in 1880 and the earthquake in 1885. The work in the Punjab is deeply indebted to men like Lord Lawrence, Sir H. Edwardes, Sir R. Montgomery, Sir D. McLeod, Generals Lake, Taylor, and Maclagan, Colonel Martin, and others, who nobly exerted themselves to bring the Gospel to the people under their administration.

The Sindh Mission is slightly older in date, having been begun in 1850, but is far behind in progress, owing mainly to its having always been quite understaffed. Yet important fruit has been granted to the patient labours of the Rev. J. Sheldon and others at Karachi (occupied 1850), Haidarabad (1856), and Sukkur (1859) on the Indus.

The diocese of Lahore was founded in 1877. The Right Rev. H. B. Durrant, formerly a C.M.S. missionary, is the present bishop.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

There are five sections of the Mission: the Punjab, Kashmir, the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan, and Sindh.

I. Of the fifteen stations in the Punjab, thirteen are in the plains, namely, in the Lahore mission district, Lahore, Clarkabad, Multan, Batemanabad, Gojra, Montgomerywala, and Toba Tek Singh, the last four of these being in the Chenab Colony; and in the Amritsar mission district, Amritsar, Asrapur, Batala, Ajnala, Tarn Taran, and Narowal; while two, Simla and Kotgur, are in the Himalayas.

Educational work is carried on by means of a divinity school at Lahore; the Lefroy Training School for village workers at Clarkabad; boys' high schools at Amritsar, Batala (Baring School for Christians and A.L.O.E. School for non-Christians), and Multan; Anglo-vernacular middle schools for boys at Bahawalpur, Fathgarh, Majitha, and Narowal; and a vernacular middle boarding school, with training classes for primary school teachers, at Clarkabad. For girls there are the Alexandra High School and a middle-class boarding school (with a normal class) at Amritsar, and a large boarding school for village girls at Clarkabad; these are mainly for Christians. At Lahore there is a widows' home.

Medical work is represented by a hospital at Amritsar, with affiliated dispensaries at Narowal, Jandiala, etc.; a leper hospital at Tarn Taran, belonging to the Government, but superintended by C.M.S. missionaries; and a women's hospital at Multan. Some medical work is also carried on at Kotgur, and at Sakhi Sarwar in the Dera Ghazi Khan district.

Considerable bodies of Indian Christians are found in the neighbourhood of Amritsar, Narowal, Batala, Tarn Taran, and Clarkabad, and in the Chenab Colony, to whom either European or Indian clergymen minister.

II. The Society has two stations in Kashmir—Srinagar, the capital, and Islamabad, some thirty miles higher up the Jhelum River to the south-east.

At the former there are a high school for boys, with a branch school at Islamabad; a general hospital; and a leper asylum supported by the Kashmir Government, but managed by the Society's missionaries. There is also a women's hospital at Islamabad.

III. At each of the three strategic points occupied by the Society in the North-West Frontier Province, namely, Peshawar, Bannu, and Dera Ismail Khan, at the entrances to the several passes into Afghanistan, a hospital is maintained, by means of which many members of the wild frontier tribes are influenced. Branch hospitals and dispensaries are also carried on at outlying places.

There are the Edwardes College and High School at Peshawar, and high schools also at Bannu and Dera Ismail Khan.

IV. At Quetta, the Society's only station in Baluchistan, there is a hospital, with two branch dispensaries in Kalat State.

V. Karachi, Haidarabad, and Sukkur, three important centres, are the stations in Sindh. At the first named there is a high school and also a bookshop. A temporary hospital, chiefly for ophthalmic work, is open at Shikarpur for a few weeks during the winter months.

The C.E.Z.M.S. carries on women's work at Amritsar, Ajnala, Asrapur, Batala, Tarn Taran, Narowal, Srinagar, Peshawar, Dera Ismail Khan, Quetta, Karachi, Haidarabad, Sukkur, etc. It is responsible for hospitals at most of these stations, and educational work at many of them, notably Amritsar and Karachi.

The staff of the Mission consists of 32 European and 21 Indian clergymen, 15 European laymen, 38 wives of missionaries, and 30 other women missionaries; 11 of the above are doctors and 4 are trained nurses. In addition there are 152 Indian Christian lay agents on the staff of the Mission.

The following are the members of the Punjab Corresponding Committee for 1916: The Bishop of Lahore, Archdeacon Warlow, Mr. W. H. L. Church, Mr. W. S. Dorman, P.W.D., Colonel Hendley, I.M.S., Mr. E. Tydeman, the Revs. H. G. Crabtree, E. Guilford, P. Ireland Jones, J. A. Wood, and C. M. Gough (secretary). The corresponding committee, however, deals only with personal matters affecting the European missionaries. The local governing body of the Mission is the Executive Committee of the Central Mission Council, which consists of the members of the corresponding committee, together with eight European missionaries or Indian clergymen, elected from the district mission councils.

Deaths of Rev. R. Bateman,

THE Rev. R. Bateman, one of the best known of the Society's missionaries in the Punjab, died at Nunney Delamere, Frome, on 7 March, 1916. Educated at Brighton College, and Magdalen College, Oxford, he sailed for the Mission in 1868, and spent his first five years in the country at Dera Ismail Khan, Amritsar, and Lahore. In 1873 he began the village work at Narowal with which his name will ever be associated, and there for nearly twenty-five years he lived as an Indian among Indians. Returning to India in 1899 after furlough he was assigned to the Chenab Colony, where in spite of failing strength he itinerated under most trying conditions, without any fixed head-quarters, until in 1902 he was obliged to retire and take a living at home.[1]

On February 23, a few days before Mr. Bateman's home call in England, there occurred at Ajnala the death of the Rev. Mian Sadiq Masih, his former colleague. Mr. Sadiq Masih was a son of the first convert of the Narowal Mission, and a man of good social standing; he laboured in the Mission for something like half a century—more than forty years in orders. Full of homely humour on the one hand and of deepest humility on the other, he was as it were Mr. Bateman's counterpart among the Indian clergy, and it is particularly fitting that the two should have ended their long united labours at the same time, and entered into rest together.

Rev. Mian Sadiq Masih,

Dr. H. Martyn Clark, who died at Edinburgh on 10 April, 1916, was an Afghan by birth, but was adopted in infancy by the Rev. Robert Clark, the founder of the Mission, and educated in the British Isles. He sailed in 1882 to establish medical work at Amritsar, and continued in charge of it until his retirement in 1905.

Dr. H. Martyn Clark,

Three other former Punjab missionaries have passed away: on 2 November, 1915, Mr. W. Briggs, the father of Mrs. T. Bomford, who worked at Multan and other stations from 1873–1899; on November 27 the Rev. D. Brodie, who was at Dera Ismail Khan for eight years from 1866; and on 5 February, 1916, the Rev. J. L. Holbeck, who was a C.M.S. missionary in Sindh in 1862–3.

Mr. W. Briggs, Rev. D. Brodie, and Rev. J. L. Holbeck

The Mission has been deprived of the services of the Rev. Canon E. F. E. Wigram, who has been appointed to the secretariat at headquarters after twenty-three years in the Punjab. He has been succeeded as secretary by the Rev. C. M. Gough, and the Rev. E. Guilford has been appointed by the Bishop of Lahore to the canonry vacated by Mr. Wigram. The Committee have accepted the resignations of Dr. A. Jukes, after thirty-eight years' service; the Rev. A. E. Day, after thirty-one years' service; Dr. A. C. Lankester, on his appointment as Officer for Tuberculosis to the Government of India, after twenty-five years' service; the Rev. J. M. Paterson; Dr. H. E. Rawlence, Miss E. C. H. Cooke, and Miss M. T. Redman; and Miss O. F. Lacey has retired owing to ill-health. The Rev. Imam Shah has also retired after forty-three years' service as an ordained man.

The literary work in the Mission was as follows: the Rev. W. J. Abigail wrote in English a book entitled, "The First Twelve Steps," for the use of catechists and preachers; Dr. E. F. Neve revised the four Gospels in Kashmiri; the Rev. T. Mansukhani wrote in Sindhi, "The Story of St. Polycarp," and an account of some converts from Islam; and the Rev. D. S. Harper prepared a small book giving stories of heroism and humanity in the war and using them as Christian evidences.

Multan, a city with about 75,000 inhabitants, is one of the oldest C.M.S. stations in the diocese of Lahore. The High School has about 500 boys. Twenty of them sat for the matriculation examination, and about half the number succeeded in passing, one being placed in the first class. More than 1000 in-patients are received each year at the Women's Hospital, and 16,000 visits of out-patients are recorded. Some of the younger women seemed responsive to the gospel message and anxious to ask the nurses questions about the Saviour, but the older patients soon noticed anything of the sort and, as far as they could, put a stop to it. The training of nurses is a feature of the hospital work; it has been attended in the past with many disappointments, but four of the girls succeeded in passing their examination in October. Many of the 5th Devon Territorials, who were stationed at Multan, visited the hospital, and were enabled to understand something of the evils of the purdah system and the hardships of the lot of Mohammedan women. Between forty and fifty zenanas were visited regularly by the mission staff, some of the pupils in them showing much interest in the Gospel, and a couple of schools for Mohammedan girls were opened; among the children in these were two who were sent by their parents specially in order that they might learn to read the "Injil." There are only about fifty Christians in Multan itself, but others are found in the district, especially at Kacha Khuh, in the lower Bari Doab canal district, where new canals have lately been built and opened by the Government. Among the non-Christians a remarkable readiness to hear and inquire into Christianity was seen in the bazaars and villages, and a young Mohammedan of good zemindar family was baptized. At Sakhi Sarwar there is a branch dispensary of the Multan hospital, with an Indian, Dr. Khair-ud-din in charge. He pays occasional visits to Dera Ghazi Khan, a former C.M.S. station, abandoned because of the inroads of the Indus. A new city is being built, with many Hindu temples and Mohammedan mosques, but there is no English church for the Europeans or any mission hall.

Clarkabad

Bishop Lefroy Training School

Seven of the eight students at the Bishop Lefroy Training School at Clarkabad, a Christian settlement, returned at the end of the spring term to the stations whence they had been brought to be fitted more adequately for their duties. In the summer two village workers read in the school, and also five ex-normal vernacular students who entered for a three months' course of Bible training. Two fatal cases of plague occurred in the compound of the Vernacular Middle Boys' School. A patrol of the girl guides was formed with success at the girls' boarding school. In the district, which contains about 700 villages, with Christians or inquirers in 120 of them, 168 persons were baptized, and 506 were admitted to the catechumenate. These Christians are drawn in the main from the humbler classes, and live in surroundings by no means conducive to growth in spirituality. There is practically no privacy in their houses; their work is in many ways monotonous; the merciless heat of the summer tests the moral fibre of the strongest man; few of them can read; for those who can read there are comparatively few books available; and even those they can rarely afford to buy.

Five hundred new catechumens

In the C.M.S. portion of the Chenab Colony there are only two villages where land has been assigned to C.M.S. Christians, but many other converts have entered the colony to work under Hindu or Mohammedan landowners. These Christians are scattered about in different villages, and in all seven pastorates have been formed, but only four of them had an ordained man in charge in 1915, one of the four being a European. Many more Indian lay workers also are required if the converts are to be properly ministered to. To increase the efficiency of the workers classes are held for them at Gojra, the great grain emporium, where a hostel is maintained for Christians visiting the town on business. Fifty of the Gojra Christians as well as twenty-three from Batemanabad enlisted during the year. In consequence of an outbreak of plague the town for a time was deserted and work was at a standstill, but this afforded an extra opportunity for visiting the villages. Twelve miles west of Gojra lies Montgomerywala, one of the Christian villages. A couple of European women missionaries reside there and visit a score of villages in the district where Christians are found, hold classes for the catechists' wives, and carry on a dispensary, which in 1915 attracted a largely increased number of patients. Toba Tek Singh, where sixty-eight adults were baptized during the year, lies to the south-west of Gojra. The work in the district has been hampered by the interference of the Roman Catholics, and in all the villages but two the Christians were found to be ignorant, indifferent, and cold. In the two which were the exception to the rule, the women as well as the men took great interest in religious matters. Twenty miles east of Gojra there is a second Christian village, Batemanabad. Three new schools for the Christians were opened in that district, and gospels met with increased sales. The statistics show a large fall in the number of baptisms, but this is due in part to the fact that in the previous year many were presented for baptism who had been under instruction for a long time. In 1915, the expectation of a visit from the bishop led to concentration on the preparation of confirmation candidates rather than on evangelization.

Amritsar

A growth in grace is reported as having occurred among many of the Christians at Amritsar, but two sad cases of apostasy to Islam occurred. The Boys' High School earned in 1915 a larger government grant than ever before. A certain number of non-Christian girls are received at the Alexandra Girls' High School, and their presence is regarded as an advantage, not only because some of them while in the school learn to know Christ as well as to know about Him, but also because seeing them serves to impress upon the Christian pupils their responsibility to witness for the Saviour. The children as a whole are said to be greatly lacking in self-control and perseverance, and to have little corporate spirit, but the character of the elder girls manifestly developed, and former pupils, who had but lately left the school, were found to be working faithfully for God in their new surroundings. All the three girls who sat for the matriculation examination passed, and two of them won prizes in the senior Lake Memorial Scripture Prize examination. The Girls' Middle School likewise met with educational successes; five of the six children who went in for the middle examination passed, while three of the five normal students who sat for the teachers' senior vernacular examination were successful. The surgical work at the Hospital increased notably, among the patients being some Indian soldiers who had been wounded at the front. Dr. Hira Lall, the hospital assistant, and also the Indian house surgeon, and an evangelistic worker among the patients were removed by death during the year. Of Baba Ruh Singh, the last named, the Rev. Dr. G. Brocklesby Davis writes :—

An evangelist's story

He was brought to the feet of Christ by Dr. Martyn Clark after having been a Sikh sadhu, or holy man. His holiness was such that he had squatted on a dunghill for fifteen years and never during that time touched soap and water (the latter excepting of course for drinking). His name was changed at baptism from Rurh Singh (Dunghill Lion), a name suggesting his previous occupation, to Ruh Singh (Spirit Lion). One day at Narowal he came to me with a very happy face to tell me that his shoes had been stolen. He had attended the Communion Service and, like the rest of the congregation, had left his shoes outside, but when the service was over and his own private devotions which kept him in the building after the others had gone, and he came out he found his shoes were nowhere to be seen ! On inquiry as to the cause of his happy expression he told me that it was pleasure at the thought that he would have to walk ten miles to his home at Ram Das barefooted for Christ's sake. Since he became a Christian he said life had seemed to him too smooth and easy, and here at last was a chance to serve Christ in a way which altogether appealed to his ascetic spirit.

Efforts were made to interest the Territorials in missionary work, by inviting the men in batches of thirty to tea and badminton, and spiritual work also was carried on among them with happy results by the women missionaries both of the C.M.S. and the C.E.Z.M.S. Visits were paid to the cattle fairs held in the city, bazaar preaching was regularly maintained, and an extensive itineration in the Majitha, Kathu Nangal, and Jandiala districts was made, in the course of which every village was visited and scripture portions were sold freely. In the Ajnala district, where the late Rev. Mian Sadiq Masih was in charge, the Christians number 1400, and caste and custom are said to be losing their strength among the non-Christians. A large number of Mohammedans and low castes have been baptized in the Asrapur district since the station was occupied in 1888, but 1915 witnessed the baptism of the first Sikh boy to be admitted there into the visible Church. The Rev. Wadhawa Mull says that during the last few years the converts and inquirers who often used to ask for help have now learnt to give it instead.

The Baring High School at Batala was founded in 1878 for the benefit of the children of educated Christians in North India; the number of boys is comparatively small, but it increased in 1915 by twenty-eight per cent. and the fees realized more than in any previous year. During the last two winters the elder boys have of their own initiative visited villages in the neighbourhood on Sunday afternoons for the purpose of preaching the Gospel. Several old boys are now at the front in France and elsewhere, engaged in social service in connexion with the Y.M.C.A. The A.L.O.E. School is for non-Christians; the boys are good at games and also forward in social work, and during the year they sent two complete hospital units for the Red Cross Society. Work is carried on in the town among the sweeper women Christians and inquirers, who lead a life of hard and almost unremitting toil and are very ignorant, while the Sikh and Mohammedan women are visited as there is opportunity. In the surrounding villages mass movement activities are in regular operation, but the number of baptisms was much smaller than in 1914 owing to the fact that no large body of catechumens happened to complete their training during the year under review.

Some of the Christians at Tarn Taran were greatly helped by meetings at which the story of the passion, death, resurrection, and ascension of the Lord Jesus was illustrated by lantern slides; but unhappily six converts had to be excommunicated for practising heathen customs. In the villages there was greater readiness to listen than ever before, and the sales of gospels were good, at least 150 portions being bought in one village alone.

The buildings of the Anglo-Vernacular Middle School at Narowal were enlarged in 1915; keen interest was taken by the boys in the scripture lessons. The village schools, of which there are twenty-one, with an aggregate attendance of more than 700 boys, are conspicuous in the district; but their usefulness as evangelistic agencies is diminished by the facts that nearly all the teachers are non-Christians, and that the village readers, in whose hands the Bible teaching is left, have not been trained for educational work. Still the schools cost the Society little or nothing, and the truth is in some degree diffused by their means. The last decade has seen a great increase in the Church in the Narowal district, for whereas at the end of 1905 the baptized Christians numbered 1057 and the catechumens 451, at the close of 1915 there were about 6000 adherents in the 250 villages in which the Society works, of whom 4850 had been baptized. These form 168 different congregations, and the area covered has now for the purposes of organization been divided up into twelve small districts, each of which has its local committee of duly elected members. Some of the Christians caused disappointment, but on this point the words of the Rev. W. P. Hares, who superintends the work, are worthy of note. He writes :—

Adherents quadruple in ten years

The antecedents of the converts

> When we find Christians acting contrary to their profession and vows, we must remember what they have sprung from, that they are brands snatched from the burning, that they are a terribly small minority, and live among Mohammedans and Hindus who do not think that lying and filthy talking, stealing and thieving, false swearing, deceiving, and evil living are things to be ashamed of, unless one happens to be so unfortunate as to be caught in the act. There is no public opinion to stiffen the backs of our Indian brethren, and it takes a long time to create a public opinion even among the Christians. But we are hopeful, and keep pegging away. This year we have been doing our best to create a public opinion against the pernicious custom of selling girls to the highest bidder in the matrimonial market. This is one of the greatest evils we have to contend against, and the custom is growing in spite of some very plain speaking and preaching on the subject, and is causing me personally much anxiety. One Indian brother tried to comfort me by saying that there was some good in the custom, since formerly girls and wives were held of no account, but now that men had to pay Rs 400 for a bride they valued them more, and took better care of them ! When discouraged at the low level of spiritual life in our congregations it is good to remember that we are only beginning our work among them, and that, in spite of all the distressing things we are continually coming up against, there is undoubtedly a distinct advance in morals and general conduct.

Excepting during the three months, January to March, when the English services are discontinued, the work in the C.M.S. church at Simla is carried on in two languages, Urdu and English. The Viceroy was present at the anniversary service, when the sermon was preached by the Metropolitan of India. A couple of lectures to non-Christians were delivered during the season, and the baptism of one adult is reported.

A great deal of the time of the Rev. W. J. Abigail was taken up at Kotgur with the management of large orchards belonging to the Society, from which it was hoped some years ago that a considerable income would accrue. Mr. Abigail also superintended the ordinary work at the station and itinerated as he had opportunity.

II. KASHMIR

THE medical and surgical work at the Hospital at Srinagar is on a large scale, and it is estimated that the patients number about one-eighth of those at the biggest hospital in London. The institution received in 1915 an unasked-for grant from the Kashmir State, and both the Maharajah and the Heir Apparent contributed liberally to its funds; while the large attendances, the demand for gospels among the patients,[1] and the invitations which Drs. A. and E. F. Neve received to Mohammedan gatherings, showed that they had succeeded in winning the confidence of the Moslem community. A high-caste Hindu, a former hospital assistant, was baptized at Lahore during the year. The new convert, part of whose story was printed in the "Church Missionary Review,"[2] was brought to the knowledge of Christ at the High School, which, with its branch schools, has in all about 1250 boys. They listen willingly and with reverence to the Bible teaching, and some of them seemed to be genuine inquirers. But the difficulty of forming a judgment concerning their motives was enhanced by the fact that Samuel Baqqal, the convert won in the school some eight years ago,[3] was sent into British India after his conversion and afterwards became a graduate and a master in the school, thus gaining a good position; and concerning whose work among the Indian troops at the front in 1915 the Y.M.C.A. authorities speak in high terms. Social work was continued among the boys on the lines which have become familiar,[4] and which are even being imitated in at least one Indian school, officered by non-Christians.[5] There is a mission girls' school in the city, managed by Miss V. Fitze, who works in an honorary capacity in close co-operation with the C.M.S. missionaries.[6] The little congregation of some fifty Indian Christians has had one or two sad losses of late years, through drink and drugs, and in one instance through cupidity.

Dr. Minnie Gomery of Islamabad speaks of 1915 as having been an exceptionally hard year in both spiritual and medical work. The winter was long and severe, keeping many away from the hospital; when cholera broke out the missionaries were unable to save as large a proportion of the cases brought to them as in 1914; and most of the people with whom they came into contact showed complete indifference to the Gospel. Only one or two of the patients evinced any gratitude.[7]

forty-four to sixty-four, all of whom were non-Christians. A Christian was added to the staff in the person of Sheikh Barakat Ullah, M.A., a nephew of Archdeacon Ihsan Ullah. The Christian staff at the Edwardes School was likewise strengthened, and it now consists of nine masters besides the European principal. There was some dissension among them in the early part of the year 1915, and the trouble was accentuated by a strike among the boys arising out of a Scripture lesson, which reduced the number of pupils for a time from 700 to 600; but after a while peace was restored and the classes began to fill up again. One of the lads, a Mohammedan, expressed his faith in Christ and was immediately removed by his father from the school, and kept a close prisoner in his own home. The unsettled state of the frontier led the patients at the Hospital to be fewer in number than in 1914. The war caused a certain limitation in the freedom with which the Gospel could be presented, but several of the patients bought scripture portions, and a young Pathan who three years before had accompanied his father when he sought treatment, and then bought a gospel, returned, having had no teaching save what he derived from the book, and said that he wished to become a Christian.[1] Eight persons were baptized at Jamrud, nine miles from Peshawar, and fifteen at the cantonment at Nowshera, where an out-station was opened during the year.

Bannu

The completion of a new out-patient block at Bannu as part of a memorial to the late Dr. Pennell, which was recorded in last year's Report,[2] was followed by a great increase in the number of women and child patients. The efficiency of the Hospital was further increased by a new zenana block which was opened in June, 1915. The high school, which is to be known in future as the Pennell High School, in recognition of the deep interest which Dr. Pennell took in it, had two Christians, qualified teachers, added to its staff, and a third is expected in 1916. Some commercial classes were opened, and the school did well at the provincial athletic tournament. The work at Thal, where there is a branch hospital, suffered for a time through the murder of Mihr Khan, the Christian Pathan doctor in charge. He heard a noise in the night of 12 March, 1915, and going to ascertain the cause was at once set upon by robbers and stabbed to death. His little son, Joel, 6 years old, was carried across the frontier and held to ransom, but after six months was restored through the intervention of the authorities.[3] There were other troubles at Thal through the reversion to Islam of the dresser and three other lads. An inquirer at Karak, where there is another branch hospital, also relapsed.

IV. BALUCHISTAN

THE missionaries at Quetta are happy in the support given to them by the European community. Every year a sale is held at the station in behalf of the Society, and in 1915, by the permission of Sir John and Lady Ramsay, it took place in the Presidency grounds, realizing a larger sum than ever before. The local clergymen and the military and other officers also help by delivering lectures to educated Indians under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A., while a leading Indian in the congregation, a teacher of languages, devotes one hour a day to teaching the missionaries free of charge. Lantern services were held in the wards of the Hospital every fortnight, and many of the women patients seemed to be convinced of the truth of Christianity, but did not dare to say so. A young Mohammedan, a clerk in government service educated at a mission school in the Punjab, was baptized, and a few low-caste families were almost ready for baptism to be administered to them. The work at Chaman, on the Afghan frontier, which was begun by the late Colonel Southey in 1900, has been handed over to the American Methodist Episcopal Mission. Medical itinerations were made by Dr. H. T. Holland among the Mani and Damki Baluchis in the Sibi district,[1] and at the beginning of 1915 he, together with Drs. C. Somerton Clark, V. H. Starr, and R. J. H. Cox, and Major Anderson, I.M.S., spent seven weeks at Shikarpur in Sindh, seeing more than 5000 new cases, and performing upwards of 2000 operations, about half being for cataract. A month or so later a new agreement was signed by which the family and heirs of the late Seth Hiranand made themselves responsible for a period of ten years for feeding and boarding all the in-patients besides paying Rs 500 a year towards the cost of drugs and dressings.[2]

THE Rev. T. Mansukhani was aided in the bazaar preaching at Sukkur by the chaplain, the Rev. G. J. S. Sherrell, and also by a couple of Indians whom he was training as village readers. As Mohammedans are in a great majority in Sindh there was some doubt after the intervention of Turkey in the war as to whether it would be wise to itinerate, but the experiment was made and no difficulty was experienced.

Haidarabad

Haidarabad, a town of 80,000 inhabitants and the former capital of Sindh, was occupied by the Rev. D. S. Harper on his return from furlough in January, 1915. The C.M.S. has an Anglo-Vernacular School in the town, which during the absence of a missionary of the Society was kept going by the C.E.Z.M.S. workers, and bazaar preaching is regularly maintained during the hot weather. The district contains more than 1,500,000 people, among whom the only Christian workers are Mr. and Mrs. Harper, two C.E.Z.M.S. missionaries and their Indian helpers, and two junior Indian "readers." While on tour Mr. Harper found in several places signs of the beginning or possibility of minor mass movements. Four adults were baptized during the year.

Karachi

Karachi was in its usual undermanned condition. The ill-health of Mrs. A. E. Day necessitated her husband's return to England with her in April, 1915, and the Rev. J. M. Paterson, who had been helping the Rev. P. Ireland Jones in the school work, and who has since accepted the chaplaincy at Srinagar, had to assume the general superintendence of the station. The only other C.M.S. man at the station was the Rev. Fazl-ud-din, who found the climate very trying. For the greater part of the year, therefore, Mr. Ireland Jones had no European colleague at a high school of 430 boys, and two branch schools, Gujerati and Sindhi, with 320 boys. All but two of the candidates from the High School who sat for the matriculation and school final examinations passed, and both the failures were due to ill-health. Some of the boys who had not been inoculated died of plague. In such time as he could spare from his school work Mr. Ireland Jones assisted in the Y.M.C.A. efforts in the city, and in other ways. Bazaar preaching was carried on amid some opposition from certain English-speaking Mohammedans and members of the Arya Samaj; a little work was also done among the Sweepers, and a family of them received baptism. Mr. Ireland Jones pleads earnestly for reinforcements to the mission staff, saying that the city grows by leaps and bounds, and that the development of Persia and Mesopotamia, which is likely to follow the war, will enhance the importance of Karachi as a missionary centre.

WESTERN INDIA MISSION

PAST HISTORY

For fifty years after Bombay became a British possession the English had neither church nor chaplain in the city, and it was not till a century later still that any effort was made for the evangelization of its inhabitants. The first Protestant missionaries, agents of the American Board of Foreign Missions, arrived in 1813. It was in 1820 that the C.M.S. work was inaugurated in Bombay by the Rev. Richard Kenney. The operations of the Society there have been very limited, but in 1832 the work was extended to Nasik; Junnar was occupied in 1843; Malegam, 1848; Aurangabad, 1860; Poona, 1882; and Manmad, 1901. For work among the Bhīls, an aboriginal tribe, Kherwara was occupied in 1880, and Biladia and Lusadia in 1901.

The diocese of Bombay was formed in 1835. The present bishop is Dr. Palmer, who was consecrated in 1908.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

Eleven stations are occupied in the Western India Mission by European missionaries, of whom there are 17 clergymen, 14 wives (one of them a doctor), and 9 single women on the list.

I. In connexion with work among Hindus and Mohammedans the institutions consist of the Robert Money School for boys and Emmanuel School, a high school for Christian girls, in Bombay; at Poona, to the south-east, a divinity school, a union high school in which the C.M.S. combines with other societies, and St. Helena's School, a high school for Parsi girls; at Nasik, which lies to the north-east of Bombay, St. George's School, an Anglo-vernacular school for boys; and at Sinnar, south-east of Nasik, and at Manmad and Malegam to the north-east, middle schools for boys. At Sharanpur, a Christian village outside Nasik, there are orphanages and a middle school, as also at Aurangabad, about one hundred miles east of Nasik. There are hostels in Bombay, Poona, and Aurangabad. Special efforts are made to reach the Mohammedans in Aurangabad; and itinerating work is carried on from Manmad, rather to the north-west, and also from some of the other stations. Decided movements towards Christianity are in progress in some parts of the Mission. The Z.B.M.M., which has stations at Bombay, Manmad, Nasik, and Panchgani, does most of the work among the women, but the C.M.S. has some zenana work at Aurangabad. The Indian clergymen, 11 in number, are responsible for the oversight of most of the 5600 Indian Christians. There are also 201 Indian Christian lay agents.

II. Efforts to reach the Bhīls are still on a comparatively small scale. There are the Thompson Memorial School and an orphanage for boys at Kherwara, and an orphanage for girls at Lusadia, where also catechists are trained, and medical work is carried on. There are no Indian ordained pastors in this section of the Mission, but Indian Christian lay agents are employed.

The following are the members of the Bombay Corresponding Committee for 1916: the Bishop of Bombay, Mr. F. J. Clark, Major L. T. R. Hutchinson, M.D., Sir H. E. E. Procter, Mr. W. L. Weldon, and the Revs. Canon D. L. Joshi, C. W. Thorne, and Canon R. S. Heywood (secretary).

The Bhīl Mission transferred

In April, 1915, the Society's work at Kherwara, Biladia, and Lusadia was attached to the Western India Mission instead of the Central Provinces and Rajputana Mission. The Bishop of Bombay has resumed the episcopal supervision of Lusadia and Biladia, which he had entrusted to the Bishop of Nagpur, and by arrangement has also taken over that of Kherwara, the third station in the Bhīl Mission, which is in the Nagpur diocese.

Another matter closely affecting the Society has been the formation of a diocesan council, as foreshadowed in last year's report.[1] The original intention was to form a synod, but there were legal difficulties in the way, and eventually it was determined to be content with a council, which is consultative and advisory rather than mandatory.[2]

Death of Miss A. H. R. Bull

The Bhīl Mission has sustained a great loss through the death of Miss A. H. R. Bull. She sank, together with 334 of the 501 souls on board, with the P. and O. steamship the "Persia" when it was torpedoed in the Mediterranean on December 30. Miss A. J. Lees, a recruit for the Mission who also was on the "Persia," was among the saved. Miss Bull was taken into local connexion in the United Provinces Mission in 1892 for work at the Benares Orphanage, and in 1894 was received into home connexion. In 1900 she was transferred to the Central Provinces Mission, of which the Bhīl Mission was then a part, and began her devoted labours among the Bhīls.[3]

The Committee have accepted the resignation of the Rev. T. J. Ison, who has become one of the Society's organizing secretaries at home.

Literary work

The literary work in the Western India Mission as at present constituted was as follows: In Marathi the Rev. Canon D. L. Joshi revised the books of Job, Ecclesiastes, Canticles, Ezekiel, and Daniel, and also the commentary for Indian readers on the Acts of the Apostles by the late Rev. T. Walker, and, in conjunction with the Rev. D. A. Yardi, edited a monthly English and Marathi magazine, entitled "Dharmadipika"; while the Rev. D. P. K. Shindé translated the commentary on St. John's Epistles by the Bishop of Assam. In Gujerati the Revs. A. I. Birkett and L. Hari completed the revision of the Prayer Book, and Mr. Hari revised a hymn book.

I. BOMBAY, ETC.

Bombay

THERE are three congregations connected with the C.M.S. in Bombay, one English, another Marathi, and the third Gujerati. Emmanuel Church, Girgaum, of which a C.M.S. European missionary is in charge, is the only distinctly evangelical church in Bombay, and is attended by some of the leading European residents, who give much help to the Society both financially and by their services on the Corresponding Committee. In 1915 several men of a Territorial battalion of the Devon regiment, which was stationed in the city, visited the mission house from time to time and were shown something of the Society's work, Indian pastors and sometimes an Indian Christian layman being invited to meet them. The pastoral work, save that at Emmanuel Church, is under the District Church Council. Some of the members of the Christian community occupy prominent positions; one of them has been appointed acting fourth presidency magistrate, while another is municipal analyst. With a view to drawing the converts and inquirers together, monthly social gatherings have been instituted, to which Europeans from time to time are invited. Fifty adults were baptized in 1915 in connexion with the Marathi work and sixteen with the Gujerati. Many of the converts were the fruit of the Converts' Home, opened at the end of 1913, in which men of all sorts and conditions are received.[1] A class was held twice a week for a group of them who hope in course of time to be trained in the divinity school at Poona for work among their fellow-countrymen. The Society is responsible for two schools, the Robert Money School, where the number of pupils increased in 1915 and would have been still larger but for the fear of Bible teaching entertained by many of the parents; and Emmanuel School, a high school for Christian girls, with about 230 pupils, of whom thirty are boarders, and in which there was no distribution of prizes in 1915, as those to whom they would have been given preferred that the money should be handed over to some war fund. During the year the council opened work in a hitherto unevangelized district, lying some miles to the east of Bulsar. The families of many of the servants employed in Bombay reside in this district, and converts won in the city have in the past been lost to Christian influence when they returned to their homes. The new effort speedily bore fruit, for twenty-three persons belonging to the district were baptized in 1915, some in Bombay, others in Poona, and fourteen at Khergaum in the heart of the Bulsar district.

In the early part of 1915 Nasik and the surrounding villages suffered from a visitation of the plague; one of the district catechists died in the mission compound; the schools had to be closed; the whole work was paralysed. The outlook was by no means promising, especially for St. George's School, an Anglo-vernacular institution, which depends very largely for its maintenance upon fees; but when it was re-opened the situation was saved by a great increase in the number of pupils which exceeded by fifty per cent that in 1914. Besides St. George's there are two other middle schools connected with the Orphanages at Nasik, or rather at the Christian village of Sharanpur, a mile from the city. Arrangements have been made to close the mission printing press and aerated water factory at Sharanpur and to concentrate effort on carpentry under an expert English instructor. The Christians connected with the District Church Council, of which for the first time an Indian, the Rev. D. P. K. Shindé, has been appointed chairman, are scattered in many different villages and it used to take him a whole month to visit all of them, but the situation has been eased by handing over some of the more distant portions to the S.P.G. at Ahmednagar, of which district they practically form part. The large ingatherings of 1913 and 1914 [1] were not repeated in 1915, which was a year of consolidation rather than of extension of the work. A new out-station was opened at Vavi, an important market village beyond Sinnar. At first there was much difficulty in finding a house in the village for the catechist, and when at length an old Mohammedan widow was persuaded to let part of her house for occupation by the Christian agent she was persecuted in various ways. Another out-station, Pathardi, which was closed a few years ago because the people seemed Gospel hardened, was re-opened in 1915 at the request of the villagers who undertook to repair the school house and pay a great portion of the schoolmaster's salary. In the past the work in the villages has been chiefly confined to Mahars, but the Mangs in several places are petitioning for teachers. At Deolali, where there is a small congregation, the Territorials in the cantonment showed much interest in missionary work.[2]

Poona

Union High School

The Divinity School at Poona had more students than in 1914, and St. Matthew's Hostel, most of the inmates of which are boys attending the Union High School, was filled to overflowing. The baptism of one adult is reported from the station; others of the thirty catechumens would probably have been baptized, but most of them were domestic servants of officers and had accompanied their masters to the war. There are two pastorates under the District Church Council. Under its auspices social gatherings for the Christians are held from time to time. A number of Territorials were present at one of these, while their band took part in the harvest thanksgiving service at Poona. The council made itself responsible for an increased proportion of its expenses, while the Marathi congregation also took over a school at Hadapsar, a village a few miles from Poona. At a meeting of the inhabitants of the village, at which they were asked to contribute at least Rs 120 per annum towards the cost of the school, the Hindus in response at once promised more than the amount asked for, and their action so much impressed a young Territorial officer, who had accompanied the Rev. W. C. Whiteside to the meeting, that he asked to be allowed to contribute Rs 10 to the project annually. The Junnar district, which has been a C.M.S. sphere since 1843 and at one time had two resident European missionaries, was without any worker in 1915, but it is hoped that one may soon be supplied. There were good openings in the Khed district, but, as the Rev. B. L. Salve who was there for a few months remarks, "it is of no use the field being good unless there are labourers to work it."

The opportunities in the Manmad district are said to multiply on every hand and in no wise to have been diminished by the war. But nevertheless fewer baptisms were recorded in 1914 than in the previous year, in consequence of five of the evangelistic agents being in training at the divinity school. An evangelist was placed at Yeolo, a large bazaar town fifteen miles south of Manmad, in the course of the year, but it was impossible to supply workers to the many villages which asked for them. The greater part of the work is among the Mahars, and their entrance into the Christian Church undoubtedly for a time causes the caste people to turn a deaf ear to the Gospel; also Marathi inquirers meet with persecution, but the opposition shows signs of decreasing. Malegam was once a European station, but it is some years since any missionary resided there, and it was a forward move when in April, 1915, the Rev. D. M. Dhivar, an Indian clergyman, was assigned to the town. He had the privilege before the close of the year of baptizing five persons. The Malegam District Church Council, on which the Manmad congregation is represented, has taken a village near Chandwad as the sphere of its missionary work, instead of Vizapur which is in the Nizam's dominions, and presents peculiar difficulties.

Besides the two middle schools at Aurangabad, connected with the Orphanages for boys and girls respectively, both of which won commendation from government officials, there are a number of elementary schools, among them one for caste (Marathi) girls, which was opened early in 1915. It is attended, among others, by the two daughters of a Brahman barrister, and his wife and her mother are present regularly at the daily Bible lesson which is given, sitting on the ground and repeating with the girls verses from the Bible. Another institution in the city which calls for mention is the Home for Christian Women, some of whom attend at the girls' orphanage to learn weaving. The Congregation in the city defrays its own expenses. The women are urged to put on one side each day a handful of grain; these gifts are collected every Saturday evening, and presented at the Holy Table along with the ordinary offertory on the Sunday. The Indian pastor reports the baptism of thirty-one adults, one of them a Mohammedan woman. Other Moslems were inquirers, but the Mohammedan work was largely in suspense owing to the absence of the Rev. H. J. Smith on furlough. The district worked from Aurangabad is about a hundred miles long by sixty wide. Most of the Christians in this area are Mangs, and their poverty is notorious. Their old means of livelihood—thieving—has of course been abandoned; village service has in most cases come to an end; and only agriculture remains to them. But they are sadly hampered by lack of capital wherewithal to buy seed and farm implements, and the experiment of co-operative banks is being tried to meet the need. The poverty of the Christians has its effect upon the schools. Parents are unwilling to take their children from the fields so that they may attend a vernacular school, and the Christians are unable themselves to support the schools, while the Society can do but little; thus it comes to pass that many children who have been baptized are growing up unable to read the Bible for themselves. Many of the new converts show by their lives that a great change has been wrought in them,[1] and they are said to take a pride in winning their relatives for Christ. The result is that, in one part at least of the district, near the River Godavery, community after community is ready to put itself under instruction and, to use the Rev. J. P. Butlin's words, "a mass movement could be begun any day." Of the new converts thirty persons were baptized at Kadethan, where a new congregation was established, while at Dorkingaon nineteen persons were baptized and forty-five others were under instruction. The lack of workers prevented full advantage being taken of the many openings which presented themselves, but a new out-station was opened at Bhokardan, and a town, where work had been begun some years before, but had languished, was reoccupied.[2]

II. BHĪL MISSION

Answered prayer for rain

OWING to the failure of the monsoon in August, 1915, the territory which is the sphere of the Bhīl Mission was threatened with famine. In the emergency the non-Christians were most active in offering sacrifices to their gods so as to induce them to send rain, but they proved unavailing. At length, the Christians appointed October 3 as a day of prayer. On September 30 the Bombay correspondent of the "Pioneer" wrote, "Nothing much short of a miracle will save Gujerat and Kathiawar from famine." On October 7, after some inches of rain had fallen, the editor of that paper wrote: "The storm . . . is unique in its character, for no such cyclonic depression has ever been known to appear so late in the season."[3]

Kherwara

Five of the boys belonging to the Thompson Memorial School at Kherwara sat for the Gujerati school final examination, and two of them passed. The Bhīls in days gone by have shown very little desire for education, and consequently have not been willing to contribute to the upkeep of schools, but their attitude has lately changed; many requests for teachers were received in 1915, and two new schools were opened, buildings for which were lent by the people.

Biladia

Biladia was left in 1915 without any European clergyman, but two women missionaries were at the station. A summer school for Christian women was held at the end of April, 1915,[1] and one for catechists and schoolmasters in October. The dispensary work at Biladia has been placed under the charge of a Bengali hospital assistant. Miss R. Carter and Miss R. R. Watts spent several months in the district, visiting for the most part villages well off the beaten track and difficult of access. In nearly every case the Gospel was listened to with eager attention, and it was repeatedly acknowledged: "We are in error, but we do not know how to get right. We worship stones because we know of no other way of worshipping God; you have knowledge; stay and teach us, and we will reform." Several inquirers afterwards came forward, and two were admitted to the catechumenate.

"We do not know how to get right"

The Medical Work at Lusadia made steady advance, thanks in part to the popularity of the Indian doctor who assists Mrs. A. I. Birkett, M.D., and though neither catechumens nor baptisms are to be recorded there were many interested hearers and readers among the patients. One woman, who is a great help in teaching the other patients, suffered much from her relatives because of her leaning to Christianity. There is special need for medical work among the Bhīls because of their great superstition, which at times threatens to overwhelm the little Church. On one occasion a Christian's daughter having died through tetanus, he called in a witch doctor, and then incited his young brother, a catechumen, to murder the supposed witch. A summer school for Christian women was held in the spring of 1915, and Bible classes were conducted regularly for their benefit. In the cold weather of 1914–15 the Rev. and Mrs. A. I. Birkett made an extended tour in the Idar and Dungarpur States. The people in the Dungarpur State, the most western of the southern Rajputana States, appeared to be even more superstitious than the Bhīls around Lusadia, but they flocked in large numbers to Mrs. Birkett for treatment, and begged her soon to pay them another visit.[2]

UNITED PROVINCES MISSION

PAST HISTORY

The Society's first agent in India was stationed in the United Provinces. He was an Indian, Abdul Masih, Henry Martyn's solitary convert from Mohammedanism, and he was placed at Agra, under Corrie's auspices, in 1813. Abdul Masih was ordained in 1826 by Bishop Heber, and was the first Indian clergyman of the Church of England. Meerut was occupied in 1815; Benares, 1817; Gorakhpur, 1823; Lucknow, 1858; Allahabad and Annfield, 1859; Faizabad, 1862; Aligarh, 1863; Muttra, 1878; and Hathras, 1915. A remarkable work was done by W. Smith and C. B. Leupolt at Benares, which began in 1832. In 1853, St. John's College at Agra was opened as a high school by T. V. French (subsequently Bishop of Lahore) and E. C. Stuart (subsequently Bishop of Waiapu, and afterwards in Persia). The Sepoy Mutiny of 1857 destroyed much of the Society's property, but the deep interest aroused caused a great extension of the work. Lucknow was occupied immediately on its reconquest, on the invitation of the Chief Commissioner, Sir R. Montgomery. Allahabad was also occupied, and Christian villages were established there and at Gorakhpur. In 1892 a new diocese (Lucknow) was formed for Oudh and the Jhansi Division of the United Provinces, the Bishop (Dr. A. Clifford, previously a C.M.S. missionary at Calcutta) having also, by consensual jurisdiction, episcopal supervision over the remainder of the United Provinces. Dr. Clifford retired in 1909, and was succeeded by Canon G. H. Westcott. In 1903 another new diocese (Nagpur), with Dr. Eyre Chatterton as bishop, was formed, including the Central Provinces and Rajputana, and certain "assigned districts" of Haidarabad.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

I. The C.M.S. has ten chief stations in the province of Agra. They may be regarded as forming three groups, namely, Allahabad, Benares, and Gorakhpur, in the south-east of the province; Agra, Muttra, Aligarh, Bulandshahr, and Meerut, in the west; and Mussourie and Annfield, in the hills to the north-west.

The educational institutions include a divinity school and the Oxford and Cambridge Hostel for students at Allahabad; St. John's College and Collegiate School, with a number of hostels, at Agra; St. Andrew's College and High School at Gorakhpur; high schools for boys at Benares (Jay Narayan's School), Jaunpur, and Meerut; a girls' normal school at Benares; the Queen Victoria High School for Christian girls and St. John's Girls' School at Agra; and industrial schools at Benares and Sikandra; besides the King Edward Memorial School at Lakhauti, and a number of middle and elementary schools.

Itinerating is carried on among the numerous villages, notably those in the plains around Allahabad, Agra, Aligarh, Bulandshahr, and Meerut.

II. In the province of Oudh there are two stations, viz., Lucknow and Faizabad (which is under the Indian Church Council). A boys' high school is carried on at Lucknow, and also a school for purdah girls. Special attention is given to evangelistic work among Mohammedans in Lucknow, and tours are made in the villages of that and of the Faizabad and Sultanpur districts.

Medical work in the Mission is almost entirely in the hands of the Z.B.M.M., which has hospitals at Benares, Jaunpur, Lucknow, and Patna, and also engages in women's work at Bulandshahr, Gorakhpur, etc., in close co-operation with the C.M.S. The latter society has women missionaries working in the zenanas at many of the stations.

The staff of the Mission consists of 28 European and 11 Indian clergymen, 7 laymen, 18 wives of missionaries, 31 single women, and 306 Indian Christian lay agents.

The following are the members of the Allahabad Corresponding Committee for 1916: The Bishop of Lucknow, Archdeacon P. H. Chapman, Hon. Justice Sir G. E. Knox, Hon. Mr. Justice Piggott, Mr. E. G. Hill, Mr. C. Sands, and the Revs. A. W. Davies, F. W. Hinton, W. L. W. Kitching, T. Law, J. F. Pemberton, and A. J. Harvey (secretary).

THE United Provinces Mission has been deprived of a valuable worker by the death at Delhi on 19 August, 1915, of Miss Agnes M. Cox. She sailed for India in 1899, and for eleven years worked at Agra. Then she was transferred to Meerut, and latterly she resided at Ghaziabad, engaging in evangelistic work in the district.

Deaths of Miss Agnes M. Cox,

Another severe loss has been sustained by the death of the Rev. Canon S. Nihal Singh, which took place at Allahabad on 8 May, 1916. In 1873 he was appointed second master of the Society's High School at Lucknow, of which he became headmaster in 1882. After a period of service at Jabalpur, and a course at St Paul's Divinity School, Allahabad, he was ordained in 1891. In 1906 he was appointed an honorary canon of Lucknow Cathedral, the first Indian to receive such an honour. He visited England at the time of the Society's Centenary.[1]

Canon S. Nihal Singh

The Rev. J. P. Ellwood, a former worker in the United Provinces and Central Provinces Missions, and one of the human instruments of Canon Nihal Singh's conversion, died at Graffham, Hunts, on 20 January, 1916. He went to India in 1871 and had charge during his long missionary life of various stations, among them Lucknow, Faizabad, Meerut, and Gorakhpur, in the United Provinces, and Jabalpur in the Central Provinces. For some years he was chairman of the Indian Church Council, and for a short time also he acted as secretary to the Corresponding Committee at Allahabad. In all the posts he occupied he proved himself to be not only an energetic and whole-hearted missionary, but also a wise and capable leader. He retired in 1911, and accepted a living at home.[2]

and Rev. J. P. Ellwood

The Mission has suffered greatly by the repatriation of four German missionaries, namely, the Rev. P. M. Zenker, who joined the C.M.S. in 1869 after some previous service under the Gossner Mission, and is now visiting Europe for the first time in fifty years; Miss G. Goetze, who has been working at Ghaziabad in close association with the C.M.S. since 1887; Miss E. Stroelin, whose service first under the Church of England Zenana Missionary Society and then under the C.M.S. has already extended over more than thirty-four years; and Miss F. L. Heintze, with twelve years' service in India to her credit. The Rev. S. Susankar has retired after twenty-three years' service in Mauritius and India as an ordained man, and Miss H. Graham has been re-transferred to the Punjab Mission.

Repatriation of four German C.M.S. missionaries

These losses have seriously affected the Mission which was already greatly undermanned. The Agra, Aligarh, and Bulandshahr districts, in at least two of which mass movements are in progress, have only one man each for evangelistic work, and there is no one available to fill their places in case of need. In the Gorakhpur district, with a village population of 3,000,000, where no other missionary society save the C.M.S. is represented, with the exception of a small Swedish mission, the only C.M.S. workers are one lay missionary and a small band of Indian catechists.

Literary work

The Rev. Canon W. Hooper completed a Hindi Commentary on St. Matthew, based on one in English by Dr. Weitbrecht in the Indian Bishops' series, and began a revision of the Hindi version of the Pentateuch; he also published in Urdu a volume of sermons on plant life. The Rev. J. N. Mukand translated into Hindi "The Call of the King," by Miss Marston, and part of Stalker's "Trial and Death of Jesus Christ."

I. PROVINCE OF AGRA

Allahabad

MOST of the men in the Oxford and Cambridge Hostel at Allahabad are students at Muir College. Work among them was hindered in 1915 by the smallness of the staff, and fewer men than usual, not more than forty per cent. of the total, were studying the Bible. A spirit of loyalty to the institution prevailed, but the atmosphere is said to be definitely anti-Christian, which makes spiritual work among the men doubly difficult. The congregation of Holy Trinity Church gave £140 in 1915 for missionary work besides raising considerable sums for local and diocesan objects. The late Canon S. Nihal Singh and a band of Indian helpers, who carried on Evangelistic Work in the district across the Ganges, attended the Magh mela for three weeks, sold Christian books, and distributed handbills in the vernacular. During the first week their preachings were undisturbed, but later the Arya Samajists and others actively opposed. Many sadhus, however, listened attentively to the preaching of the Cross, and some of them afterwards visited Canon Nihal Singh. One in particular is mentioned who is only deterred from seeking baptism by certain scruples concerning food and drink. Two Mohammedans and two Hindus were baptized. A Mohammedan inquirer came forward in the Partabgarh district, and several Doms (members of a criminal tribe) were under instruction in the suburbs of Allahabad. At Muirabad, a Christian village, where the Rev. J. Dharmjit is pastor, several converts who fell into sin many years ago repented and were restored to Christian fellowship. Special services were held and were largely attended, and some of the Christians banded themselves together for the purpose of preaching the Gospel to their Mohammedan neighbours in their spare time.

Benares

Jay Narayan's School, Benares, lost its headmaster, Mr. Fidi who had held that position for three years. Six of the girls in the normal class at the Middle School obtained their certificates; two of them remained in the school as members of the staff, three went to teach in other Christian middle schools, and the sixth took up a post in the Society's boarding school at Jeyi. Most of the eighty girls at the Orphanage attend the middle school as day scholars, but eighteen of them are in an industrial class, and learn embroidery and make chutney and curry powder for sale. The majority of the inmates are widows, or the children of poor Christians with large families. The Rev. J. J. Johnson continued his Work among Pundits and in the Hindu monasteries, conversing with sadhus and sannyasis, some of whom showed a keen interest in Christianity. Copies of the Sanskrit New Testament were accepted by them, and some visited Mr. Johnson on purpose to ask for copies. General Evangelistic Work in the city is full of promise, and the Rev. W. V. K. Treanor says that while he has always believed in bazaar work, he has never seen it so fully justified as in Benares. People asked useful questions and bought books, and special friendliness was shown by those who had been educated at mission schools or colleges. One inquirer is mentioned, a student, who had come to realize that Hinduism could offer him no comfort or help in his daily life, and when reading St. John's Gospel found in Christianity that for which he was searching. The high school for boys at Jaunpur had to cope with a new rival school, but was able to hold its own; in the scripture examination of the Missionary Education Union boys from the school won the first scholarship and several prizes. The Society has a middle school at Chunar, thirty miles from Benares, with eighty-two boys, nearly all non-Christians. A few inquirers came forward at Ahraura, where the work is mainly among the low castes.

Gorakhpur

An important step has been taken at Gorakhpur by the reconstruction of St. Andrew's College, which has been raised to the first grade, so that it now educates up to the B.A. degree. This has involved the provision of new buildings, and they were opened in January, 1916, by Sir James Meston, the Lieutenant-Governor of the United Provinces. The Government have generously given Rs 40,000 towards the cost of the buildings, and have promised a recurring grant of Rs 1000 a month towards the upkeep of the college. At the opening ceremony the principal, Dr. Garfield Williams, asked the Indian landowners and rich men present to contribute the one and a half lakhs of rupees (about £10,000) needed to construct a science wing, and some Rs. 15,000 were promised after the meeting.[1] The college occupies a unique position, for there is no similar institution within ten hours by railway, and the students exercise a wide influence in the district. In addition to the College the C.M.S. have at Gorakhpur, a high school, St. Andrew's School, attended by nearly 1000 boys; and there are no fewer than five Congregations to be ministered to.

Congregations

Of these two are English, and the work in them is very encouraging, since many of the people take a deep interest in the work of the Mission. The remaining three are Hindustani congregations, and in these the work is most difficult. There are many outstanding problems concerning them to be faced, due largely to the station having been so seriously undermanned for a long period of years; during 1915, however, the staff was strongly reinforced, and the future is in consequence full of hope. The Evangelistic Work in the huge district is in the hands of Mr. J. McIntosh, who is accompanied in his tours by a few probationer evangelists. Their receptions in the villages varied. In one Mohammedan centre the people listened most attentively; at other places the opposition of the Arya Samaj was pronounced. Visits were paid to several hermits, one of whom uses the Bible freely in teaching his disciples.

Agra

Meetings for students

A four days' campaign among students was conducted at Agra in November, 1915, by Mr. Sherwood Eddy, after a special gathering for the Indian Christians of the city. The students' meetings were held in the new hall of St. John's College, and at least 1000 men are estimated to have been present at the afternoon lectures. About 170 of them signed cards indicating their desire to study systematically the life and teaching of Christ, and seventy of these were students at

St. John's College

St. John's College. The work there proceeded on the usual lines, and the teaching even of secular subjects afforded abundant opportunity for inculcating religious truth. The commerce department of the college, in which men are prepared for the commercial certificate examination of the Allahabad University, had twenty-one members, and fifty or sixty other men were in the commercial training institute, which provides a commercial training for those who are not taking the university course. One of these men, whose baptism had thrice been arranged, only to be deferred each time owing to his suddenly being called away from the station by his relatives on various pretexts, was at length baptized in December, taking the name of Jay Narayan. At the close of 1915

St. John's High School

St. John's High School had on its roll the names of 389 Hindus, 107 Mohammedans, and 63 Christians, and in addition there were 257 boys in its branch schools. These figures show some falling off, which, however, is not due to the school losing popularity, but to classes being deliberately cut down in order that a higher standard of efficiency might be maintained. Very good results were obtained in the diocesan scripture examination, one boy gaining ninety-nine per cent of full marks in the New Testament paper, and another ninety-eight per cent. About thirty of the inmates of the Christian hostel banded themselves together to pray and work for the extension of Christ's kingdom, and as an inspiration to that end some of them were taken to Aligarh for nine days in the holidays, and went out in little preaching parties to visit mass movement Christians. In the district which has been assigned to the school, as mentioned in last year's Report,[1] a school for Chamars and another for caste people were opened, and visits were paid to a number of villages.[2] The Queen Victoria High School, which received the honour of a visit from Lady Meston, sent three girls up for the Allahabad matriculation examination, and two of them passed; eight entered for the middle examination, and all were successful; so also were the three normal students who sat for the government teachers' examination. All the boarders are Christians with the exception of four Mohammedans, and there are four Hindus among the day-girls. The number of names on the roll of St. John's Purdah School, rose to thirty-eight; some of the children seemed to be Christians at heart, and all showed interest in the Bible lessons. The Society has five other girls' schools in Agra, two of them for Mohammedans and three for Hindus, with an aggregate of 250 pupils. The Mohammedan girls remain at school until they are 15 or 16, and sometimes are difficult to manage; the Hindu children, who leave when they are between 6 and 12, are more easily influenced. The missionaries have many pupils in the Zenanas also, but the British and Foreign Bible Society having been obliged to withdraw two of its grants for Bible women, the staff of agents was reduced and of necessity the work also. As some obstacles were met with in connexion with meetings for purdah ladies they were abandoned, and in their place a fortnightly working party for the St. John's Ambulance Association was held. Most of the ladies prefer to do the work at home, but nevertheless the effort gave promise of drawing the Christians and non-Christians together. A Training School for village agents is carried on at Sikandra, from which year by year about half a dozen men pass out for work in the Mission. The Industrial School has grown until now it has 112 boarders. Two of the apprentices appeared for their final examination in carpentry, and one of them passed. In the course of 1915 Miss I. Schellenberg made Sikandra her headquarters for work among village women. In several places the women were glad to learn to read, and more requests for regular instruction were received than could be complied with.

The Society's work at Muttra is carried on chiefly among women, and is very varied in character. There are four schools for high-caste girls in the city and district, a new one having been opened in 1915 at the request of some yogis (holy men) for their women and children. Many former pupils are known to continue to read the Bible. Another branch of work is visiting zenanas, and for this more Bible women are badly needed, so many are the opportunities which present themselves. The missionaries are welcomed in many upper class houses, and find in them a great desire to hear Christian truths. A few purdah parties were held for some of the more advanced ladies. Again, itinerations are made in the district. Opposition caused by caste feeling or by fear of the plague was at times experienced in the villages, but on the other hand the presence of some who had been taught in mission schools or helped at some mission hospital often ensured the workers a welcome. They went several times to melas at Brindaban, and had attentive audiences at the very place from which twenty years before Mr. Zenker and his catechists had been driven away.

Aligarh

The large ingatherings in the Aligarh district, which were recorded in last year's Report,[1] continued to be a feature of the work, and on one day 120 persons were baptized ; [2] but nevertheless the Rev. T. Law says that there has been a "big check," owing to the unfaithfulness of some of the agents and other causes. Much time was devoted to the pastoral care of the converts who have been won in such large numbers of late years, and who in many cases are called upon to endure persecution, and a good deal of progress was evident among them. The missionaries visited the villages and held "jalsas," or gatherings at which all present take part in the proceedings, repeating Bible verses and parables, singing hymns, and answering questions put to them. At these jalsas the duty of putting up buildings to serve as school churches was laid before the people, and they responded liberally, one giving wood, another money, a third labour, and so on. In the town of Aligarh Mr. Law ministers to two congregations : an English one, which is helpful and sympathetic, and a Hindustani one, many members of which have but a low standard of morality if any standard at all. In the work of the three girls' schools, two for Hindus and one for Mohammedans, and in the zenana work there was opposition on the part of the Arya Samajists, who are copying Christian methods in the form of schools for girls and zenana visiting. Many of the zenana pupils of the C.M.S. workers, however, refused to listen to the Arya teachers and sent them away. Hathras, a town of 40,000 inhabitants, mostly Mohammedans, was occupied by Miss H. M. Forbes in April, 1915. A couple of women belonging to the place were baptized a few years ago, and this made the people suspicious, and aided the Arya Samajists in their opposition. Consequently the zenanas in the town opened but slowly to Miss Forbes and her Bible women, but they were able to establish a school for caste girls, and they found a great spirit of inquiry among the Chamars.

Buland-shahr

When 1915 opened the Society had two schools in the Buland-shahr district for the purpose of reaching the higher classes, namely, a vernacular school in the city, in which the highest standard of vernacular education is given, and the King Edward Memorial School, a middle school, at Lakhauti, where half the boys are Jats. A third school was added in the course of the year at Khurja. The Arya Samaj also opened a school in that place, which drew away so many boys from the C.M.S. institution that it seemed as though the Society must abandon the field. But prayer was made; the two teachers in the Arya school put themselves under instruction with a view to baptism; and their school was handed over to the Mission. Besides these teachers there were other hopeful inquirers from the higher classes. The greater part of the work in the district, however, is among the Chamars, of whom there are some 200,000. Eleven village schools are carried on for their benefit, some of them being held at night, and these are valuable evangelistic agencies.[1] It was hoped that some of the boys attending them would be baptized, and a hostel was prepared for their reception so that they might not need to live in their heathen homes. Unhappily, when the time came for the boys to confess Christ in baptism all of them for one reason or another were withdrawn by their parents. The ostracism which was the lot of the converts who were baptized in 1914, led the inquirers in several villages to grow cold, but the people of some other villages put themselves under instruction.

Inquirers from the higher classes

The centenary of C.M.S. work at Meerut was celebrated in December, 1915, the chaplains at the station showing much sympathy, and all the expenses being met by the generosity of the European community. The chief services were a united service of Holy Communion in the mission church for the scattered Indian Christians, and a thanksgiving service in the garrison church, whither the Christians marched after the Holy Communion service. The procession was headed by a military officer, then came the clergy in their robes, followed by the Bishop of Lucknow, and then a long train of Indian Christians, each village congregation being marked by a distinctive banner. The body of the big church was filled by the 700 Indian Christians, the Europeans, among whom were many soldiers, being relegated to the galleries. One Territorial afterwards remarked, "I shall have something to tell the people at home who don't believe in native Christians." In the Venite the pointing and length of sentences in English and Hindustani vary, and it was a question which section of the large congregation would prevail, but at length the great volume of sound from the Indians drowned the English voices, and the choir had to lapse into silence. The Rev. J. F. Pemberton writes :—

Centenary of C.M.S. work

"I shall have something to tell the people at home"

Our object in holding this massed thanksgiving service was to inspire our small isolated congregations with the realization of their fellowship in Christ's religion with Europeans and the great Anglican Church. Subsequent remarks made by the village Christians show that this object was attained. Here is one story. When a certain villager told his master (the zemindar) that he wished to go into Meerut to attend the centenary service, he was warned by him that the "sahibs" would not allow him to enter their church. However, he summoned up courage, and in due course he found himself on the steps of the big church. With some trepidation he passed in, fearing that his master's warning might come true, and that the "sahibs" would be angry and thrash him. What was his surprise when he found himself being conducted to a seat by a smiling British soldier! He returned to his village—the despised outcaste—elated and triumphant. He had been welcomed and honoured by the "sahibs" in their own church. Again, the fellowship of the "common cup" received striking emphasis in our Communion Service on that day. One of the humble village communicants relates how he was struck with astonishment and admiration when he saw the great Lord Bishop drink from the very cup that the erstwhile low caste people had drunk from. To him there was a great symbolism in the simple act of consuming the elements.

Liberality of Indian Christians

Much liberality was shown by the Indian Christians of Meerut. When a harvest thanksgiving service was held in the town—a novelty to many, since such services are largely confined to rural congregations—their gifts in money and kind for the Indian War Relief Fund amounted to Rs 154; and on another occasion when Rs. 164 was asked for to meet a debt incurred by the Indian Church Council, not only was the amount promptly subscribed, but a substantial balance in excess was given to defray the cost of some special repairs to the church. The High School for boys was quite full, and met with success in examinations besides gaining a good report from the inspector. The officer in command at the station presented the trophies at the sports; the district judge spoke at the prize giving; the colonel of the Territorial Force presided at the school centenary meeting; and four challenge shields for athletics have been presented, by the bishop, the collector, the inspector of schools, and the commanding officer respectively. The Middle School for girls has fifty-five boarders and twenty day scholars, for the most part children of mission agents working in the villages, and the numbers would be larger but for lack of accommodation. Since the school was founded four years ago there has not been a single failure among those presented from it for the government Anglo-vernacular middle examination. In 1913 another girls' middle school was opened for the daughters of wealthy Hindus, and this like the other has grown. The Society also has four day schools for Hindu girls in the city. The Zenana Work is only limited by the number of teachers available. Ten persons were baptized at Ancholi, and sixty at Nirpura, an out-station opened during the year, the latter having resisted the efforts of the Arya Samajists to win them over during their two years' probation, and braved the wrath of the zemindars who had expressed their resolve to be revenged on the Christians. Another new out-station was opened at Moorlopur, six miles from Meerut. At Jeyi, where the Society has a rest house and a little boarding school for twenty village girls, known as the "Red Coat School", thirty persons were confirmed. Zenana and dispensary work are carried on at Ghaziabad, whence visits are paid to the surrounding villages and the two out-stations. Ghaziabad

From Dehra Dun, chosen as the chief station because the Indian congregation is more permanent than elsewhere in the district, visits are paid to Mussourie, where the Society has a rest house for missionaries, Arcadia, and Rajpur. Three persons were baptized at Rajpur. A number of Chuhras asked for baptism, but were unwilling to wait for systematic instruction and sought and obtained baptism at the hands of a worker of another society. Dehra Dun

II. PROVINCE OF OUDH

Lucknow was visited with disastrous floods in September, 1915. On the first two days of the month eighteen inches of rain fell, and 12,000 houses collapsed, rendering 50,000 people (one-fifth of the population) homeless. Then on the 13th and 14th fifteen more inches fell.[1] The boys of the C.M.S. High School rose to the occasion, forming themselves into ambulance parties, rescuing people from falling houses, and so on. In examinations the school had a record year, standing first of all the schools in the United Provinces in both the school leaving certificate and matriculation examinations, with seventy-two per cent of passes, one boy heading the list in the special subject of commerce, and another gaining second place and a monthly scholarship in the Missionary Union scripture examination. A former pupil at the school, a baptized Christian, has offered his services to the National Missionary Society of India, resigning a good position in the Indian police force in order to do so.[2] The Purdah School has twenty-six names on its roll; eleven of the children are Hindus, ten Mohammedans, and the rest Christians of good parentage. The school received the honour of a visit from Lady Meston. There was a welcome absence of opposition in the Evangelistic Work; indeed one of a number of young men who used to organize counter preachings so as to draw away the audiences of the C.M.S. workers, showed some disposition to become an inquirer. In December, 1915, Mr. Sherwood Eddy and Mr. Buchman devoted four days to meetings for students held in the Reid Christian College; more than a hundred men signed cards expressing their willingness to study the Gospel with an open mind. In connexion with the English congregation, there is a branch of the Gleaners' Union with eighty members. A sale of work at the station in aid of the Mission, opened by the Lieutenant-Governor in the absence of Lady Meston, realized a larger sum than ever before.

Faizabad

The work at Faizabad is financed by the Indian Church Council, but that at the out-stations in the district is maintained by the funds of the C.M.S. Twelve adults belonging to the untouchables were baptized in 1915, and five young men were to be received into the visible Church at Christmas. One event of the year was a discussion with the Arya Samajis on the so-called self-contradictions of the Bible, which resulted in the secretary of the Samaj asking for a copy of the Bible and beginning to study it. The Rev. J. Qalandar spent a month in a village of opium growers, and among them found a small sect called "Ahmaq Shahi," of which he gives the following account :—

An interesting sect

Some thirty years ago the Rev. A. W. Baumann, who was then the missionary at Faizabad, met an old man who had left his home to lead a "religious life." Mr. Baumann persuaded him to settle down for some time in the mission compound with a view to win him over to Christ. I remember asking him his name at that time, and to my astonishment he replied, "Ahmaq Shah," which means, "A fool Ascetic," and gave his reason for it, saying that "the people of this world call themselves wise but I call myself a fool." I cannot now tell you with what impressions he left Mr. Baumann then, but it seems that after the teaching he received from him he went away and started a sect of his own. The simple creed of the sect is : (1) No Caste ; (2) No Idolatry ; (3) Worship of the Name. This simplicity of their creed was a great help to us in the presentation of the Gospel truth to them.

Among the out-stations are Ajodhya, famous as the birthplace of Ram, and the scene of three big melas annually, and Sultanpur, where as well as in the neighbouring villages many people expressed their willingness to receive Christian instruction.

CENTRAL PROVINCES AND RAJPUTANA MISSION

PAST HISTORY

The Central Provinces of India, together with Rajputana and the other native States known as Central India, were formed into the diocese of Nagpur in 1903, the first bishop, Dr. Eyre Chatterton, being consecrated on March 25 of that year. The Society's work, which is carried on in the Central Provinces and Rajputana, was severed from that in the United Provinces and placed under a separate committee in the same year. Jabalpur, the oldest of the C.M.S. stations in the diocese, was occupied in 1855; Katni Murwara in 1899; and Bharatpur (in Rajputana) in 1902. Among the Gonds, Mandla (1879), Marpha (1892), Patpara (1897), Sukulpura (1901), and Deori (1909) are the stations.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

The Mission is carried on in three sections: among Hindus and Mohammedans in the Central Provinces (I) and also in Rajputana (II); and among the Gonds (III), an animistic people.

I and II. At Jabalpur and Katni Murwara, in the Central Provinces, and at Bharatpur, 300 miles from the former and within some thirty miles of Agra, but situated in Rajputana, the work is mainly among Hindus, and is carried on by means of a high school, a middle school, and a hostel for Christian boys at Jabalpur, an Anglo-vernacular school at Bharatpur, and several vernacular schools; and by evangelistic efforts in the villages. The women's work at Jabalpur and Katni Murwara is, for the most part, in the hands of missionaries of the C.E.Z.M.S.

III. The Gonds, an aboriginal tribe, are reached from Mandla (where there is also some work among Hindus), Patpara, Deori, Sukulpura, and Marpha, which are in the Central Provinces and within about a hundred miles of Jabalpur. A training class for evangelists is held at Mandla, and there are a girls' middle school and orphanages for boys and girls at Patpara.

The Society's staff comprises 9 European and 6 Indian clergymen, 1 layman, 10 missionaries' wives and 7 single women. The Indian Christian lay agents engaged in the Mission number 137.

The following are the members of the Jabalpur Corresponding Committee for 1916: The Bishop of Nagpur, Archdeacon C. Price, Major Plummer, Mr. G. C. Rogers, Capt. C. J. Stokes, Mr. A. C. Sells, and the Revs. F. Ll. Bridges, W. Hodgkinson, and Canon E. A. Hensley (secretary).

Work among the Bhils transferred to the Western India Mission

As already explained in a former chapter[1] the work at Kherwara, Biladia, and Lusadia, was transferred in April, 1915, from the Central Provinces and Rajputana Mission to the Western India Mission. The distance of those stations from Jabalpur, the head-quarters of the Central Provinces Mission, and from Nagpur, the head-quarters of the Nagpur Diocese, is much greater than their distance from Bombay; moreover the Gujerati language which is spoken in the Bhil Mission area is widely spoken in the Bombay Diocese, but nowhere else in that of Nagpur. On these grounds the C.M.S. missionaries requested the transfer, and the two bishops interested were both agreeable to its being made.

The staff of the Central Provinces Mission is altogether insufficient for the adequate prosecution of the work. It is seven years since the Mission as now constituted received any recruit, and the necessary furloughs in 1916 have involved leaving Bharatpur, Mandla, and Sukulpura without any clerical missionary, and Jabalpur, with its many agencies, with only one ordained European.

The Kaisar-i-Hind silver medal has been conferred on the Rev. E. D. Price by the Indian Government.

Literary work

Mrs. E. A. Hensley continued to edit the quarterly paper of the Y.W.C.A. in Hindi, and Miss E. E. Smyth wrote short daily notes in that language on the Scripture Union portions.

I. JABALPUR AND KATNI MURWARA

Jabalpur

High School

THERE are two hostels, one for Christians and the other for non-Christians, connected with the High School at Jabalpur. St. Luke's, the Christian hostel, was not quite full, but many more boys applied for admission to the other hostel, St. John's, than could be accommodated. Boys from the Christian hostel conduct Sunday-school classes in the various primary schools in the city. In another part of the city the Society has a middle school with about 250 pupils. There are two congregations in Jabalpur connected with the Indian Church Council. The Hindustani congregation, which numbers about 500 persons, defrays half the pastor's salary and all its other expenses, and conducts its own business. The Tamil congregation is not so far advanced, and its expenses are met to a large extent by subscriptions from residents in the city. The Christians are said to do very little for the evangelization of others. A striking illustration of the position which the Rev. Canon E. A. Hensley, the secretary of the Mission, has gained among the people was afforded by his being asked to preside over a public controversy between champions of Islam and the Arya Samaj, at which between 6000 and 10,000 men were present.[1] One adult, a Hindu holy man, was baptized at Sihora, an outstation where it is many years since any male convert was won.[2] Efforts were made to enlist the interest of the Territorials stationed at Jabalpur in the Society's work, and two missionary meetings, presided over by their officers, were held specially for them.

Confidence of Mohammedans and Hindus in a missionary

Katni Murwara

The work at Katni Murwara has gone forward during the last five years, especially in the matter of mission schools, but it suffered in the early months of 1915 from the absence of the Rev. J. Fryer whose services were lent to the Government for chaplaincy work. Two adults were baptized during the year.

II. BHARATPUR

Bharatpur

THE missionaries at Bharatpur, which is situated in Rajputana, are happy in the uniformly friendly attitude towards them of the Maharajah, the Maji Sahiba (the mother of the young Maharajah), and the Maharani, as well as of the state council and European officials. The workers are invited to and cordially entertained at all public receptions and social and civic gatherings, and thus are brought into touch with the influential classes of the State and city. For example, when the Maji Sahiba invited all the leading zenana ladies of the city to a working party for making comforts for the Indian soldiers, the C.M.S. women missionaries also received an invitation, and as a result of the weekly gatherings were asked to visit some ladies whom they had not known before, including one belonging to the most influential and bigoted house in the city. But the workers already have more zenanas open to them than they can visit, albeit they go to sixty-five each week. Some of the women seem very near the Kingdom, and the mother in one house, where three women of the family were reading, said, "I don't mind how little you make them read as long as they thoroughly understand the spiritual meaning." Opposition on the part of a moulvi brought the little mission school for Mohammedans to grief, but the efforts of the Arya Samajists failed to accomplish the suspension of the existing Hindu school, and a new one was opened. Itinerations were made in the cold weather, during which preaching in the open air was well listened to. Two prolonged visits were paid to the Kanjars in the criminal settlement, and the people were found to have a good recollection of what they had been taught three years before. Simple medical work is found very effective in winning their confidence and attention to the Gospel. Self-support and self-government are earnestly sought after by the two pastorates connected with the District Church Council, and debt is unknown in the church accounts.

III. GOND MISSION

ALTHOUGH Mandla is within the sphere of the Gond Mission its population of rather more than 9000 consists chiefly of Hindus and Mohammedans. Work is carried on in the zenanas, and many of the women and girls would welcome more frequent visits than they receive, but their reason is rather that they wish to make progress with their reading than that they may hear the Gospel. Nineteen villages in the district are visited, and work is maintained at the melas which are held. There is an out-station at Nainpur.

Mandla

The Boys' Middle School at Patpara has the names of more than a hundred pupils on its roll, about half of whom are accommodated in hostels. A former student passed out of the government normal school during the year with a teacher's certificate. Some of the pupils of the Girls' Middle School will shortly be leaving for Jabalpur for normal training. Classes for teachers and Bible women are held at the station, in which they are prepared for their examinations, the written part of which all of them succeeded in passing. The work in the villages in the district is described as very hard. The people are friendly and apply freely to the missionaries for help in various ways, but partly through lack of courage to confess Christ openly and partly through indifference few of them seek baptism. Such converts as there are have been won mainly in the school hostels or the leper asylum. But the Rev. J. L. Wakeling thinks that the Gonds are only "waiting for a lead," and that if one or two or their chief men would come out on Christ's side many would follow.

"Waiting for a lead"

Early in 1915 a new church was dedicated by the Bishop of Nagpur at Marpha. The people of the district of their own accord gave liberally to the War Relief Fund—a proceeding which Mr. Price says is quite abnormal, and which he regards as of good augury for the future maintenance of the Church. There are eight vernacular schools in the extensive district which do much to evangelize their neighbourhoods. Though Deori is a Christian settlement a number of non-Christian Gonds, some of them from a long distance, arrived with their cattle and established themselves in the immediate neighbourhood; all of them attend the Sunday services. The dispensary work at the station is evidently appreciated by the people of the district, who listen readily to the Gospel and admit its truth, but go no farther. The Rev. Failbus, a Gond clergyman, resides at Diwari, and thence makes tours in the neighbourhood. He says that the belief of the Gonds in ghosts is weakening, and anticipates a mass movement towards Christianity in the near future.

Marpha

Sukulpura

The Christians in the Sukulpura district remained apathetic,[1] but the Christian workers had good audiences in the villages, where the novelty of the Gospel continued to attract. Lantern lectures were given in a number of the government vernacular schools, and a good deal of Christian literature was sold.

BENGAL AND BIHAR MISSION

PAST HISTORY

Before India was opened to missionaries, a corresponding committee of the C.M.S. was formed at Calcutta, of which several government chaplains and influential laymen were members. Two English missionaries were sent to Calcutta in 1816; Burdwan was occupied in 1819; Krishnagar (Nadiya) in 1831; Bhagalpur in 1850; and Deoghar in 1912. Work among the Santals, an aboriginal tribe in Bengal, was begun at Hiranpur in 1860; Taljhari was occupied in 1862; Godda in 1872; and Bhagaya and Barharwa in 1878.

The see of Calcutta was formed in 1814, Dr. Middleton being the first occupant. Dr. Lefroy is the present bishop and Metropolitan of India.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

The Mission is divided into four sections, two in Bengal and two in Bihar.

I. In Calcutta and its suburbs there are a number of educational institutions, including the Henry Martyn Divinity College, a college (St. Paul's), two high schools for boys (St. Paul's and Garden Reach), and a boarding school for Christian girls. Hostels are maintained in connexion with some of these. Evangelistic work is carried on in several languages both in the city and district, and there are some half-dozen pastorates under a church council. There is also a mission station at Burdwan, a town, seventy miles from Calcutta, in and around which evangelistic work is maintained.

II. In the Nadiya district, with its large village population, Krishnagar, Chupra, Doyabari (Ranaghat), Bollobhpur, and Santirajpur are occupied by British missionaries. The last named is a centre from which itinerating work is maintained. Nine parishes are connected with the Nadiya Church Council.

A teachers' training school and boys' high school are found at Krishnagar, and a Christian boys' boarding school and an industrial school at Chupra, besides a number of vernacular schools at various places, while at Bollobhpur there is an orphanage for Christian girls. There are also a couple of hostels. A medical mission is carried on at Doyabari, with separate hospitals for men and women.

III. At Bhagalpur the institutions include a high school and Christian hostel for boys, a middle vernacular school for boys, a boys' orphanage, a dispensary, and a leper asylum; while at Jamalpur there is the Fraser Hostel for Indian Christian apprentices. There is a girls' boarding school with a normal class at Deoghar. A band of evangelists itinerates in the extensive district.

IV. Work is carried on also among the Santals, an aboriginal tribe, in Santalia, which lies in the Rajmahal hills in Bihar, south of the Ganges, and also in a colony in British Bhutan north of the river. The pastoral care of the Christians is entrusted almost entirely to clergy of their own race. The Society has a divinity school at Taljhari, boarding schools for boys at Taljhari and Godda, and one for girls at Barharwa. It is also responsible for the management of a training class for men at Taljhari, which is financed by the Government. At Godda there are hostels for Santals and for Paharis.

The women's evangelistic work, save in Santalia, is mainly in the hands of missionaries of the C.E.Z.M.S., which has stations at Calcutta, Burdwan, Baranagore, Barrackpur, Jamalpur, Krishnagar, etc.

There are 25 European clergymen engaged in the Mission, 4 laymen, 21 wives of missionaries, and 9 single women; 2 of the above are doctors, and 1 is a nurse. The Indian workers consist of 29 clergymen and 376 Christian lay agents.

The following are the members of the Calcutta Corresponding Committee for 1916: The Bishop of Calcutta, Hon. Justice Caspersz, Hon. Justice E. P. Chapman, Dr. P. D. Bose, Mr. J. C. Dutt, Mr. W. R. C. Gourlay, Mr. F. G. Hawkins, Lt.-Col. L. R. Kenyon, Mr. W. E. Pincombe, Hon. Justice H. Walmsley, Mr. W. A. A. Wood, and the Revs. Canon F. T. Cole, W. E. S. Holland, R. F. Pearce, and E. T. Sandys (secretary).

Deaths of Rev. A. J. Santer

THE Rev. A. J. Santer, an Islington man who sailed for the Miss on in 1882 and worked at Krishnagar and Burdwan until ma arial fever compelled him to retire in 1896, died at St. Leonards on 22 July, 1915.

and Rev. H.D. Day

Another former C.M.S. missionary in Bengal, the Rev. H. D. Day, who was at Calcutta from 1878–9, died at Liverpool on 16 March, 1916.

Literary work

The Rev. Canon F. T. Cole revised his Santali translation of Part I of the "Pilgrim's Progress," and continued the revision of the Santali Prayer Book, while Mr. S. J. Jessop wrote a booklet on "Decision" in that language. The Rev. R. C. Biswas edited Bengali notes on the daily portions of the Scripture Union.

I. CALCUTTA AND BURDWAN

Calcutta

SOME special services were conducted among the students of St. Paul's College, Calcutta, by the Bishop of Assam, and a successful holiday camp was held with fifteen of the Christian students, at which the need of a more truly indigenous life in the Indian Church was discussed. Another event of the year was the admission to the college of a number of Syrian Christians from Travancore. The men were much impressed by the death at the front while trying to save a comrade of Mr. L. R. Burrows, a son of the Bishop of Sheffield, who had been a short service worker at the college. A new hostel, called the Ealand Hostel, after the late principal of St. Paul's School was opened by Lord Carmichael, the Governor of Bengal, in December, 1915. There are sixty-two boarders, all but two of them Christians, in Christ Church Girls' Boarding School; the elder girls help in Sunday-school work, and some of them visit in a hospital. In connexion with the Calcutta District Church Council itself, there are four churches in Calcutta besides six at outlying places. The attendance at the morning services at Holy Trinity Church improved, chiefly owing to the opening of St. Luke's Hostel, an institution for Indian Christian nurses, but the Rev. J. P. N. Biswas has to lament a great disregard of Sunday among his people. At Christ Church the services are attended by many non-Christians, and a B.A. student is said to be an inquirer into the truth. The congregation at St. Mark's is poor and illiterate, and consists chiefly of people who have migrated to Calcutta from the Nadiya district. The Calcutta churches are making an effort to relieve the Society of financial responsibility for the evangelistic work in the city. When 1915 opened eight students were in the Henry Martyn Divinity College at Cossipore, so called because Calcutta was the first sphere of work of the famous missionary, and three training school passed masters and three inquirers also read in the college for six months. The students gave six weeks in the year to work in the Nadiya district, where they visited the Christian villages, teaching the converts collectively and individually in their homes, and carrying on direct evangelistic work among the non-Christians in the neighbourhood. Three of the regular students completed their course during the year; one of them was ordained, and the others took up posts in the Mission as evangelists. Open-air work is carried on by two preachers and a colporteur at Howrah, under the Rev. R. J. Kennedy, who is also on the staff of St. Paul's College, while Mrs. Kennedy, with the help of a Bible woman, visits in the zenanas. By the end of the year she had found a welcome in some houses from which at one time she had been turned out. A new out-station was opened at Gushkara in the Burdwan district where an Indian catechist is in charge. The work at Katwa has been handed over to the Free Church of Scotland Mission.

II. NADIYA DISTRICT

Nadiya District Church Council

THE Rev. R. F. Pearce, who has lately been appointed chairman of the Nadiya District Church Council, writes in some detail concerning the difficulties which experience has shown him lie in the way of self-support and self-government. (1) Self-support is hindered by economic conditions. Most of the non-Christian cultivators in the district are virtually serfs, heavily in debt to their landlords, who just keep them going if they are obedient and submissive, but if they begin to assert their independence turn them off their land, and sell up their houses and cattle. The converts resent this position of subjection, and in consequence are continually being harassed. Endeavours are made to improve their condition by establishing co-operative banks, from which they can borrow money wherewith to pay off their debts to their landlords, and by teaching them handicrafts; but it must of necessity be a matter of time before they are free from debt, and until then they can hardly contribute largely towards the expenses of work in their midst. (2) The committal of self-government to the Nadiya Church is hindered by the moral and spiritual condition of the Christians. Mr. Pearce describes them as "sound and loyal to Christ and to Christianity as they have learned it," as is proved by the small headway made by the Roman Catholics in spite of all their efforts, and by the firmness with which the material and social inducements held out by Mohammedans as a lure have been resisted by most of the Christians. But the religion of the converts is often of a very weak and elementary type, and they are constantly quarrelling and splitting up into factions over trifling matters. Thus although they have the virtues as well as the defects of children, and are very responsive to an appeal to their higher feelings, the time is hardly ripe to entrust them with complete self-government.

Economic difficulties of converts

Doyabari

Hospitals

There was little change in the number of patients at the Hospitals at Doyabari, for although that for women was closed throughout the year in the absence of Dr. Ethel Good on furlough, there was no difficulty in making use of the vacant beds to accommodate men. Several of the patients raised hopes that they were about to embrace Christianity, only to disappoint them by suddenly vanishing from the scene, but there was one happy exception—a man from Bihar who was baptized in the summer.[1] The spiritual life of the Christians appeared to deepen, and some of them accompanied the missionaries when they visited the surrounding villages. On such occasions the magic lantern was a useful adjunct, and with its aid entrance was gained to the boys' high school at Ranaghat, with 400 pupils, who were addressed on two or three occasions. The "settlement" for Christian girls educated in mission schools, which was opened at Doyabari[2] in 1914 with the object of showing them the need for evangelistic work in the villages and of giving them opportunities for engaging in it, did not prove a success and has been closed. Monthly visits were paid to Kanchrapara, where the Society has a hostel for employés on the East Bengal Railway, and where services are conducted for English and Bengali Christians.

Krishnagar

Training School

High School

The Training School at Krishnagar had twenty-seven students. All teachers trained there are now called upon to take a six months' course at the Henry Martyn Divinity College before going to their posts, and three of the Krishnagar men accordingly entered that institution in 1915. Seven of the High School boys passed the matriculation examination of the Calcutta University. During the year the Governor of Bengal held a durbar in the town. The Indian Christians asked permission to present an address of welcome and express their loyalty to the Crown, just as did the Hindus and Mohammedans, but it was refused on the ground that Christians are not a society or association recognized by the Government. Lord Carmichael, who has shown his sympathy with missionary work on other occasions,[3] received a deputation on his boat after the durbar, but that of course was only a private interview and involved no official recognition.

Christians not a society recognized by Government

Chupra

Industrial School

Five of the buildings of the Industrial School at Chupra were blown down during a storm in May, 1915. The Christians at the station are slack in their attendance at services, but they welcomed the holding of prayer meetings in their own houses during a special effort made in their midst in the cold season. An old man and three boys were baptized.

Santirajpur

In the Santirajpur district a Mohammedan was baptized on Easter Sunday, 1915, and another Mohammedan, with his wife and three children, and three other Moslem boys—orphans—were received into the visible Church later in the year. Several Mohammedans and one Hindu were also being prepared for baptism, and it is said that the inhabitants of two villages would probably embrace Christianity en masse if regular work could be established among them. Voluntary evangelistic work was carried on by Santirajpur Christians, some of whom raised a sum of money by carol singing, which at their own request was sent to England to help in removing the deficit in the Society's income.

Meherpur

Mr. B. B. Chowdury, the Indian catechist in charge at Meherpur, says that the work proceeds "steadily though somewhat quietly." He mentions a few inquirers, and speaks of a young Mohammedan who at one time tried to draw away his parents from the Mission, but won by their changed lives gratefully accepted a Bengali New Testament for himself and promised to read it. Many of the non-Christians in the district were markedly indifferent to the Gospel, saying that the war proved that Christianity had failed in Europe.

Kushtia

Book sales were good in the Kushtia district, and the evangelists had good and attentive audiences in the villages. Many inquirers were dealt with, but most of them were found to have come forward from unworthy motives.

III. BHAGALPUR

Bhagalpur

High School

Orphanage

THE number of boys under the Rev. S. K. Tarafdar in the High School at Bhagalpur rose in 1915 from 350 to 430, about 300 of whom were Hindus and eighty Mohammedans. Eighteen lads passed the Calcutta matriculation examination, eight of them in the first division, and for the third year in succession a boy from the school secured a government scholarship. At the prize distribution, over which Sir Charles Bayley, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bihar presided, tokens were given instead of prizes, and the money saved was sent to the Indian Imperial Relief Fund. There are a commercial department and two hostels attached to the school. One of the boys at the Orphanage was carried off by plague; others in the compound were attacked, and were nursed by volunteers from among the senior lads. During the last thirteen years eight evangelists, three colporteurs, two dispensers, and one teacher, who at the time were or had been in the orphanage, have joined the staff of the Mission. Six or seven of the inmates of the Leper Asylum were being prepared for baptism. The out-stations number five: Jamalpur, where there is a hostel for Indian Christian apprentices on the East Indian Railway; Colgong, near which a new village school was opened in 1915 at Maheshmunda; Jamui; Bhaptiari; and Forbesgang. At the last named place the catechist got into touch with a guru, who has 400 or 500 disciples, and who is studying the New Testament.

Deoghar

Deoghar is about seventy miles south of Bhagalpur; it is within the Santal pergunnas, but the population is almost entirely Hindu. All the candidates from the junior teachers' training class in the Girls' Boarding School who sat for examination passed, and three scholarships were gained in the middle school examination. Visits were paid to a leper asylum near the town, and lectures on ethics were given from time to time to the senior students in the Hindu high school. In the course of an itineration in the cold season a visit was paid to Baunsi where a great mela was in progress; about Rs 30 was realized in two days by the sale of books, most of them at a farthing each.

IV. SANTALIA

Visits of the Bishop of Calcutta to Santalia

SANTALIA had the privilege of two visits from the Bishop of Calcutta. In February, 1915, he admitted a couple of men to deacons' orders at Taljhari, and held confirmations there and at Barharwa; and in April he undertook the difficult and trying journey to the Santal Colony, where 127 candidates were presented to him for confirmation. Before the Bishop's visit special meetings were held at all the chief centres in the colony, and every household was visited; at the closing thanksgiving service the central church, which can hold 1200 people, was crowded and an offertory of Rs 69 was made.

Santal Church Council

Great scarcity prevailed in the country in 1915, and the ordinary church offertories and the regular collections for the mission fund of the Santal Church Council fell off, but the mission fund received some special donations and in the end the total income of the council was but little smaller than in the previous year. The average amount given per head, including children, was equivalent to a fortnight's food supply. Several backsliders of many years' standing were received back into Christian fellowship, and most of the pastorates report baptisms, the total number in the eastern part of the Santal pergunnas, the area covered by the council, being 359, of which 124 were of adult coverts.[1] Mr. S. J. Jessop, who itinerates all over Santalia, reports baptisms at several out-stations, and in several villages catechumens were found, some of them won by Christian relatives. He says that throughout the district the "majority of the heathen are losing their faith in demonism," but adds that they have little desire for Christianity and are becoming irreligious.

Taljhari

The two men just mentioned as having been ordained in 1915 had been students in the Divinity Class at Taljhari, which after they had left had five members. Sixteen students were in the Guru Training School, which is worked by the Rev. W. J. Tillott, a C.M.S. missionary, though all the expenses are met by the Government. Mr. Tillott also superintends the Boys' Boarding School, with about 200 pupils, two of whom were baptized during the year, while sixteen others gave in their names as desiring baptism, many of them brought to a decision during some special services held in the spring. There was reason to hope that a former pupil, now a teacher in a government village school, would shortly embrace Christianity. Nearly 5000 visits were recorded at the dispensary.

Boys' Boarding School

The Girls' Boarding School at Barharwa was crowded in spite of the dilapidated state of the buildings; special meetings were held in the school with good results, and one former pupil was baptized. Work is carried on among the women in the bazaar and villages.

Barharwa

Most of the boys in the Boarding School at Pathra, three miles from Godda, are Santals or Hindus, though the school is intended primarily for the Paharis, or hill people; some of the lads belonged to districts forty or fifty miles from the station which otherwise would be untouched by missionary effort. Several boys received baptism in 1915. In view of the distance from Barharwa and the insufficiency of the accommodation at its girls' school a Boarding School for girls was opened at Pathra during the year, at which fees were charged from the outset. In the district, which covers an area of 1000 square miles and contains 3000 villages and a population of half a million, there are primary schools at strategic points, and in these about 600 boys are being educated. The Santals around Godda are eager to hear the Gospel, and the heathen travelled even ten or twelve miles to be present at some lantern services held at a place called Bhawani where thirteen persons were baptized during the year. One of the new converts was a self-taught Pahari, who had taught his wife also. The Rev. T. Lenman appears to differ from Mr. Jessop in his estimate of the outlook, for he says that there are signs of the approach of a mass movement.

SOUTH INDIA MISSION

PAST HISTORY

The Tamil country south of Madras was the scene of the S.P.C.K.'s missions in the eighteenth century. But the first two clergymen of the Church of England who went to India as missionaries were sent to Madras by the Church Missionary Society in 1815, having been preceded in 1814 by two men in Lutheran orders. The East India Act of 1833 made provision for a new bishopric of Madras, and Daniel Corrie was consecrated in 1835. Dr. Whitehead (consecrated 1899) is the present bishop. Work was commenced at Ootacamund, on the Nilgiri Hills, in 1870.

The Telugu Mission was begun in 1841 by two of the most devoted men on the roll of C.M.S. missionaries, Robert T. Noble and Henry Watson Fox (an old Rugbeian). Noble started in 1843 the famous English school at Masulipatam now known by his name, worked it for twenty-two years, and died at his post in 1865. Many Brahmans trained in it have embraced the Gospel, and it has sent forth several Indian clergymen to labour among their countrymen. Fox was a preaching missionary, and set the example of those itinerating and rural missionary efforts which have resulted in the foundation of an increasing Indian Church, hitherto chiefly drawn from the Malas and other outcaste or low-caste people. Ellore was occupied in 1854; Bezwada, 1858; Raghavapuram, 1872; Khammamett, 1888; and Haidarabad, 1901. A Mission among the Kois, a non-Aryan tribe on the Upper Godavari, was founded at Dummagudem by General Haig in 1860. An Indian clergyman, the Rev. V. S. Azariah, was consecrated as Bishop of Dornakal (a part of the Telugu Country) in 1912.

In 1820 the Rev. J. Hough, chaplain at Palamcotta, drew the attention of the Society to the claims of Tinnevelly, where there was already a community of 3000 professed Indian Christians, an offshoot from the S.P.C.K.'s Lutheran Mission in Tanjore. Two missionaries were at once set apart for this work, and from that time to this, through the labours of Rhenius, Pettitt, Thomas, J. T. Tucker, Hobbs, Sargent, and others (not to mention workers of the S.P.G., which has a fruitful mission contiguous to that of the C.M.S.), the Gospel has continued to spread among the Tamil population, chiefly among the Shanars, or cultivators of the palmyra tree. In North Tinnevelly a vigorous itinerant mission was established by Ragland, D. Fenn, and Meadows. Assistant bishops to the Bishop of Madras for the Indian congregations in Madura and Tinnevelly were consecrated in 1877; and in 1896 the bishopric in Tinnevelly and Madura was founded. The Right Rev. E. H. M. Waller, a former missionary and secretary of the C.M.S., is the present bishop.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

The South India Mission, in which 21 European and Colonial clergymen, 90 Indian clergymen, 1 layman, 12 wives of missionaries, 14 single women, and 1676 Indian Christian lay agents are engaged, falls into three divisions.

I. The first division comprises the work in Madras, the Nilgiris, and the Wynaad though these are widely separated, Ootacamund being 300 miles south-west of Madras.

Pastoral and evangelistic work among Hindus in Madras is exclusively in the hands of a district church council, which is manned and, as regards pastoral work, entirely financed by Indians; but the Society has a divinity school and the Harris High School, and is responsible for special efforts to influence Mohammedans. It also co-operates in the new Christian College for Women, and to some extent in the Christian College for Men, in Madras. In the Nilgiris and the Wynaad the C.M.S. has several schools for boys, and a number of hill tribes are reached by the evangelistic work.

II. The Telugu Country stretches 500 miles northward from the city of Madras along the eastern coast of India, in some parts extending inland for 300 miles. About half-way up, near the coast, lies Masulipatam, the oldest station of the Telugu Mission; the other chief stations are Bezwada, on the Kistna, some fifty miles from its mouth; Ellore, north of Masulipatam; Dummagudem, 100 miles up the Godavari; and Khammamett and Haidarabad, both in the Nizam's dominions, the latter being the capital.

The chief educational agencies are a training institution, the Noble College with an attached high school, and the Sharkey Memorial Girls' School, at Masulipatam; and high schools for boys at Bezwada and Ellore. There are 41 Indian clergymen engaged in ministering to the numerous but scattered bodies of converts, who number 36,000 in all.

At Haidarabad the work is chiefly among Mohammedans; and at Dummagudem a few Kois are reached.

III. In Tinnevelly, at the extreme south of the Indian Peninsula a district church council with an English chairman, under which 43 Indian clergymen are labouring, is responsible for the pastoral work among the 71,000 Christians, and also, with the help of an itinerating band of evangelists, for most of the evangelistic work, the majority of the Society's missionaries being engaged in education.

There are a preparandi class at Palamcotta, a college and high school in Tinnevelly Town, high schools for boys at Palamcotta, Srivilliputhur, and Mengnanapuram, and boys' boarding schools at Surandei, Sachiapuram, and Dohnavur; while female education is provided for by the Sarah Tucker College and a boarding school at Palamcotta, the Elliott Tuxford School at Mengnanapuram, and boarding schools at Nallur, Sachiapuram, and Suviseshapuram. There are schools for blind boys and girls at Palamcotta.

The C.E.Z.M.S. carries on women's work at Madras and Ootacamund; at Masulipatam, Ellore, Bezwada, Khammamett, and Dummagudem, in the Telugu Country; and at Palamcotta (with schools for deaf and dumb boys and girls) and other places in Tinnevelly.

The following are the members of the Madras Corresponding Committee for 1916: The Bishops of Madras, Dornakal, and Tinnevelly, the Archdeacon of Madras, Capt. F. A. Barker, Hon. R. C. C. Carr, Major F. F. Elwes, I.M.S., Mr. E. S. Hensman, Mr. S. D. Pears, Mr. C. B. N. Pelly, Mr. W. H. Sell, and the Revs. C. H. Browne, W. E. Wood, and E. Langdale-Smith (acting secretary).

Consecration of Bishop Waller

THE Rev. E. H. M. Waller was consecrated to the bishopric of Tinnevelly and Madura in St. Paul's Cathedral, Calcutta, on 28 November, 1915. He went out to India at the invitation of the Committee in 1897, and was appointed vice-principal of the divinity college at Allahabad. Later on he became secretary of the United Provinces Mission, and in 1913 he was invited by the Committee to become a secretary of the Society at head-quarters in succession to the Rev. G. B. Durrant.

Madras Women's Christian College

Another important event of the year in South India has been the opening in June, 1915, of the Women's Christian College at Madras, in which, besides several American Societies, the Church of Scotland, the United Free Church of Scotland, the London Missionary Society, the Wesleyan Missionary Society, the C.E.Z.M.S., and the C.M.S., co-operate. Miss E. T. Stevens, whose services are temporarily lent by the C.M.S. to the institution, says that the students numbered forty—twice as many as had been anticipated.

Canon Sell's jubilee in the Mission

The Rev. Canon E. Sell has completed fifty years of missionary service, during more than thirty-four of which he has been secretary of the Madras Corresponding Committee. A good many of the Society's missionaries have served for fifty years, but few of them have been in charge of one of the larger C.M.S. Missions uninterruptedly so long a period as has Canon Sell. Archdeacon Buswell, however, has been secretary of the Mauritius Mission since 1877.

Deaths of Rev. D. Pakalapati,

The death of the Rev. Daniel Pakalapati, which occurred on 28 February, 1916, has removed one of the most prominent vernacular pastors of the Telugu Church. He was originally connected with the Raghavapuram district, but was afterwards transferred to the Bezwada district. He had exceptional influence.

Mrs. E. Keyworth, Mrs. R. R. Meadows, and Mrs. F. W. N. Alexander

Mrs. Keyworth, the wife of Mr. E. Keyworth, of Palamcotta, passed away at Kings Lynn on 28 August, 1915. A few months earlier, on March 27, Mrs. Meadows, widow of the Rev. R. R. Meadows, entered into rest at Hull at the age of 88; and on Nov. 18, Mrs. Alexander, widow of the Rev. Canon F. W. N. Alexander, died at Ellore, aged 85.

The Committee have accepted the resignations of the Rev. J. B. Panes, after thirty-three years' service; the Rev. F. W. Breed, after twenty-five years' service, and the Rev. A. R. J. Young; and the Rev. P. Samuel has been transferred to diocesan work in Travancore.

Literary work

The Rev. J. Cain contributed articles on some of the books of the Old Testament to a Telugu Bible dictionary which is in preparation.

I. MADRAS, THE NILGIRIS, AND THE WYNAAD

Madras

In the autumn of 1915 Mr. G. Sherwood Eddy conducted a convention in the Satthianadhan Memorial Hall, Madras, in the course of which he urged Indian Christians to give themselves more wholeheartedly to the evangelization of their country. As an outcome an evangelistic committee was formed with the object of strengthening the open-air work in the city, and seeking for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the Churches. Several members of the congregation of Zion Church, which is connected with the Madras District Church Council, offered their services as voluntary workers, prayer circles were formed, and a mission school was opened at Pammal. Fifty members of the preachers' association connected with Zion Church, which was formed in 1888, spent the last three days of 1914 in work at Poonamallee, thirteen miles west of Madras, and in June, 1915, about the same number sought to evangelize the heathen at and around St. Thomas's Mount. The district church council is responsible for all the pastoral and evangelistic work in Madras with the exception of the Mohammedan Mission, of which the Harris High School is an important part. There are about 350 boys in the school, nearly all of them Mohammedans. The general attitude of the Moslems towards the missionaries was far more friendly than in old days, and at the open-air meetings gospel handbills were in great demand. The Rev. Canon M. G. Goldsmith, who is in charge of the Mohammedan Mission, visited Bangalore where the Rev. L. Dhan Singh engages in work among Moslems, and in company with him undertook a tour to Shimoga, Tarikere, etc.

The Nilgiris, a hill district at an elevation of between 4500 and 7500 feet above sea level, with a large military cantonment, has an Indian population consisting of Tamils, Todas, Badagas, and Kotas. The Christians in the Ootacamund pastorate show an increasing desire to evangelize the district, and their contributions in 1915 were larger than ever before. Much the same may be said of the Coonoor pastorate, where a voluntary evangelistic band, composed of mission agents and members of the congregation, has lately been formed, and a new out-station has been opened at Kotagiri, in the centre of a planting district. The hill tribes who inhabit the Wynaad, a large plateau some 2500 feet above sea level, covered to a great extent with immense forests, number 50,000—Kurichers, Kurumbers, Panniars, Moopers, etc.; there are also Canarese, Tamils, Moplahs, and others who have migrated thither from the low country for work on the tea estates. The C.M.S. has four main centres, from each of which a large area is worked. The largest number of Christians is found at Manantoddy, where most of them are converts from the hill tribes, for whom an agricultural colony has been established. The work in the Nilgiris and the Wynaad owes much to the financial help of the European residents in the district, and to the kind attitude of the civil and military officials.

II. TELUGU COUNTRY

THE Bishop of Madras in a report of the work in his diocese says that a marked improvement has taken place in the spiritual life of the Telugu clergymen and teachers and in the moral state of many of the congregations. But he refers to the evil of strong drink as very common among the outcastes, an evil to combat which the Telugu Church Temperance Society has been formed.

The theological class at the Training Institution at Masulipatam, which was reopened in 1915, had two members, while there were about a hundred men in the normal classes. Examination results were disappointing. The Noble College has 284 students, twenty-five of them Christians, in the college department, and 741 boys, including sixty-seven Christians, in the high school department; besides these there are 472 boys in branch schools. Twenty of the twenty-three men who sat for the B.A. examination passed, but results in the intermediate examination were not so good. The number of qualified Christian teachers on the staff is gradually increasing. The spiritual side of the work is duly emphasized, and a former Brahman student in good position became an inquirer. The masters and boys subscribed more than Rs 400 to war funds during the year. There are thirteen pastorates under the Masulipatam District Church Council, with more than 7000 Christians. The Rev. Sambamurti Goteti, an Indian assistant missionary, reports that community movements appeared in one or two villages, but could not be followed up owing to the lack of agents.

Bezwada

The Bezwada district, which includes the greater part of the Raghavapuram district as well as the area regarded in old days as attached to Bezwada, contains 260 congregations, and in 1915, the Rev. R. W. Peachey, the missionary in charge, was called upon to superintend the Masulipatam district as well. He says that during his absence on furlough in 1914 the work in the Bezwada district was carried on almost entirely by the Indian clergymen and workers, and that their efforts were rewarded by 227 adult baptisms, and an increase of Rs 244 in the contributions of the people. Some of the Indian clergymen hold the position of assistant missionaries and are supported by the Society's funds, but most of them come on the funds of the Telugu Church. The assistant missionaries aid Mr. Peachey in superintending the work, visiting the pastorates, holding meetings for the agents, fostering the temperance movement, and so forth. One of them, the Rev. S. Pakianathen, who is in charge of the Bezwada and Jaggiapett sub-districts, speaks of there being a prospect of a movement towards Christianity among the caste people, of which it is imperative that advantage should be taken speedily lest the efforts of the Roman Catholics and non-Christian bodies should cause it to pass.[1] In the Bezwada pastorate, which contains nineteen congregations and about 1000 adherents, two village communities wished to place themselves under instruction, but it was impossible to supply them with teachers. The Rev. K. Philip, of the Putrela Pastorate, speaks of the Christians under his charge as being good and earnest, and reports the baptism on the same day of forty persons in one village after a probation of eight years.

Prospect of a movement among caste people

Boarding Schools

The Boarding Schools at Ellore for boys and girls received high commendation from the inspecting officers, and in the district a number of elementary schools, some of them caste schools, accomplished invaluable work. All the village schoolmasters are also quasi-pastors, each having charge of one or more congregations, preparing candidates for baptism and confirmation, conducting daily prayers and Sunday services, and engaging in evangelistic work as well. In the district, as in that worked from Bezwada, there are plenty of openings, but the lack of funds for workers makes it impossible to advance rapidly. The Rev. E. S. Tanner mentions one new centre where 146 persons have enrolled themselves as inquirers, another at which

Four new centres of work

139 have put themselves under instruction, and two others where forty inquirers have been enrolled. But he adds :—

The Brahmo Somaj in this district is active among the lower classes, starting schools for them, and trying to raise them socially. Moreover the British Government is doing more for the outcastes in providing wells, schools, and better and more sanitary house sites for them. The towns are continually increasing in population at the cost of the villages, the rapid rise and growth of factories draws the villagers more and more from their rural occupations. All this means that the present opportunity of winning the simple village peasant will probably gradually pass away.

Present opportunity likely to pass away

In the Ellore sub-district, under the Rev. E. Vedamanikam, an assistant missionary, the faith and liberality of the converts increased, and the temperance movement made progress; while in the Nuzveed sub-district a couple of new out-stations were occupied, and the people of village after village begged for men to teach them and their children. The Ellore Church Council, besides taking up new responsibilities and aiding the work supported by the general fund of the C.M.S., made a contribution of Rs 1000 to the Society at home.

A gift to the C.M.S.

Khammamett was the scene from October 19–24 of the annual summer school for the pastors and agents of the three societies—the C.M.S., the Indian Missionary Society, and the Sangareni Mission—which are at work in the Dornakal diocese. About 200 were present, and they pledged themselves and their congregations to evangelize thoroughly all villages and hamlets within three miles of their own during the next twelve months.[1] The Boarding Schools at the station, for boys and girls respectively, had more names on their rolls than in 1914, and the standard of education at the boys' school was raised. Much of the work in the district takes the form of seeking the edification of the large body of converts gathered in of recent years. Bible reading and study are promoted, self-support is kept constantly before the people, a co-operative credit society has been established by the Indians to enable the converts to extricate themselves from the clutches of the money lenders, and temperance is advocated with such success that in many of the 150 congregations in the district the men in a body have become total abstainers. More than 200 adults, including one Sudra family and two families from the criminal tribes, were baptized in 1915. Six adults were baptized in the Nadigudem and Lingagiri Pastorates, and a few caste people, Yarakalas (soothsayers) and Waddaras (tank-diggers) were among the inquirers.

Dummagudem is a lonely district, which has few visitors, but it had the privilege at Christmas, 1914, of a visit from Bishop Azariah, who confirmed about 130 candidates.[2] There is a useful lace industry which provides work for more than 600 women in their own homes, and adds materially to the funds of the Mission. The Rev.

J. Cain, who sailed for India in 1869, says that it is impossible to take advantage of the many openings which present themselves, and that there is great need of capable evangelists. The early evangelists have died, and there are none equal to them to take their places, for the younger workers know but little of the former religion of their parents, and their addresses have not the "grip" which marked those men who had been won from Hinduism as adults. While the Dummagudem district as a whole is isolated, Malkanagiri and Rampa form the most remote portion of it, being from eighty to 120 miles from Dummagudem, in a hilly country where there are no roads. For some years the Rev. G. Muttaswami has been in charge of the work in that region, and Mr. Cain bears warm testimony to his faithfulness in spite of the loss of his wife and children, and other trials in the shape of illnesses.

Haidarabad

Haidarabad, the capital of the Nizam's Dominions, and its suburbs, contains a population of 500,000, of whom half are Mohammedans. The Rev. G. E. Brown for the most part confines his work to the city, but in 1915 he was also called upon to minister to the 245 Punjabi Christian soldiers at Secunderabad, five miles from Haidarabad, and to 142 others at Begumpet, eight miles from Haidarabad. Most of them are Presbyterians, but the Church of Scotland has asked the C.M.S. workers to look after their spiritual needs. A good deal of caution had to be exercised in the evangelistic work in the city because of Turkey's part in the war, but otherwise no particular difficulty was experienced in connexion with it, while at Sharanpur, whither Mr. Brown went in the course of a tour, he was invited to preach in a mosque, and for some three hours had the privilege of addressing an audience numbering from 700 to 800. In the course of the year he brought out a number of Urdu tracts, one being produced every two months.

III. TINNEVELLY

Evangelistic meetings for students

After careful preparation, lasting for some weeks, in the form of prayer meetings, street preaching, house-to-house visitation, and so on, a series of evangelistic meetings was conducted by Mr. G. Sherwood Eddy in the C.M.S. Centenary Hall at Palamcotta in November 1915. On three successive nights the hall was thronged by between 2000 and 3000 persons, drawn from all classes and castes, who listened intently, hardly any one leaving his place until the close of the lecture. About 400 men gave in their names as willing to read the Gospel. Meetings were also held for women, and more than a hundred of them expressed their desire for further teaching.

More than 2000 candidates confirmed

During the vacancy in the see of Tinnevelly and Madura Bishop Azariah at the request of the Bishop of Madras spent five months in Tinnevelly, holding confirmations at forty-one centres, and confirming more than 2000 candidates. Thirty-five of the confirmations were held in the C.M.S. district, and twenty-one were in churches built by the people themselves.[1] There are now 71,000 Christians connected with the Tinnevelly C.M.S. District Church Council, and three of the circles in which the pastorates are organized are self-supporting. The pastors are responsible for the evangelistic work in the areas under their charge, as well as for the shepherding of their congregations, but very few of them have written an annual letter. In the Nalumavady Circle there was a good deal of trouble from the Seventh Day Adventists, who devote themselves to the Christians rather than the heathen. The converts take part in the work of evangelizing their fellow-countrymen, especially on Gospel Sunday, when after their own early service they spend the morning in preaching at places assigned to them, then hold services of intercession at noon, preach again in the afternoons, and finally, having returned to their own villages, ask for God's blessing upon the words they have spoken. The Rev. K. T. Arumanayagam, the chairman of the Vagaikulam Circle, mentions several inquirers, some of whom have withstood persecution; he also refers to two places where a number of adults were baptized, and speaks of signs of a mass movement towards Christianity. In their evangelistic work the pastors are aided by the Itinerating Band under Mr. E. Keyworth, who visited 120 towns and villages in the course of the year, sold nearly 4000 gospel portions, and gave away 30,000 tracts. Among the members of the band are usually one or more recent converts. One of them, originally a Mohammedan, who received baptism during the year, was the means of leading another Mohammedan and a Hindu to confess Christ in baptism, while a third man was brought to faith in Christ by his instrumentality.

Itinerating Band

The great majority of the Society's missionaries in Tinnevelly are engaged in educational work. Eighteen of the students in the Preparandi Institution at Palamcotta were sent up for the secondary examination for teachers' certificates, and sixteen of them passed; in the elementary examination twenty-nine out of the thirty-five who entered were successful. These good results led to an abnormal number of applications for admission; all the Christian students who applied were received, and then the vacancies were filled up with Hindus. One of the secondary training students and two of the boys belonging to the model school were baptized. One of the men, a pariah, died during the year; as far as most of the other students were concerned he was an untouchable, but when volunteers to watch by his bedside were called for there was no lack of response. Several baptisms of boys and old boys of the High School took place, and a Brahman, who was under age, underwent much persecution in his home because of his desire to embrace Christianity. The boys give one-twelfth of their weekly pocket money for church and other funds, and also support a boy in their own mission at Dornakal, and contribute towards the Madras hospital ship. While the high school is mainly for Christians, most of the boys in the Mary Arden School are Hindus; an old boy of the school who is now a teacher in it, was to be baptized in December. There are three training classes at the Sarah Tucker College, containing in all forty-six students, while the college classes are two in number. All the mistresses took part in the evangelistic campaign, visiting in the town and conducting lantern meetings. The old girls' association is now beginning work in a Christian village named Tuckerammalpurah, three miles from Palamcotta, near which is a heathen village called Rettiapettai, the plan being to send a band of twelve workers each week to teach the Christian women and seek to win the Hindus. A new chapel for the Blind Schools was dedicated by Bishop Azariah in July, 1915, and fourteen of the young people were baptized at the opening service. Two boys passed the government technical primary examination in weaving, making nine certificated blind weavers in connexion with the school.[1]

Tinnevelly Town

The pastoral and evangelistic work in Tinnevelly Town is under the district church council, but the Society has a College there with more than a hundred students, and an attached high school containing some 700 boys. The Rev. H. J. Schaffter, who has been principal of the college since its foundation in 1880 says that he has never known the classes to be so crowded or the fees to produce so much as they did in 1915. Forty of the students are inmates of a hostel for Christians, and many of them engage in evangelistic work from time to time. Mr. Schaffter was visited one day by a schoolmaster, a pupil of his thirty years before, who brought the good tidings that he was soon to be baptized, and that he hoped his wife and children would shortly follow his example.

Mengnanapuram

The High School for boys at Mengnanapuram prospered under a new headmaster, who takes the boys out for evangelistic work every Sunday evening. The Elliott Tuxford School for girls was carried on by Miss E. D. Langdale-Smith in the absence on furlough of the principal, Miss F. E. Thomas.

TRAVANCORE AND COCHIN MISSION

PAST HISTORY

The Mission in the protected Hindu States of Travancore and Cochin, which occupy a narrow strip of country on the Malabar Coast in the extreme south-west of India, between the Ghats and the Indian Ocean, was established in 1816 at the invitation of Colonel Munro, the British Resident. The metran (or bishop) of the ancient Syrian Church of Malabar, which claims to have been founded by the Apostle St. Thomas, had in 1806 requested help from the English Church. For twenty years the Mission was worked by Benjamin Bailey, Joseph Fenn, Henry Baker, sen., and others, with the object of benefiting the Syrian Church by encouraging and aiding it to reform itself. Since 1837, however, the missionaries have aimed directly at the evangelization of the heathen, thousands of whom have been baptized, while, as an indirect result of the work, a love of the Gospel has sprung up among the ancient Christians, whom the missionaries have urged to remain in and reform their own Church. Mar Athanasius, an old C.M.S. schoolboy, who was metran from 1843 to 1877, was an active reformer. Since his death a large section of the Syrians has become an autonomous episcopal Church (known as the Reformed Church of St. Thomas), which maintains reformed worship in the vernacular, holds annually a convention for the deepening of the spiritual life, and carries on evangelistic work; it has also sent missionaries to other parts of India to work in connexion with the Indian National Missionary Society, to the funds of which it contributes liberally. Allepie was occupied in 1816; Kottayam, 1817; Trichur, 1842; Pallam, 1845; Tiruwella, 1849; Kunnankulam, 1854; the Arrian Mission was begun in 1855; and the Alwaye Itinerancy in 1881.

The see of Travancore and Cochin was constituted in 1879. The present bishop is Dr. Charles Hope Gill.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

Of the stations at present occupied by the Society's missionaries, four, namely, Kottayam, Pallam, Tiruwella, and Allepie, are in the State of Travancore, where also is the Alwaye Itinerancy; while two, Trichur and Kunnankulam, are in the Cochin State.

The staff of the Mission consists, besides Bishop Gill, of 8 European clergymen, 5 missionaries' wives, and 7 single women. The Indian clergymen number 31, and the Indian Christian lay agents 716.

Some of the missionaries are in charge of districts and carry on evangelistic work at Trichur, Kunnankulam, Alwaye, Allepie, and Tiruwella. Others are engaged in educational work at the Cambridge Nicholson Institution (a theological college and normal school), the College, and the Baker Memorial School for girls, all at Kottayam; and the Buchanan Institution (a normal school for women) at Pallam. The C.E.Z.M.S. has stations at Kottayam, Ernakulam, Trevandrum, and Trichur.

The majority of the 57,000 converts in the Mission are linked with one or other of the 29 pastorates connected with 4 church councils, and the care of them appertains to Indian clergymen, with whom some of the European missionaries occasionally join in evangelistic work.

The missionary conference, of which Bishop Gill is chairman, is the local governing body of the Mission.

Deaths of Rev. P. V. Kallur,

THE Rev. Philipos Varkki Kallur, who was ordained by the Bishop of Travancore in 1899, and latterly had been pastor at Olesha, died at that place on 6 October, 1915.

Mrs. J. H. Bishop,

A former worker in the Mission, Mrs. Bishop, widow of the Rev. J. H. Bishop, died at Cambridge on 11 November, 1915. She was closely associated with her husband's work during all but the first of his forty-five years of service.[1]

and Rev. C. A. Neve

The Rev. C. A. Neve, another former member of the staff of the Mission, passed away at Haydon, Sherborne, on 3 March, 1916. He sailed in 1879 to take up the post of principal of Kottayam College. Subsequently he was principal of the Cambridge Nicholson Institution, and afterwards was in charge of the Tiruwella district for several years. He retired in 1913. Miss E. J. Neve, of the Travancore Mission, is his daughter; Mrs. E. N. Painter, of the same Mission, who died in 1882, was his sister; and in the Punjab Mission Drs. A. and E. F. Neve are his brothers, and Miss M. N. Neve his niece.

The Committee have accepted the resignation of Miss E. E. Dudley.

Literary work

Miss K. M. Richards translated Paterson Smyth's Lessons on St. Matthew in the "Bible for the Young" into Malayalam, and began similar work on Joshua and Judges in the same series.

Christian Congress

The fourth session of the Travancore and Cochin Christian Congress took place at Kottayam on 20 April, 1915, Bishop Gill presiding, and being supported by six bishops of the Syrian Church. The subjects discussed were: (1) "Christians and the Travancore Government," one of the papers being read by a man belonging to the depressed classes; (2) "The Present Condition of Christian Women"; and (3) "Home Industries."[2]

Conventions

Eight months after the meeting of the Christian Congress a series of conventions was held in Travancore and Cochin at the instance of the Syrian Churches, the chief speakers being Bishop Pakenham Walsh, of Assam, and Mr. G. Sherwood Eddy, Y.M.C.A. Secretary for Asia. The centres of the effort were Kunnankulam (Cochin), Kottayam, Tiruwella, Mavelikara, and Kottarakara, and the united committees at these centres consisted of representatives of all the Syrian Churches, the Anglican Church, the South India United Church, the Salvation Army, and the Brethren. At one meeting at Tiruwella there were 17,000 present.

Visitation by Bishop Lefroy

A memorable event of the year was the visitation of the diocese in September by Bishop Lefroy, of Calcutta, as Metropolitan of India. During the hundred years that India has possessed Anglican bishops, only six Bishops of Calcutta had previously visited Travancore.[3]

Fruit among the depressed classes

There are a number of outcaste tribes in Travancore and Cochin, chief among which are the Parayas and Pulayas. The Pulayas in the Travancore State numbered 185,000 in 1911, and the Parayas 70,000. These people are regarded as untouchables, that is, their touch or even propinquity is thought to cause contamination to a high-caste Hindu. Consequently they are obliged to get out of the road when they meet a caste man; they must not go nearer to a shop than the middle of the road, even though they wish to buy something; and they may not pass near a Hindu temple.[1] Work among them was set on foot by Ragland, the famous itinerating missionary in 1850, and since then they have been gathered into the Christian Church in large numbers, until at the present time of the 57,000 converts in the Mission, about 35,000 are drawn from these classes. The converts are organized in twenty-nine pastorates connected with four Church Councils, and are ministered to by Indian clergymen who are responsible also for the evangelistic work in the areas covered by their pastorates. They do not furnish any reports to the Society, and consequently it is possible to give little information as to the progress which is being made, beyond that afforded by the statistics which are supplied annually. Some trouble has been caused among the Christians by the active promulgation of their tenets by the Brethren, the Pentecostal Leaguers, the Salvationists, and others, and indigenous false teachers have arisen from time to time. During the last few years a heretical movement has been led by a Paraya, named Poykayil Johanan, who practically claims divine power, affirms that he has received a revelation which supersedes the Bible and without which no one can be saved, and has drawn many away after him. Two small out-stations in the Tiruwella district had to be closed in 1915 because the people had been led astray by this man's teaching, but there are signs that his influence is on the wane. Three leaflets designed to combat the heresy referred to have been written by the Rev. W. A. Stephens, and widely circulated in the diocese. Efforts are made by Miss L. A. Davis, a C.M.S. missionary, to band the women Christians together in branches of the Mothers' Union.

Church Councils

False teachers

The s ations on the Society's list number six, but at two of them the work is entirely educational. In four districts, however, evangelistic work is carried on under a European missionary with the co-operation of the Indian pastors whose head-quarters are in or near the districts.

Kottaya

The Cambridge Nicholson Institution at Kottayam exists for the purpose of training pastoral, evangelistic, and educational agents. The senior divinity class had thirteen students, five of whom passed the Oxford and Cambridge preliminary theological examination in the autumn; the junior divinity class had four members; and the normal students numbered twenty-seven, about one-third being Pulayas or Parayas. In November a special training class was instituted for teachers in charge of mass movement congregations, whose general educational attainments are too limited for the ordinary course at the institution. The men, twelve in number, are in residence from each Monday to Friday, and then return to their congregations for the other two days of the week. There is a hostel in the institution compound for poor boys from the villages, who wish to attend schools in Kottayam. The sudden departure of the Rev. J. R. Macvicar for England at the beginning of the year, caused by ill-health, threatened to disorganize the work at the College, but the Indian staff rendered good and willing service, and examination results were better than for some time past. This was due, in part at all events, to the new hostel which affords the inmates better facilities for study than were possible under the old arrangements. The school department is declared by the inspector to be "one of the foremost secondary schools in the State." Both college students and schoolboys showed real interest in the various Christian associations which are maintained in the institution.

College

Baker Memorial School

The Baker Memorial School for girls has rather more than 300 pupils. Six presented themselves for the school leaving certificate examination, and all of them passed. A number of the girls, together with two of the mistresses and five college girls, twenty-six in all, attended a schoolgirls' camp at Pallam, and afterwards six Bible study circles, conducted by the elder girls, were begun. Some of the children show much zeal for the conversion of their Hindu schoolfellows.

Pallam

Buchanan Institution

The training of women to act as teachers in the mission schools is carried on in the Buchanan Institution at Pallam, a few miles from Kottayam. The institution consists of two sections—the training school and the practising school, the former in 1915 with ten students, a smaller number than usual. The Travancore Government has lately issued an order that in future the course of training for elementary teachers is to be completed in one year. This is likely to be prejudicial to the Mission, for while such preparation as the Government requires may perhaps be given in the time, it is altogether impossible to impart to the girls that knowledge of the Bible which is of far greater importance than secular knowledge, or to accomplish that moulding of their characters upon which so much of their efficiency as mission school teachers must depend. A number of the students and teachers went into camp in September, and afterwards started a small prayer meeting among themselves, and also several Bible circles. A chapel is being built for the institution in memory of the late Mrs. E. Bellerby, who worked there for many years.

Tiruwella

The C.M.S. has two Boarding Schools at Tiruwella for the children, mostly of outcaste origin, of the poorer Christians. That for boys had about sixty pupils in 1915, two of whom gained government school leaving certificates and so qualified themselves to become teachers in schools recognized by the Government. At the beginning of the year three girls of outcaste origin who had been in the girls' boarding school were sent to the Buchanan Institution at Pallam to continue their studies.[1] A training class for teachers of depressed class origin, similar to that at Kottayam which has already been referred to, was opened at the station in November. Some evangelistic work was carried on in co-operation with the Indian pastor.

Allepie

In the absence of the Rev. W. S. Hunt on furlough Allepie, an important commercial centre, was without a resident missionary, but the Rev. W. A. Stephens, of Tiruwella, paid monthly visits to the town, and in September a four days' preaching campaign was undertaken. The audiences were good, the Mohammedans were remarkably attentive, and the workers were greatly helped by the presence at several of the meetings of the local stipendiary magistrate of the town who is an earnest Christian, and whose personal testimony to the saving and satisfying power of Jesus Christ made a deep impression. Nineteen adults were baptized at Karamadi, an out-station.

Impression made by a magistrate's testimony

Alwaye Itinerancy

In the Alwaye Itinerancy there are seven or eight fairly developed congregations, composed for the most part of the depressed classes who have joined the Church in families and in some cases in larger bodies. These people are very poor, but according to their power they contribute money and labour so as to provide themselves with school sheds. In all there are now seventeen out-stations, a new one having been opened in 1915 at Edakattuvayal, where a school has been put up in a little clearing in the midst of thick jungle from four to six feet high. The firstfruits were baptized at Purapuzha and Mamala, where work has been set on foot within the last two or three years, and also at Malaukara, another new out-station, where a remarkable incident occurred, which is thus narrated by the Rev. J. H. Osmaston :—

A remarkable incident

A certain poor woman who had been instructed in our school and was almost ready for baptism suddenly seemed to become the prey of evil spirits or demons. The catechist told us that whenever a Sunday service was held she would sit in a corner with her chin on her knees, and take not the slightest notice of what was going on. One day when Mr. Thomas, the catechist, spoke to her she, or the demons in her, replied to him telling him that there were seven of them and that they had previously been in possession of certain high-caste Hindus. When the Rev. T. J. Andrew and I visited the place and heard this we decided that if the woman came to the service on Sunday and behaved in this way we would try to cast the demons out in the Saviour's name. She did come and behaved identically as above stated. It struck me that if they were real demons possessing her and I were to speak in English they would understand, whereas the woman herself did not know a word of English. So, after a prayer, the words were uttered in English, commanding the evil spirits in the Name of Christ, if they were in the woman, to leave her and not return to her. The words were repeated three times, and the woman at once fell into a paroxysm which lasted a few seconds leaving her limp but quite natural and herself. She sat still for about five or ten minutes while we began the service and then she quietly got up and took part in the service with the others, "clothed and in her right mind." At her own earnest request, lest, as she put it, the demon should return to her, she was baptized that evening with three others.

Many of the depressed classes embracing Islam

Besides this work among the depressed classes, which is of great importance in view of the fact that numbers of them are embracing Islam, there is also that among caste people, carried on by the distribution of leaflets and tracts, by visiting them in their homes, by special lectures, by preaching at Hindu festivals, and so on. Mr. Osmaston was in touch with a good many young Hindu students, and he says that most of those who visited him for spiritual help and guidance had received their first impulse towards Christianity at some mission school or college.

Trichur

Baptism of a Nayar Brahman

Two old boys of the High School at Trichur were under instruction for baptism. In the evangelistic work the Rev. F. Bower was aided by a young Nayar of position who was baptized at Kottayam in the summer. He was brought to the Saviour by his wife, who though a Hindu loved the Lord Jesus and His Word. Her sudden death in 1913, almost immediately after beseeching her husband to read the Bible and love the Saviour, made a great impression on him, bigoted against Christianity though he had been, and from that day he began to read the Holy Scriptures. Bibles and scripture portions were asked for and bought by Hindus who a few years ago would not have accepted them as a gift, and there is reason to believe that not a few of them are secret believers in Christ. A young Mohammedan put himself under instruction for baptism, but met with so much persecution in consequence that it became necessary to ensure his safety by sending him out of India.

CEYLON MISSION

PAST HISTORY

Ceylon, which became a British possession in 1796, was one of the first fields to which the fathers of the C.M.S. turned their eyes. It was not, however, until 1818 that the Mission was commenced among the Singhalese and Tamils, the two races (with distinct languages) which mainly form the population of the island. For the Singhalese, work was begun at Kandy in 1818; at Baddegama, 1819; at Cotta, 1822; and at Kurunegala and Kegalle, 1880. For work among the Tamils, Jaffna was occupied in 1818; Colombo, 1850; while the Tamil Coolie Mission was begun in 1855.

The see of Colombo was formed in 1845. Dr. E. A. Copleston is the present bishop.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

The greater part of the pastoral work in the Mission is in the hands of Ceylonese clergymen, 28 in number, who are supported by native church funds; only two of the many district councils are now subsidized by the Society. Both the pastoral and the evangelistic work may be regarded as carried on in four sections, viz., in Southern and Western Ceylon; in Kandy and the Kandian Singhalese Itinerancies, among the Singhalese of the hill country; in the Tamil Coolie Mission, an itinerant mission among the labourers from South India on the tea and rubber estates; and in Jaffna, the peninsula at the north of the island.

I. The chief stations in Southern and Western Ceylon are Colombo, the head-quarters of the Mission, where pastoral and evangelistic work is maintained in both Singhalese and Tamil; Cotta, within a few miles of Colombo, and Baddegama, near the southern end of the island, where Singhalese is spoken; and Negombo, north of Colombo, where the work is in Tamil.

II. The work of the Kandian Singhalese Itinerancies is carried on in three districts, viz., the central, with Kandy as its head-quarters; the northern, worked from Anuradhapura; and the western, worked from Kurunegala.

III. The Tamil Coolie Mission has three divisions, namely, the northern, the central, and the southern, with their head-quarters at Kandy, Hatton (south of Kandy), and Haputale (farther south-east) respectively.

IV. In Northern Ceylon the chief station is Jaffna, near which are Nellore and Copay. All the work is in Tamil.

The educational work is on a large scale, nearly 25,000 children being under instruction in the schools. The chief institutions for male students are Trinity College, Kandy, St. John's College, Jaffna, and English schools at Cotta and Copay; and for girls, the Ladies' College, Colombo, and English schools at Cotta and Jaffna. Provision for the supply of Singhalese agents is made by means of a training class for catechists and a training home for Bible women at Kandy, while there are a hostel for male Singhalese teachers and a training school for female Singhalese teachers at Colombo and Cotta respectively, a training institution for Tamil men at Copay, and a class for Tamil women at Nellore. A training colony for male evangelists has lately been established at Peredeniya, a few miles from Kandy.

The C.E.Z.M.S. has work at Kandy and Gampola.

The work is carried on by a staff of 19 European clergymen, 2 laymen, 16 missionaries' wives, and 16 other women, with whom are associated, besides the Ceylonese clergymen mentioned above, 892 Ceylonese catechists, school teachers, and Bible women.

Serious riots

SERIOUS riots took place in Ceylon in May, 1915, and led to great loss of life. It was on account of both religious and economic considerations that the Singhalese mob attacked the Mohammedans or Moors, who occupy a position in the island similar to that of the Jews in Russia. The Mohammedans had protested against a Buddhist religious procession passing their mosque at Gampola, a country town twelve miles from Kandy, and their protest had been upheld in the law courts. They went on to boast that they would interfere with the great Kandy Perahera in August—the most important procession in Ceylon—and they did try, though in vain, to prevent the erection of a dansala, or booth, in Kandy for the free distribution of food on the Buddha's birthday, May 28. It should be explained that since Buddhists have no sacraments and no corporate worship a procession means more to them than to the followers of most other religions, and that the free distribution of food is regarded as a great opportunity for winning merit. These steps naturally aroused religious animosity, which was intensified by the economic hatred of the Moors, caused chiefly by jealousy because of their superior success as traders. The riots broke out in the early morning of May 29, when a mosque which had been specially aggressive in its objections to dansalas and processions was wrecked, and in the evening of that day bloodshed began.

Moslems sheltered by Christians

Nearly a hundred Mohammedan women and children were for a time sheltered in the compound of Trinity College, Kandy, and others by the missionaries at Colombo; all over the island old boys of the college did much to protect the victims, sometimes at great danger to themselves; while in several cases Christian village schoolmasters and others risked everything to save fleeing Moors. The Trinity boys, too, rendered great service to the Government by going in disguise to the more dangerous districts to find out where and whence attacks might be expected. In recognition of the services of the college the Government have remitted a claim of Rs 1000 which they were urging for past rent of its new cricket field, and of all the colleges in the island Trinity alone in this time of war and scarcity of munitions is allowed to retain its rifles.[1]

The Committee have accepted the resignations of the Rev. J. Ilsley, after thirty-one years' service; Miss C. E. Browne; and Miss A. E. Kent.

I. WESTERN AND SOUTHERN PROVINCES

Colombo

THE Society's Hostel at Colombo for Singhalese schoolmasters attending the government training college has eleven inmates, to whom Scripture teaching is given; it has been arranged that in future after completing his course at the training college, each student shall spend two terms at the training colony at Peradeniya. A second hostel was opened in 1913 for old boys of Trinity College, in which Bible classes are held for them, while they organize social service for themselves. The pupils at the Ladies' College did well in examinations, especially in music; they support an evangelist in the Tamil Coolie Mission, and their example is being followed in 1916 by the "old girls" of the college. The Boarding Schools for Tamil boys and girls at Borella, a suburb of Colombo, gained first class certificates in the diocesan scripture examinations. Classes are conducted for Bible women and school teachers, visits are paid to hospitals and the prison, and to plumbago sheds. Among the Singhalese women there were more pupils than in 1914, while among the Moors (Tamils) their gratitude for the protection afforded them during the riots made them exceptionally accessible. Nine men were baptized, many of them the fruit of the Tamil open-air work, and one Malayalam was admitted into the visible Church. Two adults were baptized in the Tamil Southern Pastorate, which has its head-quarters at Slave Island; and three persons in the Hultsdorf Pastorate, where also the convert, whose baptism at Kottayam has been reported in a previous chapter,[1] was first under instruction. The income of the Hultsdorf pastorate increased by more than Rs 300 in spite of the stress and hardships caused by the riots and the war.

Moors exceptionally accessible

At Cotta, where the work is carried on in Singhalese, both the second year students at the Women's Normal School who sat for examination passed, as did five of the ten first year students; one of the children and two former pupils in the practising school were baptized. The Girls' Boarding School was nearly full, notwithstanding the withdrawal of a certain number of girls whose parents had suffered financially through the war. There are also at the station two English Schools, one for boys and the other for girls. All the pastoral and evangelistic work in two of the pastorates is financed by the converts. Two adults were baptized in the Cotta Pastorate and a Buddhist priest gave up his robes and became an inquirer. In the Nugegoda Pastorate the people took little part in evangelistic work, but they contributed Rs 1000 towards a building for an English school which was opened with some fifty pupils, most of them the children of Christians.

At Baddegama, again, the work is in Singhalese. The Girls' Boarding School, which has about fifty pupils, forty of them boarders, gained a first class diocesan certificate in Scripture. Some of the children attending the twenty-four primary schools scattered about the district are under instruction for baptism. Four adults were baptized during the year and there were several inquirers; but all who would embrace Christianity have to face much opposition from their friends, and one man is mentioned whose children deserted him because he was under Christian instruction, and on whom so much pressure was brought to bear in other ways that he drew back. There are five out-stations in the district. Near Balapitiya the whole population of a village of eighty adults at one time showed willingness to accept the Gospel, but the proclamation of martial law because of the riots prevented them from meeting for instruction at night, as they were accustomed to do, and the idea of a community movement has been abandoned, though a good many persons are still being taught. In Elpitiya the old faith in devil ceremonies is dying out and the people are much more favourably disposed to Christianity than they were.

II. CENTRAL, NORTH-CENTRAL, NORTH-WESTERN, AND SABARAGAMUWA PROVINCES

Kandy

Trinity College

At the close of 1915 Trinity College, Kandy, had twenty-three representatives at the front or in training—masters, past students, or boys who were in the school when the war broke out—and four others were on their way to enlist. Some were in the Public Schools' battalions of the Middlesex and Royal Fusiliers, others in the Rifle Brigade, one in the Navy, and so on; two had received commissions, and several had become N.C.O.'s. Besides these there was one other, the school football captain of a few years ago, who had been killed in the Mediterranean by a German submarine. All the boys who went were Christians—lads who had shown grit enough to face the opposition which the public confession of Christ in baptism involves. Old college boys also subscribed more than Rs 6000 to provide passages for those sailing to enlist. Every day at noon war prayers are offered in the college, and though attendance is entirely voluntary nearly half the boys are present. These activities and the loss of some of the staff through the call of their country did not act prejudicially on the work of the school. All the three candidates who went in for the intermediate examination in arts of London University, and the four who sat for that in science, passed at their first attempt, and one of them gained a government university scholarship, which pays the expenses of the holder at an English university for three years; in the Cambridge Senior Local Examination four Trinity boys won the first four places in the Empire in book-keeping; and thirty-five candidates in all passed the Senior Local Examination, and twenty the Junior. The results recorded are the more remarkable seeing that eight years ago the college was put by Government on the lower scale of grants given to inefficients! In athletics and sports there are in Ceylon seven inter-collegiate competitions, in which thirteen colleges compete, and all the leading colleges have more boys than Trinity College; nevertheless it won six firsts, and in the seventh competition it was bracketed second. And last, and far the most important of all, six of the boys were baptized during the year, and also an old boy who had been holding back through fear of the consequences, while one of the prefects, a high-caste Hindu, declared himself a Christian and went away to earn his own living as his people were unwilling to help him. The social union, of which some thirty boys and eight masters are members, made frequent visits to the villages near Kandy, treating cases of sores and ulcers and teaching games to the boys, and also opened a school among some outcastes. In connexion with the Singhalese Work there is a Training Home in Kandy, for Singhalese girls, called "Mowbray," where some industrial teaching is given; two of the inmates were baptized in 1915, and eight others were being prepared for baptism. Visits were paid as opportunity offered to the villages in the neighbourhood, in several of which there were women catechumens. Two adults were baptized in the pastorate, and the Sunday schools increased the number of names on their rolls. The riots proved helpful to the Tamil Work. The Mohammedans showed great gratitude to the missionaries for what was then done in their behalf, and in all the houses which they visited the workers found a ready welcome and a desire to learn. A few girls live with Miss E. J. Howes in a home called "The Snuggery."

Training Home for Singhalese Girls

There was some lack of students at the Training Colony at Peradeniya in 1915; in the second term they numbered only five, and in the third term, as few men of the right kind for training offered, some young converts were taken to receive elementary instruction. In the first term, however, twelve men were in residence, six of them entering for a term's training after completing their course of two years at the government training college in Colombo. Dispensary work and practical agriculture are among the secular subjects in which the students receive instruction while in the colony.

Peradeniya

Training Colony

The Girls' Boarding School at Kegalle, where the work is in Singhalese, suffered through many changes in the teaching staff, but numbers were well maintained, two of the children were baptized, and two others were under preparation for the rite. Several women inquirers were under instruction in the villages, but more Bible women are needed if they are to be properly worked.

Kegalle

The Tamil Coolie Mission among the labourers from South India on the tea and rubber estates depends largely upon special gifts from friends at home and planters in the island. The war caused some of the help hitherto rendered to be discontinued, but on the other hand several subscribers doubled their gifts, and finally the income reached Rs 13,670—an amount almost equal to the largest since 1877. The mission consists of three divisions: the northern, with its head-quarters at Kandy; the central, worked from Hatton; and the southern, superintended from Haputale. The southern division is under the Rev. W. E. Rowlands. In the Northern Division there are seventeen congregations. Five of these are ministered to by a Ceylonese pastor, the Rev. C. T. Williams, and in the care of the rest and in all the evangelistic work the Rev. W. Booth has the assistance of a Tamil clergyman, and several catechists and schoolmasters. Mr. Booth speaks of the temptations by which the isolated workers are beset, living as they do in an atmosphere which "tends to relax the moral muscle," and of drunkenness and dissension among some of the Christians, but he hastens to add that there is abundant cause for thanksgiving in the practical Christianity of many of the converts—in their liberality, their diligence in Bible study, their maintenance of family worship, and their zeal in seeking to win others for Christ. A certain number of new converts are reported, but polygamy, the fear of relatives, and the pride of caste deter many from becoming Christians. In the Central Division there are three pastorates. Thirteen adults were baptized in the Avisawella pastorate, eight in the Dickoya pastorate, and twenty-four in the Rakwana pastorate. In the last named the people often make thankofferings on recovery from illness, for advance in wages, and so on. Besides the pastors there are many catechists engaged in the division, and they often have to endure much hardship. One speaks of being almost starving at times, and of inability on some estates to find any place in which to sleep, and another says that he has to pass through forests, cross rivers, and climb up and down steep hills, meeting now and again with wild beasts on the way. Seventeen adults were baptized on a cocoa estate, called Rosebury, in the Haputale district of the Southern Division, who had been won almost entirely by the influence and quiet work of the Tamil superintendent; and there were ingatherings also in the Madulsima district, where the overseer of an estate teaches individually those who are willing to receive instruction and gathers them together on Sundays for public worship. There are two pastorates in this division, namely, the Lindula pastorate, where four adults received baptism, and the consistent lives of the converts are commended; and the Badulla pastorate, formed in 1915, where three adults were baptized, and thirty-two new inquirers were enrolled, one of them a "pusari," or priest in charge, of two temples which on his conversion he proceeded to level with the ground.

Kandian Singhalese Itinerancy

The Kandian Singhalese Itinerancy, like the Tamil Coolie Mission, consists of three sections: the central, worked from Kandy; the northern, worked from Anuradhapura; and the western, worked from Kurunegala. The Northern Itinerancy covers a district comprising the northern third of the island with the exception of the Jaffna peninsula. Services are held at Anuradhapura in Tamil, Singhalese, and English, and at two other centres in Tamil, at one in Singhalese, and at three in English. Several backsliders were reclaimed, and four adults were baptized, one of them a Hindu irrigation sub-inspector.

III. NORTHERN PROVINCE

A four days' convention

UNDER the auspices of the Jaffna Christian Union, in which the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, the Wesleyan Missionary Society, and the C.M.S. co-operate, a four days' convention was held at Jaffna in August in the grounds of St. John's College. There was a regular attendance of 700 persons, and on the last evening some 1500 were present. Among the immediate results were a large number of offers of service.

Nellore

All the work at Nellore, with the single exception of that at the boarding school, is in the hands of the Ceylonese Church. Connected with it is a young ladies' guild, which raised about Rs 400 in 1915 for church work; there are sixteen schools; and two catechists, two readers, and five Bible women are employed. Regular visitation is carried on, and moonlight meetings are held at different centres. Two adults were baptized, one of them a student in the Girls' Boarding School which has about a hundred pupils, thirty-two of them Hindus. Several other Hindu girls are inquirers. Examination results in the school were good, but of the four members of the normal class who presented themselves for their test only one succeeded in passing. The industrial class serves to provide employment for girls who having finished their school course need the protection of a Christian home; it has seventeen members.

Girls' Boarding School

Jaffna

Two of the students at St. John's College, Jaffna, a high school for boys, were baptized, and more than twenty were confirmed, as were five of the pupils at the Girls' High School, Chundicully. There are more than 200 names on the roll of the high school, about one quarter of them Hindus, and the boarders number eighty-six; several girls who left the C.M.S. institution a year or two ago to enter a new Hindu school have returned as boarders. In the Cambridge Local Examinations the high school presented and passed more candidates than the other four schools in the peninsula put together.

St. John's College

Copay

The Rev. A. Matthias, who has retired after forty years of service in the Mission, reports the baptism of seven adults at Copay. The church committee maintains eleven schools, the expenses of which, as well as of the church, and part of the salaries of the pastor and catechist, are met from its funds. A dozen Sunday schools were carried on, and special evangelistic campaigns were held at several centres.

MAURITIUS MISSION

PAST HISTORY

Though geographically more nearly connected with Africa, the little island of Mauritius, on which the Society began work in 1856, is, in a missionary sense, a dependency of India. Two-thirds of the population (377,000) are immigrants from India, brought hither to work on the sugar plantations; and among these are labouring Hindi and Tamil-speaking missionaries. More than 7000 persons have been baptized, the majority of whom have died or returned to their own country. The diocese of Mauritius was founded in 1854. Dr. Gregory is the present bishop.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

The Society has an orphanage for boys at Plaisance one for girls at Rose Belle, and twelve other primary schools. Its staff (1 European and 4 native clergymen, 5 single European women, and 69 native Christian lay agents) also minister to the converts connected with the Mission, and maintain evangelistic work by means of classes, dispensaries, and itinerations.

Besides supporting the European missionaries the C.M.S. makes a grant in aid of the work on the island, which in 1914 was reduced by one-half, with a view to the gradual transfer of the work to the diocese.

THE work of the C.M.S. in Mauritius is now on a small scale, but it is said that there are many opportunities for reaching the heathen, and that the people for the most part welcome the missionaries and listen attentively. At the same time the fear of man is so strong that comparatively few have the courage to make open confession of Christ in baptism. Among the methods in vogue for influencing non-Christians are dispensaries conducted by the Society's missionaries at Quartier Militaire and Rose Belle, visiting the hospital and prison at Port Louis, holding classes and meetings, and so on. Four men were baptized at Quartier Militaire; three adults at Vacoas, among them an old Chinese who had long hesitated about taking the decisive step; three at Rose Hill, two of them youths at one time attending mission schools; one at Plaisance; and one at Rose Belle. Several inquirers were under instruction at the end of the year.

Few have courage to be baptized

Orphanages

There are about fifty boys in the Plaisance Orphanage. Deceit and dishonesty are rife among the lads, and much difficulty is met with in finding Christian teachers. At the Rose Belle Orphanage for girls, with between sixty and seventy children, an outbreak of beri-beri caused much anxiety for a time. Quiet days are periodically held for the girls, and former orphanage inmates are visited as opportunity offers. The Governor of Mauritius and Lady Chancellor were present at the annual prize-giving, and Sir John Chancellor expressed his appreciation of the work accomplished at the institution.

CHINA

The boundaries of China contain probably one-fifth of the habitable world; the population is estimated by some at 250,000,000, by others at 350,000,000, and by others, again, at a still higher figure. The chief religions are Confucianism, Taoism, and Buddhism; but the real religion of China may be said to be ancestor worship. The pioneer Protestant missionary, Robert Morrison, of the L.M.S., reached Canton in 1808, but he could only live there as an employé of the East India Company, and China was not open to missionary effort until shortly after the Treaty of Nanking in 1842. The C.M.S. began work in 1844, and the Wesleyans, Presbyterians, and several American societies at the same time or soon after. In 1865 the China Inland Mission was founded, and is now by far the largest of the 104 missionary societies in the country.

In 1913, Protestant missionary societies in China had a staff of 1941 men and 3013 women missionaries (of whom 1441 were wives); and 650 ordained and more than 17,000 lay Chinese workers. There were then 907 stations with a resident foreign missionary, and 6215 out-stations. The Chinese Christian community numbered about 356,000.[1]

At one time it appeared as though China would share in 1915 in what is now almost the common experience of nations, conflict with an external foe, for on May 6 the Japanese Minister at Peking presented an ultimatum regarding questions concerning Shantung, South Manchuria, etc., and required a reply from the Chinese Government within three days; happily the terms of Japan were accepted and war averted. But while China has been at peace with the outside world she has lately been distressed by internal conflict. The causes of it are probably manifold, but prominent among them has been the movement to substitute a monarchical for a republican form of government. That step, proposed, ostensibly, by some influential politicians who established a society to inaugurate a discussion as to the relative advantages of the two systems, was at first sternly discountenanced by Yuan Shih-Kai, though even then he seemed to hold out hopes that he might be induced to reconsider his judgment. Then, on October 10, it was announced that the State Council had passed a Bill providing for the constitution of a special body to pronounce upon the question whether China should continue a republic or become a monarchy. The character of this special body was such that its decision was a foregone conclusion, and on December 11, after some hesitation, Yuan expressed his readiness to acquiesce in the national desire for a monarchy, and arrangements were made for his coronation early in February. On December 26, however, the Military Governor of Yunnan issued a proclamation declaring the independence of that province; Kweichow soon followed the example of Yunnan; and in March, April, and May Kwangsi, Kwangtung, Chekiang, Kiangsu, Szechwan and Hunan in quick succession joined in the rebellion.

Reform said to be conspicuous by its absence

It is not surprising that discontent with the condition of China should be shown by its people. Reform is said to be conspicuous by its absence, and General Li Yuan-Heng, the Vice-President of the Republic, has declared that "there have been evolved a lawless equality and an unbridled liberty," and that "the virtues of fraternal love, honesty, propriety, and modesty are regarded as of little consequence," adding that the evils he laments have been decidedly on the increase of recent years.[1] The testimony of C.M.S. missionaries is to the same effect. The Rev. H. S. Phillips, of Kienning, expresses regret at the growing oppression and unequalled corruption which he witnesses locally. Archdeacon W. S. Moule, of Ningpo, states that Chinese say to him, "China's fatal faults are unchanged; her national virtues are for the time eclipsed." And the Rev. A. A. Phillips, the secretary of the C.M.S. Western China Mission, declares sadly that the "republican idea is thoroughly discredited." [2]

Religion in a state of transition

In religion as well as politics China appears to be in a state of transition. Only a few years ago reports affirmed that faith in idols was waning, that the grip of the old superstitions had been loosened and idols were being destroyed, that the foolishness of idolatry was being taught in government schools, and that the authorities had ordained that no special honours should be paid to Confucius.[3] Then came tidings of a swing of the pendulum towards Confucianism, of the President performing the sacrifices at the Altar of Heaven, of strenuous efforts to revive Buddhism, and of a recrudescence of idolatry.[4] In 1915 the ebb towards the old observances continued. Old temples and shrines were repaired and new ones built, and superstition was rife, manifesting itself in the form of female infanticide in some parts of the land, in idol processions and pilgrimages to famous temples.[5] But, strangely enough, all this revival of heathenism has been accompanied by a greater manifestation of interest in Christianity. Slowly perhaps, but nevertheless surely, it is making its way among the Chinese. The Chung Hua Sheng Kung Hui (the Church of China, which includes the Anglican missions of Great Britain, Canada, and the United States in the eleven Anglican dioceses into which China has been divided, and the fruits of those missions) had 153 foreign clergymen and 573 other foreign workers in

The origin and early developments of Chinese Religion were discussed by Archdeacon A. E. Moule in the "C.M. Rev." Oct., 1915, pp. 585, ff.

1914, while on the Chinese staff were 103 clergymen and 1666 other workers; the baptized Christians, 20,000 of them connected with the C.M.S., numbered 34,756, and in the year named 1980 adults and 917 children were baptized. The general synod of the Church met in Shanghai from 14 to 22 April, 1915, and formed a Board of Missions whose immediate task is the starting of a mission, to be manned solely by Chinese and supported entirely by Chinese funds. It was suggested that the province of Shensi should be the field of this mission, and it was decided that for its support a voluntary tax, proportioned to the number of church members, should be levied from all the Anglican Chinese congregations. A canon was also passed enacting that at least the third day of each synod should be devoted to the business of the Board of Missions. Another resolution, expressing the opinion that it would soon be advisable that a Chinese priest should be raised to the episcopate, found acceptance.[1] But the Anglican adherents only constitute about one-tenth of the Chinese Protestant Christian community. There are more than a hundred missionary societies in the country, among the chief being the China Inland Mission which celebrated its jubilee in May, 1915; it has more than 1000 foreign missionaries on its staff, and has reported 50,771 baptisms during its existence.

A Board of Missions formed

Figures such as these which have been given show that Christianity has already made substantial progress among the Chinese, while the succeeding chapters of this Report indicate that the present is in China a time of extraordinary need and of opportunity which probably will prove but fleeting. If the need can be met and the opportunity grasped the present statistics of Protestant Christianity in the land will seem but small at the end of a few years hence.

SOUTH CHINA MISSION

PAST HISTORY

Hong Kong was occupied by the Society's missionaries in 1862; Pakhoi in 1886; Canton in 1898; Limchow in 1902; Hokshan in 1910; Nanning in 1914; and Yunnan in 1915.

The diocese of Victoria, Hong Kong, comprises the British colony of Hong Kong, and jurisdiction in China in the provinces of Kwangtung and Kwangsi (south of the central branch of the West River) and those portions of the provinces of Kiangsi, Kweichow, and Yunnan, which lie south of lat. 28°. The present bishop is Dr. Lander.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

Four stations are occupied in the province of Kwangtung—namely, Victoria (Hong Kong), Canton, Pakhoi (south-west of Canton), and Limchow; one, Nanning, the capital, in the province of Kwangsi; and one, Yunnan, in the province of that name.

Chinese men are trained for ordination or as catechists at the Union Theological College at Canton, the C.M.S. students living in their own hostel, and there are Bible women's schools at Victoria (St. Stephen's House), and Canton. A middle school is carried on at Canton for Christian boys, for whom there are also boarding schools there and at Pakhoi; while for Christian girls there are similar schools at Victoria (West Point), Kowloon, Canton, and Pakhoi. There are also at Victoria a number of institutions not specifically for Christians, namely, St. John's Hall, a hostel in connexion with the University; St. Stephen's College, where a Christian education on modern lines is provided for the sons of well-to-do Chinese; St. Stephen's Girls' College, a similar school for the daughters of the gentry; and St. Paul's Anglo-Chinese School (for boys), where the sons of Eurasians and Chinese unable to pay high fees are received.

A hospital and leper asylum are maintained at Pakhoi, and a dispensary at Limchow. Evangelistic work is prosecuted in the numerous towns and villages of the large districts by both men and women missionaries.

The staff of the Mission consists of 14 European and 7 Chinese clergymen, 5 laymen, 11 missionaries' wives, and 20 other women missionaries; 4 of the above are doctors, and 2 are trained nurses. The Chinese Christian lay agents number 150.

Language schools

ONE of the developments in missionary work of recent years has been the institution of language schools in various parts of the mission field. Recruits in the Society's South China Mission availed themselves of two of these in 1915, one in Cantonese at Canton, and the other in Mandarin at Nanking. They speak most appreciatively of the advantages of such schools, not least being the possibility of giving themselves entirely to study, and the fellowship enjoyed with workers of other missions.

Death of Rev. T. Stringer

The Rev. T. Stringer, who was a C.M.S. missionary in South China from 1861–5, died at Portsdown, Hants, on 6 March, 1916. The Committee have accepted the resignation of Mr. H. W. Turnbull.

I. HONG KONG

Victoria

St. John's Hall

THE C.M.S. hostel connected with Hong Kong University, St. John's Hall at Victoria, had fifty-seven names on its roll in the autumn of 1915; eighteen of the students were baptized Christians, three of them having been admitted into the visible Church during the year. The new converts were formerly students at St. Stephen's College, a high school with about 150 boys, forty-four of whom are boarders. In the senior section of the Oxford Local Examinations three out of four boys passed, two with distinction; and in the junior section nine out of eleven candidates passed, with three honours and five distinctions. One of the boys also carried off the King Edward scholarship given to the best candidate in the Hong Kong University matriculation examination, provided he be a British subject and born in the colony. Several of the students asked for instruction in Christianity, and one was under preparation for baptism. There were about 150 applicants in the autumn for admission to St. Paul's School, a middle school, but many of them had to be refused as no more than 350 boys could be accommodated. Sixteen members of the staff are baptized Christians; one of them had a tempting offer of a business post with a salary of $115 per month, but he decided that it was better to work for God at $30 than for himself at $115. An old boy of the school, who at his baptism chose the name of Paul because, as he said, he had once been so bitterly opposed to Christianity, has been appointed a catechist by the local Church Missionary Association for work among the servants in European houses on the Peak. Several former pupils are on the staff of St. Stephen's Girls' College in an honorary capacity, and others rendered valued help in 1915 when there were fewer European teachers than usual. There are about 140 girls in the college, a number which probably would be much larger but for the high fees ($300 per annum) which are charged. The Christian Union in the college has more than fifty members, a large proportion of whom are girls whose parents prevent them from coming forward for baptism. An "Old Girls' Union" has been formed, which meets once a month for "philanthropic, intellectual, and social purposes." Seven candidates entered from the college for the Oxford Local Examinations; all of them passed, and two of them gained honours. In the West Point School instruction is entirely in the vernacular, and the girls therefore cannot sit for the Oxford examinations, but the government inspector reports that the institution is "thoroughly efficient." It has made rapid advance during the last three years, the number of pupils rising from forty-two to 200, and in 1915 for the first time required no grant from the Society. Most of the girls are from non-Christian homes, and three of them, having after long effort gained the consent of their parents, were to be baptized about the end of the year. The names on the roll of the Sunday school connected with the school rose during the year from fifty to 135. The C.M.S. has eight primary day schools for girls in Hong Kong or on the mainland opposite, with an aggregate of rather more than 300 pupils.

There are 125 children in the Victoria Home at Kowloon on the mainland, which is British territory; most of them belong to poor Christian homes but are not destitute children as used to be the case. The inspector's report describes the school as "thoroughly efficient." At Hungham several inquirers have come forward, won chiefly by the work of an earnest Christian man in Hong Kong.

II. KWANGTUNG PROVINCE

Floods

Canton and the neighbouring district were visited by disastrous floods in July, 1915. In some quarters of the city the people were obliged to take refuge on the roofs of their houses, and many fires were ignited through cooking rice on the matting placed over the roofs for coolness. Incendiaries added to the horrors of the position; and 10,000 lives are said to have been lost in the city by fire and water. Pirates thronged in from the country districts, and the boatmen demanded exorbitant sums for rescuing the people, while some even of the soldiers could not resist the temptation to plunder. A still further affliction was the necessity the people imprisoned by the floods were under of drinking the river water, impregnated as it was with sewage and full of dead bodies of people, pigs, etc. Liberal subscriptions were made for the relief of the sufferers, but the distress was widespread, the rice crop was affected, and contributions to native church funds diminished in consequence. The Theological Hostel for C.M.S. men reading at the Union Theological College had ten students. Holy Trinity School, a middle school for boys, has been separated from the training college. The Boarding School for girls, formerly carried on at Hokshan, has been transferred to Canton, and by the end of the year had sixteen pupils, most of them the daughters of Christians. The older women, inquirers and Christians, are cared for in a station class which in 1915 had about a dozen members, some of whom received baptism. House to house visiting was carried on in the city, but was more difficult than it used to be owing to a rebound towards Confucianism. Itinerations were made, not without danger from pirates,[1] in the district, in which there are a number of pastorates under the Chinese Church. Progress was particularly marked at Shekk'ei, where a junior branch of St. Paul's School, Hong Kong, has been opened, and where a Bible study class is conducted by a Chinese Christian woman who, as an honorary worker, also visits and teaches both Christians and non-Christians. At Taileung the non-Christian son of a church member who died without having redeemed his promise to give $200 to the church building fund, discharged the obligation entered into by his father—a somewhat remarkable instance of filial piety. Baptisms were numerous in the district and would have been much more so had not great care been taken to see that none were admitted into the visible Church save such as had been properly taught.

Pakhoi

The Society's staff at Pakhoi was sadly thinned by the departure of some of its members for the new work at Yunnan, of others on furlough, and of Dr. F. C. Plummer on war service; for clerical ministrations the station was dependent on monthly visits by the Rev. S. Wicks from Limchow. Fifty-nine persons were confirmed, including thirteen inmates of the leper compounds. Several departments of industrial work are maintained among the lepers, and some of them have lately been engaged in revising the proofs of the Bible in colloquial character. One crippled man who was offered a gift of money for what he had done in this way refused it saying that he had undertaken the work for God's sake and not for earthly remuneration.[1] The Hospitals had about the normal number of both in-patients and out-patients, and the pressure was consequently heavy on Dr. N. Bradley and Miss A. A. Bolton, but the latter happily had a couple of good Chinese nurses to aid her. The work at Kotak, three miles from Pakhoi, makes but slow advance, and Saicheung, a second out-station, has been closed for a time owing to the evangelist being unsatisfactory.

Industrial work by lepers

Hospitals

Limchow

A new church was dedicated by Bishop Lander at Limchow, once a strongly anti-foreign city, in the spring of 1915, and thirteen persons were confirmed. The Christians gave liberally towards the new building, and also raised the sum for the Chinese Missionary Society for which they were assessed by the Shanghai Conference, besides contributing towards the expenses of the South China delegates to that conference. Several persons were baptized, but others were kept back because of their unwillingness to give up Sunday trading. Among the inquirers were two members—mother and son—of one of the leading families in the town, who had been won by the faithful work of a Bible woman. More than 2000 different patients were treated at the dispensary, and some of them were led to put themselves under instruction. A new day school for girls was opened, and a Sunday-school class which was set on foot gained sixty members. Another new piece of work was an inquirers' class for the more intelligent women. The boys' school at Shekhong improved, and one woman was baptized at Sheunglok, where also four persons were received as catechumens.[2]

III. KWANGSI PROVINCE

Nanning

The Rev. C. N. R. Mackenzie's work at Nanning was greatly hindered by the ill-health of himself and his family, due to inability to obtain suitable house accommodation. He gave weekly gospel lectures to students, and joined with other missions in the city in evangelistic meetings. He was able to undertake a few itinerations, and in the course of one of them met a young English-speaking Chinese, who afterwards visited him in Nanning and eventually was baptized.

IV. YUNNAN PROVINCE

Yunnan

Yunnan, the capital of the province of that name, was occupied by C.M.S. missionaries in April, 1915, when Dr. H. G. Thompson took up his abode there. A little medical work was soon set on foot, but some difficulty was met with in getting a suitable site for a hospital,[1] and the missionaries had to ask the China Inland Mission workers among the Miao, Tesu, and other tribes not to send any operation cases. When the Rev. R. F. Lankester arrived in October, after spending nine months in the study of Mandarin at the Nanking language school, he called a meeting of some of the Chinese who had shown an interest in the work to consider the question of providing furniture for a church; thirty of the gentry assembled, few of them Christians, and contributed about £14 for the purpose. Mr. Lankester points out that the value of the gifts is not so important as the fact that having contributed makes it more likely that the donors will attend the services when the church is opened. Meetings were conducted in a room on Sundays by the catechist, about thirty men —all that the room would hold—usually being present, and some of them expressed a definite wish to become followers of Christ. One day Miss S. Beattie and Mrs. Upcraft, the widow of an English professor in one of the government schools in the city, had a noteworthy experience in a temple. Miss Beattie writes:—

> We distributed leaflets and hymn sheets among the crowd (it was a special day and the temple was filled with women), and finally they brought us seats. We sat down in that heathen temple with idols all round, together with the Taoist priest, a Buddhist priest, and two Buddhist nuns, and others who could read, and then we sang all the hymns on the sheet. First we read them, then Mrs. Upcraft explained them, and the priests and nuns joined in the singing, especially one set to a Buddhist chant.

Very little is being done in the city for girl students and women of the upper classes, but Y.M.C.A. classes for male students have been begun by some converts won by the Rev. W. H. Elwin at Tokyo. Another of them holds services for some men of the upper classes in his house at Pichitsai, a few miles from Yunnan.[2]

KWANGSI AND HUNAN MISSION

PAST HISTORY

Work was begun by the C.M.S. in the province of Kwangsi in 1899, when Kweilin was occupied. Four years later a forward step was taken by opening a station at Yungchow, more than a hundred miles distant, in the province of Hunan. Hengchow, north-east of Yungchow, was occupied in 1910, and Siangtan in 1911.

The diocese of Kwangsi and Hunan was formed out of the diocese of Victoria, Hong Kong, in 1909, and consists of the province of Kwangsi, north of the central branch of the West River, and that portion of the province of Hunan which lies south of latitude 28°. Dr. W. Banister, a C.M.S. missionary, was appointed bishop, and consecrated in the year named.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

The work in the Mission is chiefly evangelistic and educational, but medical work is carried on at Kweilin. The women's work in the Mission is under the C.E.Z.M.S.

The staff of the Mission consists, besides Bishop Banister, of 8 European clergymen, 8 missionaries' wives, one of them a doctor, and 4 other women missionaries. The Chinese Christian lay agents number 30.

Diocesan synod

THE first synod of the diocese of Kwangsi and Hunan was held at Yungchow in November, 1914, and was attended by twenty-three delegates, representing eight centres.[1] It resulted in a deepened sense of responsibility on the part of the Christians with respect to the work of the Chung Hua Sheng Kung Hui generally, and in a stronger corporate feeling among the widely separated units of the diocese. Although considerable advance has been made since the diocese was formed in 1909 there is still a great deal of territory unoccupied by the C.M.S. or any other missionary society.[2] Before the synod Archdeacon L. Byrde conducted a ten days' Bible School, which was attended by most of the delegates.

Women's work undertaken by the C.E.Z.M.S

Arrangements have been made with the Church of England Zenana Missionary Society by which that body undertakes responsibility for the women's work in the diocese. The C.M.S. women missionaries if not (as in the case of Miss E. Couche) transferring their services to the C.E.Z.M.S. altogether, will work under that Society though remaining on the C.M.S. roll.

I. KWANGSI PROVINCE

Kweilin

IN consequence of the capital of the province having been transferred to Nanning, several of the leading Christians at Kweilin, being in government employ, had to migrate, but in spite of this loss, there was an increase in the gifts of the Christians; a hostel for students was built which should prove helpful in aggressive work among that class; a new school for boys was opened, and a "goodly number" of persons were baptized. A Bible school for the mission agents was held in December, and attended by about a dozen workers. The work at the Hospital was instrumental in opening to the missionaries many houses in Kweilin, and also cities and towns at a distance; to which they could not otherwise have gained an entrance.[1] There was distinct progress at the three out-stations of Hingan, Giaishow and Tan-hsia-hsü, while at Dongchow, a suburb of Kweilin, on the other side of the Cassia river, a new church was opened.

II. HUNAN PROVINCE

Yungchow

THE Rev. P. Stevens describing the Yungchow district, in which there are three out-stations, says that if London represents Yungchow, Brighton, or rather ten miles out at sea beyond it, represents Taochow, Winchester is Chuanchow, and Reading is Tungan. There are no railways and no roads such as exist in England, and to reach the out-stations it is necessary to walk or ride in a chair carried by men. A Training Class for men was set on foot at the station, and had ten members, two being sent by the Wesleyan Mission, and others hailing from Kweilin. A normal class of two members was formed in the girls' school, which has about forty pupils; some of them would probably ask for baptism if they could get the consent of their parents. Among the classes conducted at the station were one for women converts and inquirers, some of whom received baptism during the year; another for heathen women; and a third for six men of good education who went to Yungchow for a few weeks from Ningyuen, a city two days' journey away, for the express purpose of learning about Christ. Their leader when visiting a friend in a mission hospital in another city, had been given a tract, and some time afterwards heard a voice telling him to go to Yungchow to learn the Gospel. At Chuanchow there are thirteen baptized adults, all of whom continued steadfast, and a small boys' school. Four people have been baptized at Taochow in the last year or two, and there are five catechumens in the district; while at Tungan, where an evangelist was placed at Easter, 1915, one young man is inquiring earnestly.

Hengchow

The Rev. and Mrs. T. Goodchild met with a number of trials at Hengchow. It was mentioned in last year's Report[2] that there were several applicants for baptism who were held back by their unwillingness to satisfy the conditions; one of them, however, did so, and it was arranged to admit him into the visible Church on Easter Day, 1915, but he failed to attend the service. Another trial was the unworthy conduct of one of the masters at the boys' school, which caused the attendance to fall off greatly; in the emergency valuable help was given by a young man, a former student in the school, belonging to one of the wealthiest families in the city, whose people will not allow him to be baptized. Two other youths from the school and four men were admitted to the catechumenate. Mrs. Goodchild held meetings for the women, and also set on foot an elementary girls' school, which had nineteen pupils by the end of the year.

Some special meetings, lasting for a week, were conducted at Siangtan, the port of Hunan, by two Chinese evangelists, one of them the secretary of the Student Christian Movement in China and the other a descendant of the famous general, Marquis Tseng. The meetings were held in the barracks which formerly had been a heathen temple, and were well attended both by the Christians connected with the various Churches in the city and by non-Christians. More than 1000 persons gave in their names as desirous of being enrolled in Bible classes, but eventually only one of the Churches was able to point to definite results in the form of increased membership. The boys' school has an average attendance of about seventy lads, fifteen of whom were either baptized or admitted to the catechumenate. Three of the elder pupils in the girls' school asked for baptism; as a result of a special effort to reach the mothers of the girls by means of lantern lectures on the life of Christ, some of them were led to attend Christian meetings. Evangelistic work in the city suffered from the continued inability to acquire a preaching hall on the main street, which runs parallel to the river frontage with its miles of shipping. The state of the congregation left much to be desired, while at Hotung, across the river, some distressing lapses occurred. Increasing attendances at services, however, suggest that the future is hopeful. At Anyuen, where a new out-station was opened, there were signs of growth, and nine men were baptized and twenty-three admitted as catechumens. At Nganyuen, a colliery town in the province of Kiangsi,[1] a brick church and catechist's residence were built. This is the first instance in the Mission of the Christians themselves providing a building for the worship of God. A resident catechist has been appointed, so that it will be possible to instruct the numerous inquirers, as well as carry on regular evangelistic work among the thousands of colliers.[2]

FUKIEN MISSION

PAST HISTORY

The Fukien Mission has a truly remarkable history. Foochow was occupied in 1850, and the first eleven years passed without a single convert appearing. Two out of five missionaries died during this interval, and two retired. The fifth died soon after gathering the firstfruits of his labours, leaving a new-comer, the Rev. J. R. (afterwards Archdeacon) Wolfe, in charge. Up to 1864 the work was confined to Foochow City. In that year and the following other large cities were occupied by Chinese evangelists. In 1866 the first two or three converts were baptized. Funing was occupied by European missionaries in 1882; Kutien, 1886; Loyuan, 1889; Kienyang, 1891; Hinghwa, 1893; Kienning, 1894; Ningteh, Futsing, Kengtao, and Kaosanshih, 1896; Lienkong, 1897; Sienyu, 1901; Hotung, 1903; Doshun, 1904; Sungki, 1906; Chungan, 1913; Fuan, 1914. In 1906 Archdeacon H. McC. E. Price, a C.M.S. missionary in Japan, was consecrated first bishop in Fukien. The province had previously formed a part of the diocese of Victoria, Hong Kong.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

The work of the Mission is carried on at Foochow, the capital, and at many cities and villages scattered over the northern half of the province of Fukien. Three of these, besides Foochow, are "fu" (i.e. prefectural) cities, namely, Funing and Kienning, north of the Min, the river on which Foochow stands, and Hinghwa, south of it. The other chief stations are Lienkong, Loyuan, Ningteh, and Kutien, north of the Min; and Futsing and Sienyu, south of that river. The Dublin University Fukien Mission largely supports the work at Funing and Fuang and some of the educational work at Foochow.

Besides the Bishop, who resides at Foochow, the mission staff comprises 21 European clergymen, 9 laymen, 22 missionaries' wives, and 50 single women. Of these 12 are qualified doctors and 12 are nurses. There are 20 Chinese clergymen, and 314 male and 380 female Chinese Christian evangelists and teachers.

The chief institutions are at Foochow, some of them in the city and others on the island of Nantai, in the River Min, where is the European Settlement. They include a divinity college; the Stewart Memorial School for Bible women; a women's normal school; Trinity College, consisting of an Anglo-Chinese school (St. Mark's College), a middle school (including normal school), and an upper primary school for boys; a boarding school for girls; a hospital and union medical school; and a school for blind boys.

There are also women's schools at Funing, Ningteh, Hotung, Futsing, Hinghwa, Kienning, and Lienkong; boarding schools for boys at Funing, Kienning, Kutien, Hinghwa, and Sienyu, and for girls at Kengtao, Ningteh, Funing, and Hinghwa; and lower primary day schools at a great number of villages.

Medical work is represented by hospitals at Futsing, Ningteh, Funing, Hinghwa, Sienyu, and Kienning, besides dispensaries at several stations. Work among lepers is carried on at Foochow, Futsing, Loyuan, Kutien, and Kienning.

A number of the women missionaries devote themselves almost entirely to evangelistic work, in which also the missionaries engaged at the institutions named above take part from time to time. The C.E.Z.M.S. co-operates with the C.M.S. in work among women at Foochow, Kienning, Kutien, Loyuan, and Sungki, and occupies a few other stations as well.

Forward evangelistic movement

MUCH of Bishop Price's time in the early part of 1915 was taken up with the forward evangelistic movement in China, to further which a committee, of which he is chairman, was appointed by the China Continuation Committee.[1] He regards the movement as having brought evangelistic work into greater prominence. In May he left China on furlough and at the end of August he sailed for the Dardanelles, having undertaken for twelve months the duties of chaplain to the Forces. During his absence Bishop Banister has held confirmations in Fukien, while a Chinese clergyman, the Rev. Ding Ing-Ong, acted as chairman of the diocesan synod in February, 1916. "He conducted the proceedings admirably," writes the Rev. Ll. Lloyd, "and evidently gave great satisfaction to all the members."

The Mission has lost its oldest worker by the death at Foochow on 2 December, 1915, of Archdeacon J. R. Wolfe. He was one of the most conspicuous of the many devoted missionaries given to the Society by the Church of Ireland. He entered the Society's College at Islington in 1857, and sailed in 1861. George Smith, then the only C.M.S. missionary in Fukien, died a few months after Wolfe arrived, leaving the newcomer in sole charge of the work and of the first half-dozen converts. From that day forward Mr. Wolfe was the inspirer and the leader of the Mission, and for half a century he and his wife, and in due course his daughters, gave themselves heart and soul to preaching Christ to the Chinese. He was appointed Archdeacon by Bishop Burdon in 1887, and in 1911 he was made a Vice-President of the Society—the first missionary in the field, other than bishops, to be awarded that distinction.[1]

Deaths of Archdeacon J. R. Wolfe,

Another well-known worker, Mrs. E. Saunders, passed away, also at Foochow, on 7 May, 1915. She was accepted by the newly-formed Victoria Church Missionary Association with her two daughters in 1893, and she had wished to accompany them to China, but financial losses obliged her to remain in Australia till she could arrange her affairs. Meanwhile came the terrible massacre at Hwasang. When Mrs. Saunders heard of the death of her daughters she devoted herself to such parts of their work as were in her power, and she renewed her offer to the association in 1897 and was accepted. During her later years, as she was unable to do outdoor work, several young men came to her house to study English.[2]

two boys from the Society's blind school in the city, who were admitted on special conditions for one year. Three schools combine to form Trinity College, namely, an Anglo-Chinese school, formerly known as St. Mark's; a middle school, including a normal school, in which Chinese is the medium of instruction; and a junior boys' school of primary standard. Many applications were made for admission to the Anglo-Chinese school in March, 1915, and some thirty boys were accepted, bringing the total number up to 150, about two-thirds of whom were boarders. The fees cover all the expenses with the exception of the salaries of the foreign members of the staff. Five of the students left during the year to enter St. John's University, Shanghai, and three others, together with two old boys, passed the examination for entrance to the Chinese Post Office. The students have lately started a night school for the coolies in the compound. The junior school has rather more than a hundred pupils. Eighteen of the Trinity College boys were baptized during the year, and twenty-two were received into the catechumenate. An old student also, who while in the school did not show any particular interest in Christianity, called one day on the Rev. W. S. Pakenham-Walsh, the president of the college, and informed him that he, together with his whole house, had been baptized. For women and girls there are the Stewart Memorial School, where Bible women are trained, and a Normal School. The latter, which was opened in the spring of 1913, has had the names of fifty-nine students on its books, thirty-eight of whom are now at work in schools in the province. In most cases they have returned to schools in which they were at work before they entered for training, and consequently they can hardly be regarded as supplying the great need throughout the Mission for new teachers. The students were much helped spiritually by a conference held in Foochow in the summer under the auspices of the students' branch of the Y.W.C.A. The Girls' Boarding School consists of a kindergarten, where the course lasts two years, a lower primary department with a four years' course, a higher primary department in which from three to four years are spent, and a middle school with a four years' course. The number of pupils in the middle school is small, partly because girls are still married while young, though in this matter an improvement is taking place, and partly because the need for trained teachers is so urgent that girls have to be sent out to teach before their own studies are really completed. Including the girls who while teaching are still continuing their studies there are 301 pupils in the school, a number forty in excess of the previous highest total. In March, 1915, the British consul distributed certificates to five students who had completed their two years' training for the higher grade teachers' certificate, and fifty-five who had passed either the higher primary or lower primary examination. The girls go out in turn three times a week to preach to the heathen women in the villages, and in the autumn they organized Sunday schools in three of the places which they visited. By means of needlework and self-denial they support two children in a mission school at Safed, raise money for the Chinese Church Missionary Society, help foreign missions, and aid in the supply of woollen scarves for the British troops, providing the wool by a collection among themselves, supplemented by some money sent towards furnishing them with Christmas presents. Twenty-eight of the girls were admitted into the catechumenate in 1915, thirty-seven were baptized, and thirty-two were confirmed. Good news was received of many of the old girls; eighty-three of them are now teaching in day schools or boarding schools, and during the year one was the means of leading her husband to the Saviour. There are six branch day schools, taught by old boarding school girls, and in these too a good work is done both in secular teaching and in spiritual matters. A hospital, of which the port doctor is in charge and the nurses are C.E.Z.M.S. missionaries, is visited by the C.M.S. workers, who conduct services on Sundays and on two evenings in the week.

Evangelistic work by mission-school girls

Baptisms

One woman in the Bible Women's Training School in Foochow Native City finished her training and took up work on the island of Nantai, and two others were expected to complete their course at the end of the year. Four non-Christians who paid all their expenses were admitted, and many others were anxious to enter. The Union Medical School had fifteen students, six of them connected with the Methodist Episcopal Mission, three with the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, one with the Baptist Missionary Society, and three with the C.M.S. The greater part of the scientific teaching is given by C.M.S. missionaries, and a daily Scripture class is conducted, while the men, most of whom are baptized Christians, also meet once a week for Bible study among themselves. The Hospitals for men and women have fifty beds each and were usually crowded. The number of out-patients also is large, and many people are treated in their own homes. The Chinese officials of the city made a donation of $500 to the hospital funds, while the military governor presented certificates to the five nurses, one of them a man, who in 1915 completed their three years' course of training. The spiritual work among the patients was exceptionally cheering; many of them became catechumens and one former patient was baptized. Connected with the hospitals is a Sunday school, which is attended by about 300 children, while many of the parents who take their children sit down and learn with them. Thirteen of the boys of the Blind School received baptism. The late President made a contribution of $2000 to the funds of the school, which also received gifts from the civil and military governors of Fukien.[1] New work has been instituted among the student, gentry, and official classes of the city, for which the Rev. A. W. R. Norton has been set apart. The evangelistic campaign of 1914 under Mr. Sherwood Eddy's leadership,[2] and the popularity of the Y.M.C.A., of which quite a number of leading men, including the civil governor of the province, are associate members, have made these classes very accessible, and Mr. Norton was able to get into touch with a good many influential men, including an ex-mandarin and the headmaster of the government agricultural school. Under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. some special evangelistic meetings for women were held in November, as a result of which seventy-two women began to attend Bible classes. A couple of women were baptized at Mingangdeng, and one, on her death-bed, at another out-station. The people in the district around Doshun, ten miles from Foochow City, are friendly towards the missionaries, and it is probable that the dispensary work has something to do with their attitude. There has been a great reversion to idolatry in recent years, but still converts come out by ones and twos, and in 1915 several families in the district threw away their idols,[3] and at Siongga eight women were baptized, and also a literary man who tries to influence his former friends and the boys in his school for Christ.

Work among the gentry

Doshun

Two of the eighty pupils at the Girls' Boarding School at Lienkong were admitted to the catechumenate, but the conduct of some of the elder girls caused anxiety. A steady stream of patients visited the Dispensary, which is superintended from Foochow, and one of them received baptism, while another entered the station class. Day schools are carried on in the city and at Dengdoi, and a new one was opened at Wonggie.

Lienkong

The Loyuan district suffered from there being no unmarried woman at the station to devote herself to evangelistic work. While there were plenty of opportunities for preaching the Gospel at certain seasons when the people were at leisure, it was difficult at other times for even a foreigner to get together a group to listen to his message. The constant struggle for existence in which the Christians are engaged makes it hard for them to meet for systematic instruction, and in consequence many of them are woefully ignorant concerning even the fundamentals of Christianity. During the last two or three years the number of catechumens in the district has fallen off.

The Women's School at Ningteh could not be reopened by Miss M. de C. Boileau on her return from furlough, in consequence of Miss J. C. Clarke's departure for England and the necessity of carrying on the Girls' Boarding School. Two of the children gained higher grade certificates, and one was under preparation for baptism and five for confirmation. The Women's Hospital had more in-patients but fewer out-patients than in 1914. Sunday-school work received an impetus from a visit by the secretary of the China Sunday School Union for the province, and four such schools for heathen children were opened. Various meetings were held in the city for the benefit of the Christian women, but with the small staff little could be done in the way of visiting the converts in the district. They cause some anxiety, for the observance of Sunday is the exception rather than the rule among them, girls are betrothed by their parents to heathen, and additions to the Church are rare. Two women, however, received baptism. The work in and around Hotung has always been uphill, and the people though ready to listen to the Gospel are slow to accept it. Sometimes there is active opposition to Christianity, and one woman is mentioned who if she finds that any of her neighbours are beginning to show an interest in Christianity tells them that as worshippers of God they will meet with many troubles which they would otherwise escape. Three of the students at the women's school were baptized, and the son of one of them. This woman was once a strong opponent of Christianity, but was softened by the kindness shown to her by Christians. Another of the women baptized was very ill some two or three years ago with malignant small-pox, and once or twice it was thought that she had passed away; when she ultimately recovered her non-Christian relatives told her that she was a "resurrected" person and must become a Christian, since God had certainly raised her from the dead for some purpose. A Sunday school was set on foot at Hotung, and was the means of influencing some parents as well as children, and day schools were opened at two new centres.

The Boys' Boarding School at Funing had more than seventy names on its roll, a larger number than ever before. In the last five or six years efforts to induce parents to pay fees for their sons' education have been crowned with success, and all the boarders, with the exception of about half a dozen, now defray the expenses of their keep, and pay for their books as well. Progress in that respect has been made also at the Girls' Boarding School, which has sixty-eight boarders and sixteen day pupils. Some of the girls entered the C.M.S. normal school at Foochow, and one went to the kindergarten training school of the C.E.Z.M.S. at Kutien. The pupils make good progress intellectually, but are slow to attain to the Christian standard of truthfulness and sincerity. The Women's School was reopened after remaining closed for a year. Many of the students were formerly patients at the Women's Hospital, and several of them were baptized during the year. One of them had first been brought into contact with Christianity at the hospital fifteen years before. For some months the number of patients was greatly reduced in consequence of the death of one of the maternity patients; the private wards were almost empty, and the number entering the general wards was also considerably lessened, but before the year closed the scare seemed to have died away. Some medical itinerations were undertaken in the spring of 1915 by the staff of the Men's Hospital.[1] Bible classes were conducted for those who gave in their names at the time of the Eddy evangelistic meetings as desirous of studying the Bible, and though many of the men and women failed to persevere others seemed to be in earnest. The Rev. J. Curtis held two classes each Sunday afternoon, one for boys from the government middle school and the other for masters in government schools and other reading men; the attendance at these rose as high as twenty-six and twenty-one respectively, but the average number present was a good deal smaller. Mr. Curtis says that the work is waiting for the "development of a keen evangelistic spirit" in the Church as distinct from the Mission, but he also mentions as a hopeful sign the increased liberality of the converts. The missionaries at Fuan, which was first occupied in 1914, were brought into touch with a large number of people in a rather remarkable way. It appears that the house in which they live was formerly occupied by a woman medium, who when it was bought by the Mission moved to another house near at hand. She had a wide circle of clients, and most of them after consulting her went on to the mission house, where more than 4000 visitors were received in six months. Two of the four women in the station class asked for baptism. The girls' school, at which a small fee is charged, grew until there were twenty-nine names on the roll. As most of the people of Fuan are well-to-do, it was determined to make a new venture, and open a school for upper class women, called the "Western Learning Class." It now has four pupils, who pay for their board or else arrange for their own food, and also pay fees for tuition. They learn all ordinary subjects, including physiology and hygiene, and can be taught English and music also for an extra fee, and they are said to work well and to be very keen on their scripture lesson.

A long drought diminished the number of patients at the Hospital at Futsing where five women were baptized, who had first been influenced for Christ by the medical work.[2] There were twenty-six students in the Training School for Nurses, six of whom obtained their certificates early in 1915. Several members of the station class, besides the converts just mentioned as having been won at the hospital, were baptized. At Kengtao the pupils at the Girls' Boarding School advanced in their studies and also gave valued help by visiting on Sunday afternoons and teaching in the Sunday school. The latter branch of work made a distinct forward movement, and in one village the school had the names of eighty children on its roll, most of them belonging to heathen families. The work in the villages, 140 of which, as well as thirteen out-stations, were visited by Miss E. Mort during the year, was full of encouragement. The people in some thirty houses gave up their idols and became inquirers, three of the houses being in a village where at one time the work seemed so hopeless that the missionaries thought of ceasing to persevere with it.[1] There is a Dispensary at Kaosanshih, worked as a branch from the Futsing hospital, which is much appreciated by the people. Kaosanshih is a market town, and many of the country folk, after taking their goods to market, visit the dispensary for their own ailments, or to get medicine for members of their families. More than 8000 patients, new and old, were registered in the course of the year. The Women's School has never quite regained the ground it lost when it was suddenly disbanded at the time of the revolution, but it had twelve pupils in 1915. As at several other stations Sunday-school work was developed, three or four new schools being opened in the district.

Last year's Report [2] spoke of a marked movement towards Christianity in the Hinghwa district, and the Rev. S. J. Nightingale, the superintending missionary, says that as he looks back over 1915 he finds every reason to "keep praising all the time." The Boys' Boarding School was full to overflowing, and ten of the boys and two of the teachers received baptism; at the Girls' Boarding School ten of the pupils were confirmed, baptisms take place every year, and twenty girls received certificates in the presence of the chief officials of the city and the heads of the government schools; more patients were admitted to the Men's Hospital than in 1914, and the Chinese doctors were "beyond all praise"; at the Women's Hospital, which was generally full, the Chinese nurses acquitted themselves well; the Sunday schools connected with the hospitals each had an attendance of between 100 and 200 children; and the general work appears to have been equally prosperous with that carried on at the institutions. More than a hundred persons were confirmed; a series of special meetings held in the city was a means of blessing to many of the catechists, schoolmasters, Bible women, and others; services and Bible classes were attended by "crowds," Mr. Nightingale says; and the zeal of many of the converts was shown by an incident which he thus describes:—

> Bishop Price encouraged the Christians to try and collect $1000 for the boys' boarding school fund, and promised if they did so to use his influence to get help from C.M.S. About five men gave most of their summer vacations to this work and visited the different church centres with the result that more than $7000 has been promised and nearly $4000 paid. They have decided to begin the foundations, but more than $12,000 are necessary to complete the school and equip it.

Two government schools allowed the mission workers to teach St. Mark's Gospel to the boys. In the Putien district six new centres were opened, and so many people attended the services that part of a wall of the building used as a church had to be removed and an awning spread over the courtyard so as to provide more accommodation.[1] Such is a brief record of what Mr. Nightingale well calls a "wonderful year." The success of the work appears to have aroused the heathen, for idol processions were on a larger scale than for some years past.[2] Sienyu was left without a European missionary, but the Chinese pastor maintained the work, and a station class was conducted by a Bible woman.

There were fewer men patients in the Hospital at Kienning than in 1914, owing, it is thought, to the greater facilities for getting opium, and consequently to fewer people being desirous of breaking off the opium habit. Several patients were admitted to the catechumenate, and others who had been in the hospital but had returned to their homes were found to be witnessing for Christ among their own people. A village which at one time was opposed to Christianity was opened to the mission workers by the influence of a former hospital patient. Most of the boys in the Boarding School are the sons of Christians, but two lads from non-Christian families of fairly good position were admitted during the year. The Bible classes set on foot in Kienning after the Eddy evangelistic meetings dwindled away, but at Sungki and Ciongbau many people were anxious for Christian teaching, and at places where there are as yet no churches a marked readiness to listen to the Gospel was shown. The Rev. C. W. Reeves reports advance in five of six congregations in the Kienyang pastorate. In the city few of those who promised to study the Bible at the time of the evangelistic meetings persevered, but there was encouragement in the fact that the masters of three non-Christian schools allowed the catechist to give Bible lessons to their pupils, with the result that one of the masters became a catechumen, and another at the end of the year seemed likely soon to follow his example. At Cudonggai the Christians have suffered a good deal of persecution but nevertheless the church is crowded out. Mr. Reeves writes :—

> A large number of men come in every Sunday from these villages. Some of them have to start before daylight to get in for the morning service, and they arrive home late at night. For those coming from a distance the Christians of the place prepare dinner in a large shed adjoining the church, for which the visitors pay a little; this is done to save them going to the streets to buy their dinner on Sunday. Sometimes there will be more than a hundred who have their dinner in this way, wait until the afternoon service is over, and then return to their homes, carrying with them something of the light and knowledge of Jesus. In visiting in this district I have been astonished to find what a large number of families have put away their idols. In many of the houses large texts of Scripture have been put up in the place usually occupied by the idols.

Twelve men were admitted to the catechumenate at Shuichui, and in the large market town of Ciangkau audiences of between 600 and 700 men gathered for the evening meetings during a four days' evangelistic campaign. The dispensary at Chungan has been the means of bringing several influential families into touch with Christian teaching. Another effective branch of the work is a class for children of the gentry, which is attended by two nephews of a mandarin, and has led at least one of the parents to attend services. Visits were paid to some of the upper classes. Miss E. Nettleton writes as follows of her experience on one occasion :—

Chungan

Visits to upper class houses

A son of the family gave us a warm welcome. He sat with his mother and sisters and listened to the preaching of the Good News. Not very long ago he studied in Japan. I found out that he knows Mr. Elwin and often went to his house. He brought out a Chinese New Testament bought in Japan, and told us that he prayed to God every day. Two days ago he, his mother, his wife, and two of his sisters came to see us. It so happened that some ladies from another upper-class family were here when they came. Before our guests departed we all adjourned to the guest hall where we sang some hymns and had a little talk about some of them. Just as they were about to leave Mr. Cu came forward and said, "I invite Miss Nettleton to pray." There was perfect silence during the prayer.

While efforts were thus made to reach the upper classes, the poor had the Gospel preached to them by means of weekly evangelistic meetings for women and meetings for children. Two reading men and a family of seven persons were baptized during the year.

CHEKIANG MISSION

PAST HISTORY

China, north of lat. 28°, became the sphere of a separate episcopal jurisdiction, "North China," in 1872, Dr. Russell, of the C.M.S., being the first bishop, and residing in Ningpo. In 1880, after his death, the diocese was divided into two, North and Mid China, and Dr. G. E. Moule, of the C.M.S., became bishop of the latter see; he retired in 1907, and was succeeded in the following year by Dr. H. J. Molony. The Protestant Episcopal Church of America appointed a missionary bishop to China in 1844, who reached Shanghai with a band of missionaries in the following year. In 1908 by an agreement with the American bishops, the province of Chekiang, was recognized as Dr. Molony's sphere of episcopal jurisdiction, and his title was changed to "Bishop in Chekiang." The first C.M.S. missionaries reached China in 1844, and Shanghai was occupied in 1845; Ningpo, 1848; Hangchow, 1865; Shaohing, 1870; Taichow and Chuki, 1892; Tunglu, 1913. In the earlier years of the Mission much success was, by the divine blessing, achieved in the numerous towns and villages around Ningpo. Later, in 1877, the Gospel was introduced under striking circumstances into the Chuki district from Hangchow, and again in 1886 into the district of Taichow from Ningpo.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

Excepting at Shanghai, in the province of Kiangsu, the commercial metropolis of China (where the Society has an Anglo-Chinese school for non-Christian boys and several day schools, and also maintains general evangelistic work and work among women), the operations of the Mission are carried on in the province of Chekiang. Ningpo, one of the first five ports in China to be thrown open to foreign trade, and Hangchow, another treaty port, are the chief stations, the others being Taichow, to the south of Ningpo, and Shaohing, Chuki, and Tunglu, east, south-east, and south-west respectively of Hangchow.

The more important educational institutions are Trinity College (with its theological class and normal school) and a women's school, at Ningpo; Bible women's classes at Shaohing and Taichow; a higher elementary school at Shaohing; and the Mary Vaughan High School for girls at Hangchow.

Medical work is represented by hospitals at Hangchow, Taichow, and Ningpo. In connexion with the Hangchow hospital there are a lepers' home, maternity home, etc.

The European staff of the Mission consists of Bishop Molony, 16 other clergymen, 12 laymen, 26 missionaries' wives and 28 other women missionaries; 6 of the above are doctors and 6 are nurses engaged at the mission hospitals. There are also 26 Chinese clergymen, and 175 Chinese Christian lay agents. The Chinese Church Missionary Society has an ordained missionary and two lay evangelists in the Hangchow district.

Diocesan synod

THE synod of the diocese of Chekiang met at Ningpo in November, 1915, under the presidency of Bishop Molony; unhappily his ill-health prevented him from attending all the sessions, and in his absence Archdeacon Sing Tsae-Seng was in the chair. Including the Bishop thirty-three clergymen and thirty-two lay delegates were present. Steps were taken to develop Sunday-school work, and a diocesan board of missions was established.[1]

There are 110 congregations in the diocese with 5400 church members, and the collections for the year amounted to $5680. Since the grants from the C.M.S. towards pastorate expenses were $1038, it is clear that self-support is making progress.

The death has occurred of Miss E. M. Read who passed away in London on 13 August, 1915. She joined the Mission in 1905, and was stationed at Chuki. In July, 1914, the state of her health obliged her to return to England. Death of Miss E. M. Read

The Committee have accepted the resignations of Dr. B. Score Browne and Miss M. E. Turnbull.

During the year under review two of the Chinese clergy left Chekiang for C.M.S. work elsewhere, the Rev. Fong Ling Seng volunteering, in answer to an appeal from Bishop Banister, for work in the diocese of Kwangsi-Hunan, and the Rev. Yü Hyien-Ding giving up the important position of pastor of Hangchow to join in the work among Chinese students in Tokyo. In each case a better salary was offered than is given in Chekiang, but Bishop Molony is confident that there was a strong desire in the heart of both men to preach the Gospel in the regions beyond. Both clergymen are working zealously and acceptably in their new spheres.

Mr. A. J. H. Moule continued the translation of Edersheim's "Bible History" into Chinese, and has now reached the seventh volume. In consequence of the added risk to the mails from submarines a careful copy has to be made of the MSS. before sending them out to China. Literary work

Owing to the difficulty of securing adequate English teaching, the higher elementary boys' schools in the Mission, a most important section of the general educational scheme for the Christian Church, have of late hardly held their ground. The schools of this character at Ningpo, Hangchow, and Taichow, and the Anglo-Chinese School at Shaohing have consequently been closed, and all the higher elementary education in the Mission has been concentrated at Shaohing. Educational changes in the Mission

I. KIANGSU PROVINCE

THE Anglo-Chinese School at Shanghai, which is not directly under the Society, but under trustees, of whom the secretary of the Mission is one, aims at fitting its pupils for positions in the customs, the railway service, and business houses. The number of boys is 175, and some of the class-rooms are rather overcrowded. Shanghai

II. CHEKIANG PROVINCE

Trinity College, Ningpo, consists of several departments—a theological class with eleven students, a normal class with seven students, and a middle school with forty boys; at the beginning of 1915 there was also a higher elementary school, but the boys removed to Shaohing in the autumn. The classical master at the Ningpo Trinity College college received baptism during the year. There were about twenty pupils in the Women's School for each of the three months' terms, and nine of those who were attending at the end of 1914 were baptized. Immediately after the Chinese New Year a school lasting for one month only is held for the benefit of those who cannot afford to be away from home longer; it was attended in 1915 by twenty women, nearly all of them inquirers, of ages ranging from 61 to 14. The girls' boarding school, to which the name of St. Catharine's has been given, has between sixty and seventy pupils. Most of them have Christian relatives, but a few non-Christian girls are admitted; one of these received baptism, three others were being prepared for the rite, and one other wished to be prepared, but her parents would not give their consent. The girls raised $60 for the Chinese C.M.S. by means of a little sale of work. On the departure of Dr. A. F. Cole on furlough, the professional work at the Hospital was undertaken by Dr. E. G. Sugg, the port doctor, while the financial and evangelistic control of the institution was placed in the hands of the Rev. H. Barton. The hospital was very full, patients even having to sleep on the floor, and two former patients received baptism. An effort to enlist the practical sympathy and support of the local officials and gentry met with success, the Taoyin (city magistrate) subscribing $50, and ten others giving $30 each. The Taoyin and his son, it is interesting to note, as well as the relatives of other officials, have themselves experienced the benefit of the hospital treatment. The pastorates connected with the Ningpo Church Council are said to have advanced in membership, self-reliance, and resource. The city pastorate is now self-supporting. Among the Christians connected with it are two soldiers who were baptized at the end of 1912, at a time when they were expecting shortly to be sent to Mongolia on active service. During the year under review they were placed in a difficult position owing to the issue of an edict by the then President that both the Army and Navy should take an oath of loyalty to the Government before idols. These men presented a petition to their commanding officer, asking to be excused on the ground that they were Christians, and when during an interview with him they were told that non-compliance with the order would mean death they replied, "We must obey God rather than man; we fear not physical death, as our souls are safe; we would willingly lay down our lives for our country, but to comply with the President's orders would be to sin against God." To their surprise they were only dismissed the Army, their light sentence being due to the good character which they bore.[1] The various missions working in Ningpo combine in a preachers' union which organizes monthly tract distribution, prison visitation, etc. Eleven adults were baptized at Tsonggyiao in the Tzeki pastorate. In the western pastorate four young churchwardens were licensed as lay readers, and now conduct services when the pastor is absent. In the Sanpoh pastorate, where Mrs. Song, the pastor's wife, has set on foot three prayer meetings for the Christian women, there are a number of inquirers. Miss I. M. Hughes, writing in November, thus told the story of some of them :— Baptisms

One woman who is now an earnest Christian, three years ago heard the Gospel for the first time. At that time, and for seven years previously, she suffered with very bad asthma. On hearing that our Lord, when on earth, healed the sick, she filled a cup nearly full of water, then knelt down and asked God to put the medicine in to heal her asthma, and then got up and drank it. Her husband, who was opposed to Christianity and persecuted her, when he heard about the prayer, scoffed and said, "If God heals you, you can be a Christian ; I will let you be baptized," not in the least thinking there would be any need to keep his promise ! However, from the day she offered that prayer until now, three years later, she has been perfectly free from asthma ! The husband kept his promise, and she has been baptized, and confirmed. Now he is softened and is inclined to inquire. While I was in Sanpoh I visited this woman's mother, who lives about ten li away from her, and who is 76 years old. After the daughter's conversion, she talked to her mother; and now she, too, is a Christian, and was baptized last year. During my visit I found that her son and his wife and their son and a married daughter are all interested and only need teaching. A family of inquirers

Besides the regularly constituted pastorates under the church council there are several districts where the work is in a less advanced state. In the Eastern Lakes district, two men and two women were baptized at Mohtsin, while at Tsongts'eng nine persons were received into the visible Church during the year.

Archdeacon Sing Tsae-Seng, who is pastor of Ningpo, spent much time in Taichow, superintending the C.M.S. workers in the southern district, which was left vacant owing to missionaries returning home on furlough, and also being chairman of the Taichow Church Council. His presence in Taichow has been a great help to the missionaries and workers there during a difficult period. Four of the pupils at the Boys' Higher Elementary School, two of them from non-Christian homes, received baptism in 1915; and two of the children at the Girls' Boarding School were to be received into the visible Church at the end of the year. The attendance at the latter school suffered in the autumn through the antagonism of a former master and his wife.[1] Dr. S. N. Babington had much disappointment at the Hospital, two of the five students leaving, one under false pretences to set up a hospital in the district in partnership with a former patient, and another also to set up in practice, and a third having to be dismissed. Dr. Babington says that since the revolution there has been a distinct change for the worse in the student class, who display im- Taichow Schools Hospital patience of restraint and resent any form of discipline. A former patient was baptized at the end of 1914,[1] and many of the in-patients showed an interest in the Gospel.[2] Systematic instruction was given to a few Christian women and inquirers, one of whom it is hoped may eventually become a Bible woman; to others teaching of a more occasional character was imparted, while Miss D. M. A. Leathers taught English to two classes of normal students at the government girls' school, both the mistresses and the girls of which often attend the church services. The condition of the Taichow Church, especially in the southern pastorate, has for some time caused great anxiety,[3] but a branch of the "Individual Save Men Society" has been formed, with a membership of twenty-five, which it is trusted may do something to remedy the sad state of affairs, and special services for the deepening of the spiritual life were held both in the city and in the southern pastorate. In the district the mass of the people were indifferent to the Gospel, and there was a considerable revival of idolatry; attendance at several of the village schools decreased; and there was no woman worker to visit the out-stations. Still there were rays of hope; inquirers came forward at one or two centres, and at Wongpaengyiao, through the influence of one of the Christians, a local temple has been cleared of its idols, seats have been provided and texts pasted on the walls, and a meeting for prayer and Bible reading is held each Saturday.

Shaohing

Some difficulty was met with in conducting the Bible Women's Training Class at Shaohing owing to the fact that four of the five members were middle-aged women who could hardly read a word until, at the age of 40 or more, they became inquirers. Consequently a good deal of time had to be given to instruction in reading and writing as well as in the Bible. The Anglo-Chinese School had seventy-seven pupils at the beginning of 1915, and the fees paid by the boys were sufficient to defray all current expenses save the salary of the principal. Two of the students were confirmed, and eight baptized, while fifteen others, some of whom had never heard the Gospel until they entered the school, became inquirers. Through the pupils access was gained to their homes, and it was found in at least one case that the boy had been accustomed to repeat to his relatives what he himself learned about the Saviour while in the school. In September the Anglo-Chinese school was closed, and a Higher Elementary School was opened in its stead, which now has about eighty names on its roll. Shaohing is notoriously a difficult place in which to propagate Christianity, for its great industry is the manufacture of paper money to be burnt for the benefit of the spirits of the departed, and the people are on the one hand sceptical and irreligious, and on the other extremely superstitious. Necromancers, choosers of lucky days, and dealers in the occult are in great strength, and their houses are full to overflowing with men and women seeking direction and advice. But an English class was held with about a dozen members, one of whom became a catechumen during the year; there were several inquirers and candidates for baptism who were most regular in attendance for instruction; and the faith of some of the converts shone brightly.

Choosers of lucky days in request

Dr. D. Duncan Main, whom the President of the Chinese Republic has decorated with the fourth order of Chiaho ("Excellent Grain") in recognition of his "many years faithful service to the sick and suffering in Hangchow," and who is now in his thirty-fifth year of service, in November, 1915, added yet another to the many buildings which he has been permitted to erect in connexion with the Hospital, in the form of a new leper refuge. The opening ceremony was performed by H. E. General Chu Jui in the presence of the British and Japanese consuls and other officials. The work at the hospital brings all sections of the Chinese community into touch with Christianity, and a good deal of fruit is seen. Sometimes many years elapse before it appears. Thus, in 1891 a man brought his little daughter to the hospital for an operation. Its success led others from the neighbourhood of his home to seek treatment, and twelve years later the people of his village asked for instruction in Christianity. The work among them gradually developed, and in 1913 the man and his family were baptized; since then some thirty others have been admitted into the visible Church.[1] There are between thirty and forty girls in the Mary Vaughan High School; three gained leaving certificates at the end of the summer. News was received of the baptism of a former pupil who had appeared to be deeply interested in Christianity while in the school, but had been lost sight of. Some of the girls volunteered to undertake Sunday-school work. With a view to conserving the results of the Eddy evangelistic meetings Bible classes were organized by the various missions at work in the city, but while some of these classes appeared to succeed, others, after maintaining a struggle for existence for a time, came to an end. The comparative failure of the Eddy meetings intensified the conviction that unless the members of all the Churches attain to a more vigorous spiritual life no evangelistic organization is likely to lead to any lasting good, and a series of devotional meetings was therefore held in all the churches during July and August. About twenty women were under preparation for confirmation or baptism. From Hangchow work is carried on in the river district, the women missionaries from time to time taking up their abode at Wangdza, sixty miles south-west of Hangchow, where there is a small but very useful elementary girls' boarding school, and thence visiting the other out-stations, and holding Bible readings, etc., for the Christian women. No report has been received from Tunglu.

Chuki

The Society has two Boarding Schools in Chuki city, one for boys with thirty pupils, and the other for girls, with thirty-six pupils, several of whom received baptism at Christmas, 1914. Two station classes, each lasting for six weeks, are held annually for women from the country districts, and good reports were received in 1915 of the earnest and consistent lives of some of them after their return to their homes. The district worked from Chuki is a large one, and contains forty out-stations at fifteen of which there are little chapels. At Fonggyiao there are several women inquirers. Miss I. S. Clarke writes of one of them as follows :—

An inquirer's story

Many year ago the late Miss Vaughan went to a far-away village in Chuki, and there came across a young woman who eagerly listened to the good news. As both father and husband were opposed, she was unable to enter the visible Church of Christ. Years passed by; Christianity was forgotten, and idols were worshipped with zeal, but still the precious seed lay dormant. Her husband and father both died and she married another man, quite illiterate, and who could not support his wife. For this reason she became a doctor, having learned the art from her father, who earned his living by its means. One day, hearing that a Miss Ven (my Chinese surname) was in Fonggyiao, she came to church hoping to find her old friend and teacher. After the service was over I talked to her, and from that day have kept in close touch with her. Whenever I visit Fonggyiao she comes for teaching and, being a clever woman and able to read and write, we study the Bible together. One day, in speaking of prayer, she asked me if she might pray about her profession, for, said she, "It is so important that I should be able to effect cures." Not long after this she was called to see a child seriously ill, and according to the Chinese possessed by a devil. The child indeed was so bad that she could do nothing to relieve him, but there and then she knelt down and prayed to God. Almost immediately the devil departed from the child who, after certain remedies had been applied, became quite well. As a grateful recognition of this wonderful cure the father presented the woman doctor with a handsome wooden scroll bearing an inscription, which was conveyed to her house amid rejoicings and fastened up over her doorway.

On another occasion she knelt down in the house of a patient to pray for her recovery, and again her prayer was answered and relief came. Truly, as she said to me afterwards in speaking of that first cure, God had heard and answered prayer, and therefore her faith was strengthened.

Twenty adults were baptized during the year, but on the other hand two of the converts had to be excommunicated, and unhappily there was much discord among some of the other Christians.

WESTERN CHINA MISSION

PAST HISTORY

The province of Szechwan, was occupied by a party under the Rev. J. H. Horsburgh in 1892, but for more than a year it was impossible to rent houses in any place not already occupied by other societies. The cities of Chungpa, Anhsien, Sintu, Mienchuh, and Mienchow received resident missionaries in 1894; Shihchuan in 1895; Chungkiang and Tehyang in 1903; Mowchow in 1906; Lungan in 1911; and Hanchow in 1913. In 1895 the Rev. W. W. Cassels, a missionary of the China Inland Mission, was appointed Bishop in Western China, and was consecrated in October of that year.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

The district which constitutes the sphere of the C.M.S. may be described as an oblong, some 150 miles long and 80 miles broad, covering an area of about 10,000 square miles. Mienchow, Chungpa, and Lungan are on the Fow River, while Mowchow is on the Min River, another tributary of the Yangtse, farther west. The remaining stations lie more or less in the intervening area. Much territory is waiting to be occupied, especially in the north and west of this district.

The work is still for the most part directly evangelistic, and is carried on by means of meetings in preaching-rooms, lantern lectures, receiving the people in guest-halls and visiting them in their homes, and by bookshops and colportage.

The majority of the schools are junior primary day schools. There are, however, a diocesan training college at Paoning and a hostel at Chengtu, in which the C.M.S. co-operates, and a women's school and boarding schools for boys and girls at Mienchow.

There is a medical mission at Mienchuh, and dispensary work is carried on at many of the other stations.

The work of the Mission is in the hands of Bishop Cassels, 16 other clergymen, 6 laymen, 20 missionaries' wives, and 15 other women missionaries. One of the above is a doctor and 1 a nurse. With these are associated 64 Chinese Christian lay agents.

Death of Rev. J. R. Stewart

THE Mission has lost a valued member of its staff by the death in France on 2 January, 1916, of the Rev. J. R. Stewart. A son of the Rev. R. W. Stewart of the Fukien Mission who was murdered by Chinese "vegetarians" at Hwasang in 1895, he was at Haileybury College when that sad event occurred. He matriculated at Trinity College, Dublin, but owing to a breakdown in health he went to Sydney, N.S.W., and took his degree at Sydney University. He was ordained in 1904 by the Bishop of Winchester, and served as curate at St. James's, Shirley, Hants, until 1907, when he sailed for Western China as a C.M.S. missionary. He worked at first at Tehyang, but in 1910 he took up work at the diocesan hostel at Chengtu. Coming home on furlough in the spring of 1915 he received a commission as chaplain to the Forces, and while conducting a funeral for a colleague he was struck by a shell and killed instantly.[1]

Three of the Society's missionaries in Western China are engaged in work which is not exclusively C.M.S. The Rev. H. H. Taylor is on the staff of the diocesan training college at Paoning; his brother, the Rev. R. C. Taylor, is at the Chengtu hostel; and the services of the Rev. H. J. Howden are lent temporarily to the West China Religious Tract Society. The Diocesan Hostel at Chengtu has never had more than twenty inmates, though it will accommodate thirty, and the average number in residence in 1915 was about a dozen. Prayers are held for them each evening, but there are no other services at which attendance is compulsory. By means of English classes Mr. R. C. Taylor is in touch with about sixty other students, and among these and the hostel men he conducts a Bible class in Chinese. He mentions one able student, influenced by Mr. Stewart, who has determined to devote his life to Christ's service, and in spite of persecution has instituted family prayers in his own home.

Formation of a district council

A district council has been formed for the Mission, consisting of delegates from the twelve parishes contained in that portion of the diocese in which the C.M.S. is working. At its first meeting in January, 1915, a district fund was inaugurated, which it is hoped will undertake the entire support of the Chinese catechists and evangelists in the district. The annual Bible school for these agents and other Christian men, lasting seven days, was held with an attendance of forty-five; and ten days were devoted to a similar effort to help the Christian women.

Mienchow Boarding schools

The Boys' Boarding School at Mienchow had about fifty boarders and six day boys, seventeen of the lads being in the second year of their middle school course. Some of the senior boys engaged in evangelistic work, and in one small town four of them devoted a large portion of their holiday to helping in the mission school. Ten of the lads were to be baptized shortly after Christmas. Among the boys in the school were the son and two nephews of the general in command of about 1000 soldiers who were stationed in the town. General Feng and several of his officers are Christians, and he visited the school and gave the boys a helpful address. He paid a visit also to the Girls' Boarding School, spoke to the children, and presented each one with an illustrated marked New Testament, and a copy of the "Pilgrim's Progress." [1] There were sixty girls in residence, besides four day pupils, the latter drawn from the upper classes. Six of the girls were received as inquirers.[2] The Women's School had ten members during the autumn term, one or two of whom gave promise of usefulness as Bible women in the future. Neither at the station nor the four out-stations was there any general seeking after God, and no new women catechumens are reported, but many people were reached at the street chapel, and there were one or two hopeful individual cases.

Helpfulness of a Chinese general

Chungpa

Chungpa is a busy river port, with a population of about 20,000, at the head of the navigable waters of the Fow River. There was a distinct falling off as compared with 1914 in the number attending the Holy Communion; many of the Christian women were indifferent, though about one-third of them showed a desire for instruction; and the schools have but a few pupils. A Sunday school, however, which was set on foot brought within hearing of the Gospel some mothers who would not otherwise have been reached. Regular evangelistic work is carried on at two preaching rooms in the town, and visits are paid to the three out-stations, at one of which, Behmiaotsi, three women were admitted to the catechumenate. A retired evangelist, now practising as a doctor, conducts services at Tongkeo, where an old woman from the country was met, who since she first heard the Gospel some years ago has had no teaching, save what she could gain from the first verse of the hymn, "Jesus loves me," and one page of a small tract, but who yet has laid hold of the fundamental truths of the Gospel. At another place, called T'aip'inch'ang, a sick girl was led to the knowledge of Christ, and after her death her mother, sisters, and grandmother all showed an interest in Christianity. Mr. W. R. Cannell made several itinerations, in the course of which he was able to sell many scripture portions and tracts, and he also visited Songpan where he stayed three months. At the end of 1898 the Society assumed responsibility for work at Songpan, but it has never been possible to occupy it permanently. Mr. Cannell was asked by many of the Chinese residents to take up his abode among them, and in the lamaseries and at fairs he was able to get into touch with a number of Tibetans, many of whom speak Chinese, and to distribute Christian literature among them.[1]

Visit to Songpan

The firstfruits of the work at Lungan, the most northern of the Society's stations in Szechwan—a former student in a government normal school—was baptized at Mienchow towards the end of 1914. In the following August a temporary church was opened at Lungan, and three men and a woman were baptized. There are four schools in the district.

The first baptisms

When 1914 closed, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Beach were full of hope about Mowchow, for several persons seemed likely to enrol themselves as definite inquirers. Unhappily during their absence from the station after Christmas at the annual missionary conference most of the prospective inquirers were got hold of by spiritualists, and the women among them refused to see Mrs. Beach when she went to their homes, and avoided her if they met her in the street. On the other hand the boys' school, though small as compared with similar schools in other Missions, flourished, and one of the Christian women of her own initiative began to teach a class of girls. The dispensary work attracted a good many patients.

Anhsien

A brighter report comes from Anhsien. The Christians are becoming more liberal, and both there and at the out-stations they contributed well towards the improvement of their churches; some of the Christian women undertook house-to-house visiting; the schools fared well; the dispensary was popular; fifty-one persons were baptized; and a number of women were admitted to the catechumenate. Among those baptized were several at the out-stations—one woman at Huakiaitsi, two at Liukiping, and three at Tsaohaikiai. One happy feature of the work is the way in which whole families are being brought into the Church. Thus at Hopachang, where six women received baptism in 1915, first one woman became a Christian, and now her two married daughters, the husband of one of them, and her sister have followed her example, and a grandson has been accepted as a candidate; while in another family, where the two old people were baptized some years ago, a married daughter and her husband were baptized in 1915, another daughter is ready for baptism, and her husband has begun to attend the church services. From time to time lantern lectures on the life of Christ are given in the churches or from stages erected in the temples. Admission is by ticket, and a ticket is given to each purchaser of scripture portions or other Christian books to the value of ten cash; in this way the circulation of gospels is promoted and quiet audiences are ensured. One other evangelistic opportunity calls for mention. In December, 1915, the boys from all the government primary and secondary schools in the thirteen towns in the county were summoned to Anhsien for examinations and sports, and the Rev. D. A. Callum was allowed to give a lantern lecture on the life of our Lord to an audience of 700 or 800 of these students and their masters in the great hall of the government high school. A gospel and a picture leaflet were handed to each one present, and the next day some of the masters visited the mission house asking for more books as some of their pupils had not received them.

Mienchuh

The Medical Work at Mienchuh increased in every department during the first half of 1915, and Dr. J. H. Lechler was called to treat patients at the yamen and in the homes of many important families; but in July Mrs. Lechler's ill-health obliged him to come home. For a few months after his departure Miss J. A. Clouting, a trained nurse, was able to help many of the women, but her work was hindered by ill-health and by the calls on her to nurse some of her fellow-missionaries. Three former patients were baptized, and many gospels were sold to out-patients and were carried by them to distant regions.[1] Various classes for women were held in the city, including one for yamen ladies [2] until the autumn, when a new mandarin came into office. There are four out-stations or centres of work in the district, which contains a population of 500,000—Tsentaochang, Shihfang, Hsiaochuen, and Hsukiachang, but excepting at the last named the people are unresponsive. At one place, however, the name of which is not given, a Christian doctor of considerable repute conducts a class from which fifteen men were admitted into the catechumenate during the year.

Efforts of a Christian doctor

The Rev. A. E. Seward describes the year under review as having been one of "marking time" at Tehyang. The uncertainty of the political situation, the slackness of trade owing to the war, and the depredations of robbers have induced an attitude of indecision which is reflected in religious matters, but the local gentry and the people in general were quite friendly. Three men and one woman received baptism, and twenty-seven new catechumens were enrolled.

Tehyang

A three days' evangelistic campaign was conducted at Hanchow,[1] and three women were admitted to the catechumenate. The station was without a resident missionary, as also was Sintu.

Hanchow

Both the Rev. A. G. Lee and Miss C. Carleton write somewhat despondently of the work at Chungkiang, Mr. Lee saying that "results are small," and Miss Carleton affirming that "hearts seem closed." Two of the women catechumens were baptized, but the others failed to make any progress, and the attendance at the girls' school fell in the latter part of the year from twenty-four to nine. But the missionaries were not left entirely without encouragement. A boys' school was opened and proved successful, dispensary work bore fruit in the admission of two of the patients to the catechumenate, the merchants and gentry were especially friendly, gospel tracts and portions sold readily, and an out-station was established at Iakeotien, where more than twenty men were present regularly at a weekly service and class. There was an opening also at another market town, forty miles from Chungkiang; a man who had heard the Gospel asked for a teacher to be sent, offering a place for meetings, and sending a list of forty people who wished to learn about Christianity.

JAPAN

Japan consists of four principal islands, namely, Honshiu (mainland), Kiu-Shiu, Shikoku, and Hokkaido (Yezo), besides a number of smaller islands. The Japanese Empire includes also Formosa, the Pescadores, and Korea. Japan proper covers an area of 147,000 square miles, and has a population of about 50,000,000. Roman Catholic missionaries reached the country in 1549, but engaging in political intrigues they were expelled, and in 1624 Christianity was prohibited on pain of death. For 230 years Japan was practically closed to the outer world, but in 1853 it began to open to American and European influences, and since that time the country has made extraordinary progress in the adoption of Western civilization. Still more recent is the toleration now fully accorded to Christian effort. In 1889 a new political constitution, formed somewhat on the lines of that of the United Kingdom, was promulgated. At the first general election under this constitution, held in 1890, fourteen Christians were elected to seats in the House of Representatives; and a Christian was subsequently appointed Speaker. In 1899 new treaties came into operation by which the country was thrown completely open to foreigners. Lastly, in 1912, the government policy which gave exclusive patronage to Shintoism, the official religion of the country (Buddhism, the popular religion, had been disestablished in 1884), was changed, and Christianity was recognized and its aid sought.

American missionaries arrived in 1859, but for several years they could do scarcely any direct evangelistic work. The first British missionary, the Rev. G. Ensor of the C.M.S., reached Japan in 1869. According to the "Christian Movement in the Japanese Empire, 1915," the Protestant missionaries in Japan now number 1017 (men 341, wives 284, and single women 392) connected with twenty-eight societies or boards. There are 603 Japanese ordained men and 1595 other paid Japanese workers, and 103,119 adherents of Protestant Missions. The converts connected with the C.M.S., S.P.G., Canadian Church, and Board of Missions of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America unite to form the Nippon Sei Kokwai, which in 1915 had 23,484 adherents.

The Emperor's coronation

THE ceremonies which correspond most nearly in Japan to the coronation of a western ruler were performed by the Emperor Yoshihito on 10 November, 1915, at Kyoto, the ancient capital, where he announced his assumption of the imperial authority to the spirits of his ancestors, to the people of the country, and to the world in general.[1] Unfortunately sake was used considerably at the ceremonies, and at their conclusion a series of feasts was held all over Japan which culminated in such open drunkenness and licentiousness that at length the police had summarily to stop the disgraceful proceedings.

A new Shinto sect

The elaborate Shinto rites used at the Coronation, it is thought, may lead to a revival of that religion, of which some signs had already appeared in the formation of a new Shinto sect, called Tenrikyo, which teaches faith-healing and has spread very rapidly among the people.

so signally shown, there are not lacking signs of the progress of Christianity. Although Christians as such were excluded from the Coronation ceremonies, six Christian educationists were honoured on the occasion by decorations from the Emperor, who also made donations to several Christian benevolent institutions. Moreover, some of the boys' mission schools have been recognized by the Department of Education as middle schools, without being deprived of the right to give religious instruction as part of their regular curriculum; this privilege, however, has not yet been extended to girls' schools.[1] These steps are helpful to the furtherance of the Gospel as tending to remove the suspicion so widely entertained in Japan that Christianity is incompatible with that spirit of intense loyalty to the Emperor which has so long been fostered in the land and is so deeply ingrained in its people.

Government recognition of mission schools

The statistics of the Nippon Sei Kokwai, the Anglican Church in Japan, for the year ending on 31 December, 1915, give the number of foreign missionaries as 241, and of Japanese workers as 320, of whom ninety-nine were in holy orders. The names of 23,484 members were on the church books, but the actual number of living members who attended church and were known to the workers was only 16,122. This discrimination is needed in consequence of the frequency with which the Japanese change their abode, and are lost sight of, and the great discrepancy between the C.M.S. figures for the diocese of South Tokyo in last year's Report and this is probably due to the number of Christians on the church books having been given for 1914, and those known to the pastors for the year under review. It should be added that some of the most earnest of the Christians are among those who are missing, showing that it must not be concluded that all whose whereabouts are unknown have fallen from the faith.

CENTRAL JAPAN MISSION

PAST HISTORY

The Rev. G. Ensor, the first C.M.S. missionary to the Japanese, landed at Nagasaki, in Kiu-Shiu, in 1869, and in 1873 the Mission was extended to HONSHIU, the Main Island, and Osaka was occupied. Tokyo received a resident missionary in 1874; Matsuye, 1888; Fukuyama, 1891; Hiroshima, 1892; Hamada, 1893; Yonago, 1902; and Kure, 1907. In SHIKOKU, Tokushima was occupied in 1888.

Arrangements were made by Archbishop Tait for the establishment of an English bishopric in Japan, and his successor, Archbishop Benson, nominated the Rev. A. W. Poole, C.M.S. missionary in South India, to be the first bishop. He was consecrated on 18 October, 1883. On his death in July, 1885, he was succeeded by Bishop Edward Bickersteth. In 1893 the Committee undertook, on the invitation of Bishop Bickersteth, to support two new bishops for the southern and northern islands respectively. In 1894 Bishop Bickersteth agreed with Bishop McKim, of the American Episcopal Church, upon a division of the Main Island into the dioceses of North and South Tokyo, Kyoto, and Osaka; North Tokyo and Kyoto being assigned to the American Church. Dr. Boutflower now presides over the diocese of South Tokyo, and Dr. Foss over that of Osaka. A new diocese, Mid Japan, was formed out of South Tokyo in 1912, for which Dr. Hamilton of the Canadian Church, a former C.M.S. missionary, was consecrated bishop.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

The chief stations on the Main Island are Osaka, the centre of trade in southern and western Japan; Fukuyama, to the west of Osaka; Kure, a naval port, and Hiroshima, on the Inland Sea; Hamada, the chief town of the western province of Iwami; and Matsuye and Yonago to the north-east of Hamada. Tokushima is on the island of Shikoku. All these are in the diocese of Osaka. In the diocese of South Tokyo, Tokyo, the largest city in the empire and the seat of the Emperor's Government, is occupied.

The educational institutions include the Momoyama School for boys, and the Bishop Poole Memorial School for girls, at Osaka; and a Bible women's training home at Ashiya. The C.M.S. men theological students attend the Anglican or American theological college, and a hostel is provided for those who go to the latter.

Evangelistic work throughout Japan is prosecuted largely by means of English and other classes. Public meetings of an evangelistic character are regularly held at the Whidborne Hall, Tokyo, the Warren Memorial Hall, Osaka, and at all the stations and out-stations; special services are frequently conducted in, or in connexion with, the various churches; and preaching tours are made in the country districts as opportunity offers.

The staff engaged in the Mission consists of 9 European and 15 Japanese clergymen, 3 laymen, 10 missionaries' wives and 22 other women missionaries. The Japanese Christian lay teachers and evangelists number 37.

Literary work

THE only literary work in the Mission, beyond some by Miss A. C. Bosanquet, unspecified because incomplete, was that of the Rev. S. Heaslett who is one of the editors of "The Christian Movement in Japan," and of "The Japan Evangelist," the organ of the Federated Council of Missions in Japan.

The Committee have accepted the resignations of the Revs. W. R. Gray, C. H. B. Woodd, and Miss V. J. Head, and Miss E. V. Ensor has not renewed her agreement.

Mr. Heaslett, who is acting secretary of the Mission, says that the word "healthy" best describes it. "There are no great movements," he writes, "no wonderful signs of God's working, no extraordinary phenomena. We are alive; there are no signs of serious decay among us; we move along, continuing in the daily round and given task. . . . We desire a new spirit and power, for the opportunities before us everywhere are boundless." A "healthy" Mission

I. DIOCESE OF OSAKA

MEETINGS in connexion with the three years' united evangelistic campaign[1] were held at Osaka in May, 1915. On the first evening 2800 persons gathered in the Dojima theatre; the governor's wife was present at a meeting of 1500 women; and the governor himself, the mayor, and other leading men of the city were present at a banquet when 308 persons (of whom seventy-eight were women) were present. The pastoral work in the city is in the hands of Japanese clergymen of the Nippon Sei Kokwai, who are not supported by and make no report to the C.M.S., but Miss E. B. Boulton is able to speak of a decided growth in grace and an increasing desire to lead their friends and relatives to Christ among the congregation of Jonan Church. There are 700 boys in the Momoyama School of whom only fifty are Christians, but 600 of the scholars voluntarily attend scripture classes held daily for half an hour before school begins, and some 120 inquirers were under instruction when the year closed. All but one of the teachers at the Bishop Poole Memorial School are Christians, and that one seems to have real faith, but is kept back from confessing Christ in baptism by fear of her relatives. Both the teachers whose baptism was mentioned in last year's Report[2] grew in grace and exercised a good influence, and one of them was the means of leading her husband, at one time an opponent of Christianity, to become an inquirer. The school suffers from some disabilities at the hands of the Government in that its "graduates" are debarred from entrance to the high normal college at Nara, and to examination on equal conditions with those from government schools for the primary teacher's certificate, and this tends to keep non-Christian parents from sending their daughters. The girls, however, are admitted to the entrance examination for the women's higher normal college at Tokyo, and one of them was among the seventy-five successful candidates out of 800 who sat for examination in 1915. Four of the Bishop Poole girls were admitted in April, 1915, to the Bible Women's Training Institution at Ashiya. The students receive instruction not only in the Bible, Church history, and similar subjects, but also in home work, knitting, "first aid," etc., and they gain experience in practical work by conducting fourteen children's meetings in Ashiya and the neighbourhood and visiting in twelve towns and villages. The accounts given of the visiting are most cheering. Twelve women were baptized at Ashiya itself, while at Amagasaki, where a catechist is stationed, whole families came out on Christ's side, and between forty and fifty persons received baptism. At less fruitful places, such as Uchide, where some thought it hopeless to attempt work, so strongly is Buddhism intrenched, there are several earnest inquirers and a flourishing children's meeting is held.

Hiroshima

Three pleasing features of the congregation at Hiroshima, which is under the pastoral care of a Japanese catechist, are a spirit of unity, a spirit of independence, and an evangelistic spirit. Baptisms were not very numerous, but the new converts—including the widow of a Christian, impressed by his peaceful death-bed, and a young man brought into the light after seeking it for three years—appeared to be deeply in earnest, and there were a number of candidates for baptism at the end of 1915. Some of the converts at Shimonoseki, about six hours by train from Hiroshima, showed praiseworthy zeal. Miss A. C. Bosanquet wrote in December :—

Finding substitutes

> There were four catechumens for some time, and lately they were all baptized, so there were no catechumens left in the congregation. The four agreed that this would never do ; it was serious to have no candidates coming on ; they must have substitutes to fill their places. So they got up a special preaching and were so earnest in seeking souls that soon they had brought in exactly four new catechumens.

Kure

Misconduct on the part of the catechist caused Kure to be left for some months without any resident pastor, but the Christians, especially the young men among them, thrown upon their own resources, showed a real spirit of devotion and a desire to win others. A new worker was appointed, and at the end of the year the numbers attending church had increased, the Sunday school had grown, and the evangelistic services were crowded.[1] Those baptized during the year included eight women and two girls, three members of a men's Bible class, one of a class for high school girls, one of a class for nurses, and one of a class for servants. Six of the pupils at the Sunday school asked for baptism and three were baptized, one of whom for seven years had walked three miles from his home every Sunday in order to attend the school. He is now 17 years old and himself a teacher, and he and another youth of his own age, baptized at the same time and known as the "honest fishmonger's boy," have formed a sort of Christian Endeavour Society among the elder boys, and hold open-air meetings for children. The work of the fishmonger's boy begins at 5 a.m. and after that he has no leisure, so he rises at 4.30 in order to have time for Bible study and prayer.[2]

Galgey, was assigned to Fukuyama, where a Japanese clergyman is in charge. She formerly resided there for some years, and on her return was visited by a number of people whom she had once taught as children in the Sunday school. Fukuyama

One woman who had long been seeking her husband's permission for her baptism, and others who had been halting between two opinions, were baptized at Hamada. Some former Sunday-school children have become earnest inquirers. Hamada

The arrangement mentioned in last year's Report [1] by which work at the preaching room at Matsuye as well as at the church was committed to the Rev. P. B. Nagano, the Japanese pastor, was continued in 1915 even after the return of a European clerical missionary to the station. Moreover Mr. Nagano devoted a good deal of time to training four young men as workers. This training work is tentative until it is seen what sort of a Bible school would be most useful, and where it should be placed. Twelve women were baptized at Matsuye. Opposition, once strong, decreased at Oda; several inquirers came forward at Imaichi; at Hirose the little band of Christians showed self-sacrifice in order to get a new church in the place of one which had been destroyed by fire, and were diligent in evangelizing others. A kindergarten is a feature of the work at Yonago, and in 1915 an attempt was made with success to influence the girls attending the high school. At first the principal and teachers were much opposed to Christianity, but in course of time three of the teachers were led to attend a Bible class which was set on foot for the girls. One woman was under preparation for baptism at the station; while at Sakai, where the "catechist's keenness is infectious," the converts are zealous. The Rev. P. T. Arato, a Japanese clergyman, carries on the work on the Oki Islands, with his head-quarters at Saigo. Matsuye Yonago

The Society has one station and three out-stations on the island of Shikoku. The out-stations form a triangle, with Wakimachi at the apex; the base, in the middle of which Tokushima, the main station, lies, is about twenty-six miles long, and the distance from Tokushima to Wakimachi is also about twenty-six miles. The year was one of increased opportunities, and everywhere the missionaries were welcomed, although, perhaps, as a consequence of being cut off from the mainland, the people are very conservative and rather slow to change their opinions. In Tokushima, which has a population of about 70,000, visits were paid to 170 houses; meetings for Christian women were held; classes for middle school students, high school girls, and others were conducted; and work among the young was carried on by means of Sunday schools and children's meetings. Two Army officers were baptized and also their wives, two middle school boys, and Tokushima a high school girl. Several fresh openings into homes of officers were gained by means of a class for junior officers, and also through the fortitude of a Christian lady, an officer's wife, during a serious illness, which evoked the admiration of all her friends in the regiment.[1] Eight persons were baptized on the island of Takashima, which is visited from Muya, a town with some 20,000 inhabitants; and a young doctor and his wife and child were received into the visible Church at Tomioka. He had heard the Gospel during his student days, but it was not until he came under the influence of the Tomioka catechist that he was led to a true knowledge of Christ. The work at Wakamachi languished somewhat owing to the catechist being removed, and no one being available to take his place. In the thickly populated valley of the Yoshino River which lies between Tokushima and Wakimachi there is a town called Kawashima around which a number of villages cluster. In these many earnest inquirers have come forward and a number of crowded lantern meetings for children were held in 1915.[2]

II. DIOCESE OF SOUTH TOKYO

Tokyo

In April, 1915, the Society's Divinity School at Osaka was closed, and the fifteen students were transferred to Tokyo. Ten of them began to attend the lectures at the Anglican theological college, and five, who were not so far advanced, were sent to the American college, for a three years' preliminary course. There are several congregations connected with the Society in Tokyo, but they are under the care of Japanese pastors and not of C.M.S. missionaries, though women missionaries take an active share in the work among the women of them. At St. Paul's many members have been added to the congregation during the last few years. Emmanuel Church does not make much advance towards self-support, but it is encouraging that Japanese girls, not paid agents, are now able to conduct a young women's Bible class which used to be taken by missionaries. Four former pupils in the Sunday school are now teachers in it. In this part of the city there is a steady work among students, which is greatly aided by the consistent Christian life of one of their number. The congregation at Fukagawa Church are too poor to contribute much to church expenses or the pastor's salary, and the Rev. G. Mori, their pastor, is therefore supported from the Society's funds. Several women in the neighbourhood became inquirers in 1915, a member of a girls' class was to be baptized at Christmas, and five of those who attended a class for high school girls accepted Christ as their Saviour, but were kept back from baptism by the opposition of their parents. There is a fourth congregation, that of Zion Church, Shimoshibuya, to which one woman was added by baptism. A united evangelistic campaign was conducted in the city in April, 1915, mainly by Japanese Christians. One feature of the effort was the insertion in the daily papers (at reduced advertisement charges) of short articles explaining the Christian religion, and the distribution of copies of these papers from house to house. On several evenings cinematograph services were held, and there were open-air services in the parks and streets. The subjects of some of the addresses were not strictly evangelistic. According to the "Japan Evangelist" they included: Social Reform, The Social Evil, Divorce, Peace, Servant Employment Bureau, Work for Young Men, Care of Orphans, Prisoners' Aid, Care of Lepers, the White Plague, and Personal Purity.

Evangelistic campaign

The Work among the Chinese Students in Japan is carried on chiefly at Tokyo, where most of the 3000 now in the country are found. Since this work was begun in 1908, nearly 130 students have been baptized in Tokyo alone, hailing from sixteen of the eighteen provinces of China. The Rev. W. H. Elwin gives a brief account of some of the converts. He writes:—

Work among Chinese students

A gifted Chinese scholar on coming to Tokyo read the New Testament twice through in a fortnight and could quote it in discussion. He was baptized and became our helper. He had formerly been engaged in lawsuits with missionaries and pastors, but took back with him to China letters of introduction so as to preach locally the faith which once he tried to destroy. A satisfactory letter has come from him. He has started a primary school near his home, and is preaching in the church near by and trying to influence his fellow literati.

Two men converted in Tokyo started a Y.M.C.A. in Yunnan (China). One is now at a university in the U.S.A. The other, who graduated at a Tokyo railway school, writes, "Last year in April I left Tokyo for Peking. I was three months away, going to Yunnan, having received instructions to engineer the Gobi railway. The work has not begun yet, but surveying and map-making are fully occupying my time. I have started a primary school here and on Sunday borrow the school for a church service. Thirty or forty come together to listen. There are only a hundred families altogether in the place." He has since linked up his work with the new C.M.S. Mission at Yunnan and has five or six business men asking for baptism.

Among the women students who received baptism during the year were the editor of a suffragette paper and the daughter of a former leader of the revolutionary forces.[1]

[1] For an interesting account of these students and some others see the "Tokyo Newsletter," July, 1915.

KIU-SHIU MISSION

PAST HISTORY

When the C.M.S. began work in Japan in 1869, Nagasaki was the scene of its operations. Kumamoto was occupied in 1887; Fukuoka, 1888; Oita and Kagoshima, 1895; Kokura, 1898; Omuta, Saseho, and Moji, 1914; and Kurume, 1915.

The diocese of Kiu-Shiu was constituted in 1893, and in the following year the Rev. H. Evington, a C.M.S. missionary of twenty years' experience in Japan, was consecrated. He retired in 1909 and was succeeded by Dr. A. Lea, a missionary of the Canadian C.M.S.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

The work is carried on in much the same way as in Central Japan. Saseho, Nagasaki, Omuta, and Kumamoto in the west; Kokura, Moji, and Kurume in the north; Oita in the east; and Kagoshima in the south of the island, are the stations. The C.M.S. has no educational institutions in Kiu-Shiu.

The staff of the Mission consists, besides Bishop Lea, of 6 European clergymen, 7 Japanese clergymen, 6 wives of missionaries, 10 single women, and 21 Japanese Christian lay agents.

Literary work

THE only literary work in the Mission in 1915 was that of Archdeacon A. B. Hutchinson who adapted into Japanese the well-known tract, "Safety, Certainty, and Enjoyment."

A greater readiness to listen

Year by year a helpful general review of the work in Kiu-Shiu is furnished by the authorities of the Mission. In that which deals with 1915 it is stated that while visible results have been small there has been a greater readiness to listen to the Gospel, many houses have been opened for meetings, and villages thought of as unresponsive have produced inquirers. But the condition of the Church leaves a good deal to be desired. Though remarkable sums are subscribed to the Buddhist temples, some undoubtedly under compulsion but others voluntarily and with real self-sacrifice, the Japanese Christians do not seem always to appreciate the privilege of giving. Moreover the pastors are lacking in initiative, and the converts need more eagerness to win others.

Nagasaki

The war has not exercised any adverse influence on the work at Nagasaki. Archdeacon Hutchinson writes :—

> Our experience is that there is a greater readiness than before to give a patient hearing to plain and loving statements of the Gospel. The revolting and brutal accompaniments of the war as waged by our enemies very soon silenced the objection that there were Christians fighting against Christians for greed of gain. The conviction deepened that they who do such things declare plainly that they have no claim to the name Christian; while many a story of undaunted courage even to death on the part of those resisting injustice, cruelty, and treachery as Christian soldiers has tended to convince many of our Japanese allies that there is no connexion between Christianity and cowardice or lack of devotion to King and country.

Very few members of the congregation threw themselves into religious work, and the weekly prayer meetings were poorly attended, while the women were irregular at the Bible classes. Efforts prospered to reach the young by means of Sunday schools and a meeting, though the attendance at the meeting was diminished in the spring of 1915 by a Shinto fortune-teller going to one of the primary schools which used to furnish about sixty children to it, and affirming that Christianity is a bad religion and that if the children listened to teaching about it their livers would be taken out of their bodies and they would die. Three women were baptized, and five men were ready for baptism at the end of the year.[1]

A fortune-teller's opposition

Thirty years ago Saseho, in the Nagasaki prefecture, was a mere fishing village, but it has grown rapidly and now ranks third among the cities of Kiu-Shiu, with a population of 90,000. Since the Presbyterians, Baptists, and Methodists work in the north of the city, the Rev. and Mrs. C. O. Pickard-Cambridge concentrated their efforts on the southern end, but they joined from time to time in united evangelistic meetings. Six adults were baptized during the year, and at its close there was a hopeful band of inquirers, including some middle school students. Mrs. Pickard-Cambridge (formerly Miss J. Mackie, of Tokushima) got into touch with more than fifty of the girls attending the high school, and at the Bible class which she held for them on Sundays sometimes as many as fifteen were present. Periodical visits were paid to Kurume, a city of 40,000 inhabitants, where a Japanese deacon is stationed; the work there has flagged but now appears to be reviving.

Work among high school girls

Kurume

In the town of Kokura there were many openings, but they were chiefly among women and girls. Visits were welcomed in more houses than before, and there was an increase in the number of high school girls who sought Mrs. J. Hind for teaching, while the attendance at the meetings held at the military hospital improved. There are several towns with a population of 40,000 or more clustered around Kokura, and these too are centres of work. A woman received baptism at Wakamatsu, five miles from Kokura, and another at Yawata, at the same distance from Kokura, but in a different direction, where the government steel works are situated. At Moji, seven miles from Kokura, the situation was at one time strained owing to a movement towards union on the part of several of the Protestant Churches. Under the leadership of an earnest Presbyterian Christian, Mr. Nagao, the superintendent of the government railways in Kiu-Shiu, the members of the various congregations decided to amalgamate and have only one Protestant Church in the town. They had been accustomed to meet frequently at united prayer meetings and services, and it was natural that they should feel it would be an advantage to make such union permanent and have one strong Church instead of three or four weak ones. Unfortunately their enthusiasm was greater than their prudence. Questions of Church order, the principles of Christian unity, the causes that have led to division, the difficulties that have wrecked similar attempts in the past, and so on, were all ignored. They believed that the first thing to do was to unite, and that then all difficulties could be overcome. Even the form of church organization, the standard of faith, and the order of worship were left to be decided upon afterwards. While nothing but sympathy can be felt with the motives which prompted the movement, the course followed was not likely to lead to a good result; its one visible outcome has been the substitution of the new Church for the Congregationalist Church, since that was the only body of which all the members joined the new organization. The members of the Sei Kokwai, feeling that the movement was premature, held aloof, and the Presbyterians, Baptists, Lutherans, and Methodists were divided in their attitude towards it. The little congregation at Hojo, in the Nogata mining district, was almost wiped out in December, 1914, by a terrible colliery explosion and the removal of some of the other members, including an earnest doctor and his wife who had been the mainspring of the work. One of those who lost their lives was a man whose changed demeanour had led to the conversion of several people. His widow and two other women were baptized in April, 1915.

Difficulties in the way of union ignored

Oita

Oita, the prefectural city of the east coast of Kiu-Shiu, is a newly opened port which has been chosen as the centre of the C.M.S. work in that district. The lives of some of the little band of Christians led others to be favourably disposed to Christianity, and prejudice was broken down also by the religious advertisements which a Presbyterian missionary inserted in the newspapers. At a town on the coast, the head of an agricultural school, of his own initiative and without any outside help, carries on two Sunday schools.

Kagoshima

Work at Kagoshima is described by the Rev. A. C. Hutchinson, drawing his illustration from the great war, as a "stubborn contest for each inch of ground," and this especially is the case as concerns efforts to win the men for Christ. Women are responsible only to their parents and husbands, and if their consent is given to baptism there are not many other difficulties in the way. But the men, especially in the villages, where the community holds the individual in an iron grasp and where public opinion is against Christianity, have to face many obstacles and misunderstandings if they desire to follow Christ. It is not surprising therefore that most of the converts and inquirers who come forward are women. Two were baptized in 1915 in Kagoshima city, and five admitted to the catechumenate. Partly through the earnestness of the Christian women, who are diligent in seeking to win others, many more houses were open to the visits of the women workers than they could cope with. The energy of the Buddhists in opening Sunday schools, conducted on the model of the Christian institutions, has drawn away from the influence of the missionaries many children from non-Christian homes. Two new children's meetings, however, were set on foot, and a couple of the elder girls attending them were received into the catechumenate. A couple of women at Shigetomi, ten miles north of Kagoshima, asked for baptism, and two persons were baptized at Tanegashima, forty miles to the south, the first-fruits of the work of a catechist lent by the Japan Evangelistic Band. Another baptism was that of a young wife belonging to Yamano, a new out-station, whose husband also became a catechumen. As his father was strongly hostile to Christianity anxiety was felt about these converts when they went to live in a lonely mountain village, where the man was given an appointment under Government. But happily he found that his official chief, together with his wife, were Sei Kokwai Christians, and the four of them not only helped one another, but also from time to time gathered others together for Christian meetings.[1]

Buddhist energy

The congregation of Trinity Church, Kumamoto, need to give more support to the evangelistic efforts of the pastor. The Christians in another part of the city went out into the villages, holding lantern and other meetings, some of which were largely attended. At the time of an exhibition which was held at Kumamoto, Miss F. M. Freeth met several former members of her Bible class for girls. Some of them, who have married, find it difficult to lead consistent lives in their heathen homes, and feel the lack of congenial companionship, but this, it is said, has only led them closer to the Saviour. There were a number of women inquirers at Uchinomaki in the Aso district, and some also at Minamata, a town in the south of the province, where work was revived by an earnest Christian woman in 1913 after a lapse of fifteen years.

HOKKAIDO MISSION

PAST HISTORY

For four years the work of the C.M.S. in Japan was confined to Nagasaki, and it was not until 1874 that the northern island received a missionary by the occupation of Hakodate. Kushiro was occupied in 1889; Sapporo, 1892; Otaru, 1897; Muroran, 1907; Asahigawa, 1909; and Usu, 1911.

The Rev. P. K. Fyson, who had worked in Japan under the C.M.S. for twenty-two years, was consecrated Bishop in Hokkaido in 1896. He retired in 1908 and was succeeded in 1909 by the Rev. W. Andrews, a former missionary of the Society.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

Hakodate, Sapporo, Otaru, Asahigawa, and Kushiro are the chief stations, the last named in the east of the island. There is a dispensary for Ainu at Asahigawa.

The staff engaged in the Mission consists of Bishop Andrews, 2 other European and 10 Japanese clergymen, 3 missionaries' wives, and 6 other women missionaries. The Christian Japanese and Ainu lay agents number 19.

THE Committee have accepted the resignation of Miss A. Evans.

Hakodate

Some special evangelistic meetings were held at Hakodate in June, 1915, and at one of them practically all the leading merchants of the town assembled to hear the testimony of one of Japan's greatest merchants, an earnest Christian of close upon 80 years of age, who goes up and down the country advocating the reign of Jesus Christ as the best for the nation and the individual alike.[1]

A Japanese merchant's testimony

The Rev. D. Marshall Lang, the secretary of the Society's Mission, has no connexion with the Japanese congregation at Hakodate itself, but he ministers to the English in the town, and teaches English and the Bible to a few young men. He says that in the Mission as a whole there has been no large addition to the number of adherents, but that is partly due to the names of many merely nominal church members having been removed from the list. The Society has four out-stations in the district, namely, Immanueru, where the work is handicapped by the difficulty the farmers experience in making a livelihood and their consequent engrossment in temporal affairs; Kutchan, a region with six small and widely scattered bodies of adherents; Bibai, where the church members are little more than nominal Christians, and where when Mr. Marshall Lang visited the place to administer the Holy Communion none of them attended the service; and Rumoi, a bleak sea port.

Otaru

Otaru is a diocesan centre, but Miss G. S. Stevenson resides there and works among the women, besides conducting some English classes. The special evangelistic meetings were largely attended, the audiences filling a theatre capable of holding 2000 people; but with one exception, when the speaker was a lady belonging to one of the leading business families in the empire, who based an earnest direct appeal on the story of her own conversion, the addresses were not evangelistic in any sense; at the first meeting there were three speakers, each of whom gave "a lengthy moral exhortation, varied in the case of one who had lived in Germany for some years, by praise of the Germans." The church committee worked together well and the attendance at the Sunday school increased.

Sapporo

In the Sapporo district, Sapporo itself is a diocesan centre, but Archdeacon J. Batchelor makes the town his head-quarters and Miss E. L. B. Norton also resides there and ministers to the women. The progress of the Anglican Church at Sapporo has been far less than that of the Nonconformist missions, and the attendance at both church services and prayer-meetings is indifferent. Meetings for catechumens and heathen women were begun in the houses of some of the Christians. Archdeacon Batchelor, reporting on the C.M.S. work, says that the Ainu Christians live for the most part in inaccessible places, and many of them do not see a Christian worker for years on end; an Ainu woman and three children, however, were baptized at Nikap, after swimming a swollen river in order to be present at the service. Eight adults were baptized at Muroran. At Piratori, where Miss E. M. Bryant resumed her work among the Ainu after an absence of three years, there is a Home for Ainu Girls attending the village school. Miss Bryant found that the people had degenerated sadly during her absence, and that drunkenness had greatly increased. A conspicuous improvement was seen in the conduct of the children who attended the Sunday school at Usu, and was commented on by the government school teachers. Three Japanese women were baptized, and also a farmer in a distant hamlet.[1]

NORTH-WEST CANADA MISSIONS

PAST HISTORY

The Society's work in North-West Canada is among the remnants of the Red Indian tribes scattered over the vast country formerly known as the Hudson Bay Territory, but now included in the Dominion of Canada. In 1822 the Rev. John West arrived at a trading settlement on the Red River, a little south of Lake Winnipeg, and began to gather the Indians round him. Now the Red River District is the flourishing colonial province of Manitoba, and a large part of the Society's work has developed into the settled ministrations of the Church in the Colony. One of the Society's churches has become the cathedral of the diocese of Rupert's Land, which was founded in 1849. That diocese was divided in 1872 into four parts, the three new dioceses being those of Moosonee, Athabasca, and Saskatchewan. In 1875 these dioceses were constituted an ecclesiastical province with the Bishop of Rupert's Land as the Metropolitan. In 1884 the provincial synod divided the diocese of Athabasca, forming the new diocese of Mackenzie River, and at the same time the diocese of Qu'Appelle was formed out of Rupert's Land and Saskatchewan. In 1887 the diocese of Calgary was formed out of Saskatchewan; in 1890 Selkirk (now known as Yukon), on the west of the Rocky Mountains, out of Mackenzie River; and in 1902 Keewatin out of Rupert's Land and Moosonee. Two other new dioceses, Edmonton and Brandon, were formed in 1913. The present occupant of the see of Rupert's Land is Archbishop Matheson (1905); of Moosonee, Dr. Anderson (1909); of Keewatin, Dr. Lofthouse (1902); of Saskatchewan, Dr. Newnham (translated from Moosonee, 1903); of Calgary, Dr. Pinkham (1887); of Athabasca, Dr. Robins (1912); of Mackenzie River, Dr. Lucas (1913); of Yukon, Dr. Stringer (1905). All these, except Drs. Matheson and Pinkham, have been missionaries of the C.M.S.

The Society labours in all the above-named eleven dioceses except Qu'Appelle, Edmonton, and Brandon. In RUPERT'S LAND DIOCESE the Society's work was commenced in the Red River district in 1823; and Rainy Lake district was occupied in 1874. In KEEWATIN DIOCESE, York was occupied in 1854; Fort Alexander, 1864; Churchill, 1886. In MOOSONEE DIOCESE, Moose was occupied in 1851; Albany, 1855; East Main Coast, 1877; Blacklead Island, 1894; Lake Harbour, 1909. In SASKATCHEWAN DIOCESE, Cumberland and Devon were occupied in 1840; Stanley, 1852; Sandy Lake (Asisipi), 1875; Battleford, 1877; Prince Albert, 1879; Grand Rapids, 1881; and Fort Pitt, 1888. In CALGARY DIOCESE, Fort McLeod was occupied in 1880; Blackfoot Crossing in 1883; Sarcee Reserve in 1886. In ATHABASCA DIOCESE, Chipewyan was occupied in 1867; Fort Vermilion, 1876; Lesser Slave Lake, 1886; Upper Peace River, 1888. In MACKENZIE RIVER DIOCESE, Fort Simpson, 1858; Fort McPherson, 1861; Fort Norman, 1871; Fort Resolution, 1875; Herschel Island, 1897. In YUKON DIOCESE, Rampart House, 1882; Buxton, 1887; Selkirk, 1892; Moosehide (Klondyke), 1897; Carcross, 1900.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

The majority of the Indians in North-West Canada have by this time embraced Christianity, and the work among them is largely pastoral. Many Eskimo, however, are still unreached by the Gospel.

The Society makes a grant of £110 per annum to St. John's College, Winnipeg, and gives also £137 per annum in scholarships. Homes for Indian children are found at some stations. Medical work is carried on at Fort Pitt, in the diocese of Saskatchewan.

The Society makes grants to the salaries of five of the bishops, maintains six missionaries who are in home connexion, and assists by an annually diminishing block grant the work in eight dioceses.

THE Rev. S. J. Stocken, a brother of the Rev. Canon H. W. G. Stocken, whose name was on the Society's list for some years from 1900, passed away in Canada on 16 January, 1916, a few weeks after the death of his wife.

Deaths of Rev. and Mrs. S. J. Stocken

I. DIOCESE OF RUPERT'S LAND

THE Committee have no information about the work at St. Peter's Indian Settlement, Scanterbury, or Shoal River, the stations to which the grant from the C.M.S. is assigned.

II. DIOCESE OF KEEWATIN

IT was only with much difficulty that the work in the diocese of Keewatin was carried on in 1915. At many of the stations there was a great lack of food, and most of the Indians suffered through the fall in the price of furs; each year, Bishop Lofthouse says, the Indians seem to be passing more and more out of the reach of the missionaries. The old established stations at Islington and Long Sault have been closed owing to the unsettled life of the people who are hardly ever on their reserves; at Lac Seul the work was up-hill; at Churchill the Rev. and Mrs. F. C. Sevier and their children had no animal food of any kind for months and were worn to "mere shadows." They had packed up and were ready to leave when the ship arrived in August, but hearing nothing from the Bishop they decided to stay on for another year. Many an unnoticed deed of heroism is performed in the far north-west!

Heroic workers

Work proceeded steadily, in spite of much sickness, at Fort Alexander, one of the two stations in the diocese which benefit by the Society's grant, while at York Factory, which the C.M.S. occupied in 1854, the acquisition of a plot of land and the erection of a mission house—the first the Society has possessed there—afforded regular employment to some of the Indians and made it possible to give them more sustained instruction than usual. The people gathered at the station from their hunting camps at Christmas and Easter to partake of the Holy Communion, and though, owing to financial stress, their gifts were not as large as in some previous years, they yet represented much self-denial.

III. DIOCESE OF MOOSONEE

BISHOP ANDERSON reports steady progress, both in temporal and spiritual matters, among the Indians at the stations in his diocese which are regularly worked. He adds, however, that the building of new railways, the Canadian Northern, the Algoma Central, and the National Transcontinental, is having the effect of scattering the Indians and making it more difficult to supply them with spiritual ministrations, while at the same time exposing them to new temptations.

Fort Hope

The Rev. E. Richards reports that the chief at Fort Hope set a good example to his people, having family prayers in his tent morning and evening, and conducting services at the station when Mr. Richards was absent on a visit to Martens Fall.

Fort George

Going without food rather than hunt on Sundays

Many Eskimo baptisms

The district worked from Fort George is more than 400 miles from north to south, and contains 800 Indians and about 500 Eskimo. Nearly all who are of age can read, and there is hardly a family that does not have family prayers. The Eskimo, among whom Nero, a catechist, does good work, often go without food rather than hunt on Sundays, and show great devotion to the church services, travelling as many as 300 miles, and suffering much privation the while, to hear the Word of God. In April, 1914, the Rev. W. G. Walton baptized 145 Eskimo, and many more in the spring of 1915. He has lately translated St. Matthew's Gospel, half St. John's Gospel, and the First Epistle of St. John, for the use of these people. Mention must be made here of the work among the Eskimo of Baffin's Land in which the Rev. A. L. Fleming is engaged. In the winter of 1914–15 he travelled more than 1300 miles by sledge and dog-team, and succeeded in meeting nearly every Eskimo living on the Hudson Straits. He reports seventy-three adult baptized Eskimo and a number of inquirers at Lake Harbour.[1]

IV. DIOCESE OF CALGARY

Blackfoot Reserve

Sarcee Reserve

THERE are two Indian reserves in the diocese where work is carried on in connexion with the C.M.S., the Blackfoot Reserve, on which there are 734 Indians, 220 of whom are members of the Anglican Church; and the Sarcee Reserve, with ninety church people out of a population of 193. On each reserve there is a boarding school, and on the Blackfoot Reserve a hospital for the most part maintained by the Government.

V. DIOCESE OF SASKATCHEWAN

VI. DIOCESE OF ATHABASCA

White Fish Lake

Wabaska

A LARGE new church has been built at White Fish Lake, where there are signs of a spiritual awakening; and both there and at Lesser Slave Lake the Indian boarding schools are well filled. Several changes took place in the staff of the school at Wabaska, the head-quarters of Archdeacon A. S. White who makes extensive itinerations in the large district.

VII. DIOCESE OF MACKENZIE RIVER

BISHOP LUCAS, who resides at Chipewyan, visited Hay River, where is a diocesan boarding school with forty pupils. From Hay River the Rev. A. J. Vale made a journey of 500 miles to administer the Holy Communion to the Indians at Fort Simpson. Twelve Indians and forty-six Eskimo were confirmed at Fort Mackenzie. The mission motor-boat, the "Torch," left for Herschel Island, whence she was to take the Rev. H. Girling and his colleagues for another attempt to reach the eastern Eskimo.[1]

VIII. DIOCESE OF YUKON

THE third synod of the diocese met at Dawson in July, 1915. Bishop Stringer was able to report that all but $4000 of the $50,000 required as an endowment for the diocese had been raised. Archdeacon T. H. Canham was absent from Carcross for three months, during which he travelled 2200 miles and met with many Indians whom he had not seen for twenty years or more. Afterwards he was detained at Whitehorse for a couple of months, taking the duty while the rector had a much-needed holiday. At Moosehide all the Indians are Christians, at least in name, and many of them lead consistent lives.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MISSION

PAST HISTORY

In 1856 Captain Prevost, R.N., drew the Society's attention to the savage state of the Tsimshean Indians on the coast of British Columbia, and a young schoolmaster, Mr. W. Duncan, was sent out. Great blessing was vouchsafed to his labours, and in 1862 the Christian settlement of Metlakahtla was founded. In 1881, however, Mr. Duncan refused to work on the lines of the Church of England and ceased to be a missionary of the Society, and an unhappy schism among the Indian Christians resulted. Peace was in God's good providence ultimately restored, though at a heavy cost. Prolonged disputes about the land ensued between Mr. Duncan's Indians and the Government; and in the summer of 1887 Mr. Duncan removed with some hundreds of the people to a place seventy miles distant, within the United States territory of Alaska. After the departure of the disaffected party the conduct of the loyal Indians was so excellent that the government commissioners, sent in November, 1888, to report on the condition of these disturbed districts, stated that the Metlakahtla Church Indians were in happy contrast to all others, and were a credit to their instructors.

The diocese of British Columbia was subdivided in 1879, and the Rev. W. Ridley, formerly a missionary of the Society in the Punjab, was appointed the first bishop of Caledonia, the northern division. The C.M.S. mission stations, with the exception of that at Alert Bay, are situated in the latter diocese. Bishop Ridley resigned the see in 1904, and was succeeded in that year by Bishop DuVernet.

Kincolith was occupied in 1866; Alert Bay, 1878; Hazelton, 1880; Aiyansh, 1883; and Kitkatla, 1887.

SUMMARY OF PRESENT WORK

Metlakahtla and Kitkatla are on the coast; Hazelton and Giatwangak lie on the Skeena River; and Kincolith and Aiyansh are on the Naas River. Alert Bay, on Vancouver Island, is far south of the other stations. There are industrial schools for boys and girls at Alert Bay, and at Metlakahtla the Ridley Home for white and half-breed children who attend the government school.

The missionary staff consists, besides Bishop DuVernet, of 4 clergymen, 5 missionaries' wives, and 2 single women, besides 44 Indian Christian lay agents.

Boundary of the diocese of Caledonia

A QUESTION having arisen as to the boundary between the dioceses of Athabasca and Caledonia, it has been decided by the court of assessors of the general synod of the Church of Canada, to whom it was referred, that the diocesan boundary coincides with that which separates the civil province of British Columbia from the province of Alberta, and that the diocese of Caledonia includes some three and a half million acres of land on the eastern side of the Rocky Mountains.

Death of Mrs. A. J. Hall

The death of Mrs. A. J. Hall occurred at Tickenham, Somerset, on 28 March, 1916. She was married in 1879, and shared her husband's work at Alert Bay until his retirement in 1912.

The Committee have accepted the resignation of Miss H. Jackson.

Hazelton

An improvement took place in the Indians at Hazelton, but work among them is hindered by their admiration for the whites, whose conduct is not always such as beseems those who bear the name of Christ. At Kincolith, on the Naas River, a band of Indian Church Army evangelists visited all the encampments. Their ministry resulted in stemming the increasing use of intoxicating liquor, and in renewed interest in church services. The evangelists afterwards went to Port Simpson, where much evil exists in the large Indian encampment, owing to the proximity of the city of Prince Rupert. Archdeacon W. H. Collison, who has lately written an account of his experiences in the Mission during forty-two years,[1] says :—

Kincolith

A number of the young men had erected a large dance hall which was much more patronized than the church, and where not only dancing but other abuses had been introduced. Our evangelists laid siege to this citadel of sin by conducting open-air services near to it. For a few days there was no apparent result, but at length there was a movement among the dry bones and several of the frequenters of this den deserted their leaders and joined the evangelists. Excited and discouraged by these desertions, some of the dancers publicly prayed to the Evil One, calling upon Satan to exercise his power to prevent any others from falling away. But all to no purpose, for soon the leader who had been the chief actor in the building of the hall surrendered to the message of the Word, and with his conversion the whole community was broken up. It was agreed among them that the hall should be used for united services for all the denominations. Nor did the movement end here, for a number of the Port Simpson men crossed by special steamer to the Queen Charlotte Islands and conducted services among the Haidas there.

A "citadel of sin"

Archdeacon Collison spent some time at Fishery Bay, an Indian village twenty miles from the mouth of the Naas, where he presented sixty-four candidates from various stations to Bishop Du Vernet for confirmation, and baptized a young sub-chief. He devoted some time in the autumn to work connected with the Royal Commission on Indian Affairs for the Province of British Columbia, and succeeded in persuading the Indians to meet the commissioners and lay before them their complaints and wants. The Indian Department of the Dominion Government has now undertaken the education of the Indians on the Upper Naas, but the Church is allowed to give religious instruction to the children during school hours.[2]
